HOW WE IGNORE OUR OLD FOLKS

Honor Thy Pioneers . . . As Long as They Can Pay

By PETE LOUDON

The care and feeding of elderly persons in the capital region of Greater Victoria should be held up as an example to the rest of Canada.

A bad example.

At best it's a case of community indifference. At worst it's a scandal that's growing worse each day.

That's not a blanket condemnation of private hospitals and boarding homes in this area. Within the confines of the rules they work under, most of them claim to be doing the best they can.

Depending upon the financial resources of the patient, exceellent care is available, often from dedicated people. And the days of the "snake pit" homes for the elderly are largely in the past.

The scandal lies in the fact that large numbers of elderly patients can't afford the system we've created for their accommodation.

The nub of the problem is that medical science makes people live longer today. But society hasn't been able to cope with the problem of their care.

That's the studied opinion not only of the writer but of many social workers, hospital officials and a large and pathetically helpless group of the more than 2,000 residents of our homes and hospitals for the aged.

Don't Approach the Cost of Care

What kind of mess are we in?

We give our destitute aged a federal pension of $105 at a time when boarding home operators claim they can't give good care for less than $150.

And about 30 per cent of boarding home residents here are in this category. Result is that boarding homes don't want them. Operators, as a group, accept only about five out of 25 to 35 applications each month.

When these people, who have only their pensions, require private hospital care (when they are bed cases), we augment their pension, making $230 available to the private hospital operator.

But the operators say they can't give adequate care for less than $270. (Fifty-six per cent of their present patients are now on the welfare scale.) So they discourage new admissions from welfare—often refuse them.

As a result, at time of writing, there are 50 such cases in the acute general hospitals, Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's.

The province is paying $30 a day for their care. They are ready to go back to private hospitals where it costs only $9 for the simpler day care they now require. But no private hospital wants them.

None of us likes to think about getting old.

And that's one of the reasons society has closed its eyes to the problems facing destitute elderly persons in Greater Victoria.

As a result, although Victoria has a larger percentage of elderly residents than any other Canadian city, we rank much lower in the care we offer them.

A special Times series, by reporter Pete Loudon, denounces the current situation here as a black eye for the capital region.

Why are invalid oldsters unable to get adequate care in their final years? Where are the weaknesses in our system? Who is to blame?

The five-part series will examine these questions and others.

Six of 21 Found Care Available

In Victoria during one recent month the city welfare office had 21 applications for private hospital beds. But only six applicants were placed. Patients with money, however, can almost always find a bed.

The social worker in charge of placements for Victoria, Mrs. Muriel Leith, says:

"If you gave me a new 100-bed hospital for elderly welfare patients, I'd fill it in two days."

People who should be in private hospital beds are left in boarding homes where care is minimal. Or they take up beds in acute hospitals geared to treat the more seriously ill.

Waiting lists of people who should be in acute hospitals are already outrageously long.

People who should be in boarding homes—those who are not bed cases but who require to be fed and given medication and gentle assistance with their personal care, are left in their homes or in cheap hotel rooms.

Many of them wither away there despite the efforts of Victorian Order of Nurses or Red Cross Homemakers.

Some of the lucky ones end up on B.C. Hospital Insurance extended care units.

There are about 300 beds in non-profit hospitals for the elderly in the capital region, under BCHIS jurisdiction. Care costs the patient $1 per day.

BCHIS admits the need is for 600 beds. There's a four to

RENE LEVESQUE
. . . charges "fix"

Levesque Rebuffed By Grits

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's Liberal party Friday night virtually rejected separatism and chose to fight for a stronger status for Quebec within federalism.

The decision came in the form of a unanimous vote of confidence for Liberal Leader Jean Lesage at the opening of the annual meeting of the Quebec Liberal Federation.

Mr. Lesage made an opening address telling Liberals their choice at this meeting is between his form of federalism and Rene Levesque's form of separatism.

At the request of Eric Kierans, federation president, more than 600 delegates at the opening session conducted a formal vote of confidence endorsing Mr. Lesage's views.

The Liberal leader said he would resign from the party without delay if it accepts Mr. Levesque's proposal for a separate sovereign state of Quebec.

LEFT MEETING

Mr. Levesque, former minister of resources and welfare, walked away from the meeting on the verge of resignation. He charged that the meeting is "fixed" but did not elaborate.

Mr. Levesque accused Mr. Kierans of "crushing without discussion any point of view other than his own."

The strong anti-separatist atmosphere of the opening session established the impression of a steam-rolling drive to purge the party of separatists.

Mr. Lesage said he will personally defend a resolution by the federation's constitutional committee advocating particular status for Quebec and a new Canadian constitution.

The resolution rejects "separatism in all its forms."

Mr. Lesage said:

"If the option I am in favor of is not accepted and the other is then I will act according to the rules of democracy and resign without delay."

He said the choice is between separatism and federalism and "those who do not want to rally around the majority without reserve will have no choice but to leave the party."

Asked if he could rally around the federalism resolution "without reserve," Mr. Levesque said: "No."

Mr. Levesque immediately

Hong Kong Bombings Take Toll

Times News Services

HONG KONG — A mob of 30 Chinese today kidnapped a British police inspector following a border dispute here.

The attack climaxed a bomb-tossing spree by Communist terrorists overnight that killed two persons and wounded 33.

The police officer's name was not released.

Anti-British terrorists were reported busy planting bombs throughout the Hong Kong island and across the harbor channel.

They hurled two or three bombs into a crowd at the entrance of a Chinese fish and vegetable market in teeming Wanchai district on the island.

The wounded included four children, four men shoppers and two members of a police demolition team lured by a fake bomb call.

Two other rooftop bombing attacks injured eight more in Wanchai, at the entrance to a government clinic and in front of a post office.

Another bomb trap wounded a police inspector and a police constable on the main road between Kai Tak Airport and the posh tourist hotels in downtown Kowloon.

190 REPORTS RECEIVED

More than 190 reports of real and false bombs were received Friday.

A policeman was killed when Chinese terrorists hurled bombs at him as he investigated a dummy bomb, and an 18-year-old Chinese youth was fatally injured by a bomb thrown at police near him.

Authorities offered $17,500 in rewards for information leading to the arrest of the killers.

The deaths brought to 41 the number killed since May 11, when local Communists began inciting riots, labor strikes and terrorism in a campaign to weaken British authority over the colony on China's southern border.

Following a period of relative quiet, terrorists began planting bombs on a large scale Wednesday after police shot and killed a Chinese man in a crowd watching illegal Communist fireworks last Sunday, Communist China's national day. The colony has had an average of 50 bomb reports a day since then.

MINI-SKIRT proved just the thing for maxi-rain that swamped Vancouver Friday in a four-hour downpour. Robin Baxter wades through pedestrian underpass at entrance to Stanley Park on her way home. See story Page 36. (CP Wirephoto)

Ontario Man and Girl Charged in Bank Job

A 22-year-old unemployed painter from Ontario was charged in magistrate's court today with armed robbery.

Carl Raymond, suite 3, 2211 Ida, was arrested Friday about three hours after the Bank of Montreal at Fort and Richmond was robbed of $1,655.

A 16-year-old girl, arrested later in the afternoon, was charged with committing a juvenile delinquency—to wit, armed robbery, and appeared today in juvenile court. She was remanded to Monday.

Raymond was remanded to Thursday without plea or election until he can apply for legal aid.

When asked if he wanted to arrange bail, he told Magistrate Ostler "I have no one to put up bail."

GUN SEIZED

Police seized a sawed-off shotgun and a paper shopping bag containing the loot.

A box containing shells was located later.

Bank officials originally thought over $2,600 was missing, but a thorough check revealed $1,655, the same amount contained in the shopping bag, was the amount stolen.

Raymond came here with his wife from London, Ontario, two months ago. They drove out in a car which they later sold for junk.

HID UNDER HOUSE

Police arrested Raymond about 2 p.m. Friday in a basement crawl space of his apartment house.

The arrest came after a man had been chased to a nearby intersection by two bank employees and a customer.

A bystander reported seeing a man run into the apartment house.

NIXON UNHURT IN PLANE FIRE

CAMP BORDEN, Ont. (CP) —A small charter aircraft carrying Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and his wife caught fire just before safely landing today.

Pilot W. J. Clarke said the fire resulted from a broken left-hand propeller seal which caused a serious oil leak.

Fire engines raced onto the tarmac as the Beach-18, twin-engine plane touched down with smoke pouring from the motor.

Gunfire Exchanged Over River Jordan

TEL AVIV (Reuters)—Israeli and Jordanian forces exchanged fire for 45 minutes today, shelling each other's positions across the River Jordan about 15 miles south of the Sea of Galilee.

Both sides blamed the other for starting the shooting.

An Israeli Army spokesman said the fighting broke out when Jordanian forces opened fire from the east bank on Israeli troops near the Sheikh Husein Bridge.

Jordanian artillery joined in while Israeli tanks on the river's west bank fired at Jordanian positions, the spokesman said.

One Israeli soldier was wounded in the shelling, the spokesman said.

THE PILL NOW IS RETROACTIVE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — An American obstetrician said Friday a pill is being developed which will enable women to end pregnancy up to a month after conception.

Dr. R. T. Pion, associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Washington, said preliminary research already is under way in the Seattle area.

Subway Resumes Expo Service

MONTREAL (CP) — Subway service to Expo 67 was resumed today in the bitter 24-day Montreal transit strike, but no buses were rolling along city streets.

The three-mile subway line from downtown Montreal to the south shore of the St. Lawrence River via Expo's St. Helen's Island began carrying passengers at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

It was the first sign today of continuation of a possible break in the strike by workers who returned to their jobs Friday in defiance of union leaders.

About 35 buses started moving on downtown streets late Friday and the subway to Expo operated for a few hours, but most of the 6,000 striking Montreal Transportation Commission employees prolonged their refusal to obey court injunction ordering them back to work.

The buses, serviced and manned by strikers apparently abiding by the terms of the injunctions calling for a resumption of work for at least 80 days, were the first to roll in the city since the strike began Sept. 21.

Police and some angry strikers milled around various MTC depots early today, watching for any appearance of buses from garages.

There were a few early scuffles and three men were taken into a police paddy wagon. But generally, the scene was reported quiet.

BUSES PELTED

The surprise return of limited bus operation Friday sparked angry clashes between the returning drivers and strikers. Eggs and tomatoes were hurled at some buses, and strikers yelled "scab" at the drivers.

Union leaders late Friday called on strikers to picket all MTC garages and depots in the city today.

APPEAL ARMY GEARS UP FOR RESIDENTIAL BLITZ

By TED GASKELL

A slightly under-strength army of canvassers moves into the residential districts Monday as the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal starts its household canvass.

Its objective is $154,200, the householders' share of the $600,000 target set this year by United Appeal to service its 24 agencies.

Mrs. Shirley Baker, chairman of the residential division, said there will be about 1,900 canvassers in the field throughout the Greater Victoria area but 2,000 are needed immediately. She expects more will be required before the campaign ends.

RED CROSS HELP

Victoria's Red Cross chapter, now a partner in the United Appeal, is lending its organizational knowledge and experience to the canvass and many Red Cross canvassers are on the team.

Greater Victoria has an objective of $92,000; Central Saanich, $5,200, and Sidney-North Saanich, $9,000. Completing the $164,000 total is $58,000, the advanced gifts division share which has more than $40,000 pledged, but not received.

Mrs. Baker said that the need for canvassers in the Langford area is great. Another problem is the high-rise apartments but it is hoped that people living in apartments where canvassing is not permitted will send in their donations.

On Wednesday 120 University of Victoria students will conduct a one-night blitz in that area to raise funds for the appeal.

BUSINESS CANVASS

G. F. Auchinleck, campaign chairman, said "the business canvass is starting to bring in funds but it is obvious that we have an uphill fight on our hands.

"The residential canvass is more important than ever. We must get every dollar we can if we are to reach the target and we hope, with the Red Cross as a partner, we can do it."

The residential campaign officially opens at midnight Sunday following a canvassers' rally and film showing at the Odeon at 8:30.

DECIDES IT'S NOT PARADISE

The Premier Toddled Off to Sweden . . .

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

The few minutes' work for two government employees who changed the "Premier's Office" sign to "Prime Minister" on Mr. Bennett's front office door Friday is about all the impact that his close look at the Swedish system will have on our labor scene.

But it may well have a big impact on our political scene.

He displayed a negative reaction to their system of labor - management relations and emphasized to reporters, "I wasn't particularly impressed."

But the opposition undoubtedly will be impressed and can be expected to show a positively gleeful reaction to the new title.

Prime Minister Bennett . . . W. A. C. Bennett Dam . . . Russel J. Bennett (his eldest son) a Bank of B.C. director . . . a "football cabinet" (always in motion on trips across the continent and the world) . . .

I can hear the opposition MLAs tick off the growing list as if they were describing the last days of Pompeii—and it certainly is beginning to look as though the premier intends to go with a blaze of glory.

But meanwhile, the premier has delivered himself of his impressions of Sweden and how much stock you can put in all the praise that the NDP has showered on it.

"While it's a wonderful country and a fine people, they haven't got the best of all worlds because their prices are higher than in British Columbia, their taxes are higher than British Columbia and their wages are lower than British Columbia," he said.

However, his view may very well be disputed at some length in the next session by vocal NDP MLA Tom Berger who currently is making his own visit to Sweden to find more ammunition for the next session.

Wage Guidelines

Mr. Bennett said he found the system of government-management-union committees setting price and wage guidelines interesting but not useful "because I always look at the end results" and they aren't as good as things are now in the province."

Mr. Bennett noted prices were as high as $1.50 for a dozen eggs, $1.16 a pound of butter and $1.25 for a small packet of cigarettes.

Gasoline prices are very much higher and Mr. Bennett was particularly indignant that "licences and taxes cost you as much as $200 to get a car on the road" but suddenly switched the subject when asked how much sales tax in B.C. adds to a car purchase.

As an example of the dead hand of bureaucracy, he pointed to the Swedish tourist industry which he said is far less vigorous than ours although their countryside is beautiful.

"There's so much control there that after seven o'clock at night you can't get service in your hotel or even a cup of tea in your room," he complained.

While he was in the countries, Sweden changed its traffic system and Britain's new law for compulsory breathalyzer tests for motorists suspected of drinking, and both events convinced him that speeding and liquor were about equal causes of traffic accidents.

Speed Limits

The Swedes, while switching from driving on the left to our system, also introduced speed limits for the first time and accidents were cut by 50 per cent, Mr. Bennett said.

For a man who loves fast trips, the observation must have been sobering for Mr. Bennett—and it certainly won't be good news to Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi who has always found quiet support from the premier in the past for his penchant of raising speed limits.

Mr. Bennett showed quick sensitivity to recent press criticism of the frequency of overseas trips taken by him and his cabinet ministers.

He said the press obviously hadn't read "the good book" and its injunction to "seek and ye shall find" which had paid off for B.C. by new industries following cabinet ministers to this province after their trips abroad.

Labor Scene

"What? Sit in the premier's office and not go out to tell B.C.'s story and get more jobs for our people?" he demanded.

"It would be almost like committing treason!"

Well, if the trip in the service of his province didn't reveal a Swedish model for our laws, what can we expect on the labor scene?

Don't look now, but the answer may be peculiarly Canadian—a royal commission.

Rumors have been growing in the past few days that Mr. Justice Nemetz's report on his special mission to observe the Swedisl system has not produced any neat and easy answers.

So the government is considering appointing him or some other person to conduct a royal commission into the feasibility of some sort of "labor court" system which would arbitrate deadlocked disputes.

(That is a proposal long advocated by Victoria lawyer E. E. Pearlman, by the way.)

The stories going the rounds are that Labor Minister Leslie Peterson has been sounding out a number of people about the idea and has even approached a Burnaby lawyer to help with an inquiry.

Mr. Peterson has been travelling so much lately that he can't be pinned down to confirm or deny the stories.

What a Difference a Trip Makes

. . . The Prime Minister Came Striding Home

By JOHN MIKA

It's Prime Minister Bennett and don't you forget it.

That was the word from the Hon. W. A. C. Bennett Friday in two statements to the Press Gallery and a new sign on his front office door.

He said he was revising his title for the province's glory not his own.

But the gesture should cost him $2,500 if proper protocol is observed.

Hours after he returned to his office Friday from his annual overseas trip, workmen took down the "Premier's Office" sign that has been on the front door for years.

QUICK CHANGE

In its place went a plaque saying "Prime Minister" and a few inches below it, another saying "Minister of Finance."

A short time later, Mr. Bennett informed the Press Gallery that he was to be addressed as Prime Minister henceforth and later he confirmed it in another statement to the Press Gallery.

There was no indication the cabinet had discussed the change or approved it with an order-in-council.

The B.C. statutes don't provide for such a title nor for paying anyone who claims it.

The Constitution Act, which outlines the composition of the cabinet in Section 9 (a) and limits it to 17 members has this to say in sub-section (b):

"The salary of each official (cabinet minister) shall be $17,500 per annum. The official occupying the position of premier shall be paid a salary of $20,000 per annum but shall not receive any further salary as head of any department."

There is no provision anywhere for paying a "prime minister."

So it would appear that Mr. Bennett's decree eschewing the designation of "premier" wipes out the specific entitlement to a $20,000 salary and returns him to the $17,500 status as minister of finance.

Here's what Mr. Bennett personally telephoned to the Press Gallery the first time:

"It was decided at the provincial-federal conference two years ago that the terms premier and prime minister were synonymous. The terms have exactly the same meaning.

"Therefore premiers of provinces could use either title.

"At the recent McGill convocation in Montreal (where Canada's provincial premiers were given honorary degrees as a centennial project), the premier of Ontario was called prime minister.

"And, in English, the premier of Quebec also is known as prime minister.

"In view of my feeling that B.C. is one of Canada's greatest provinces (we) should not play second fiddle to Ontario and Quebec and therefore the premier will now be known as prime minister."

ONCE BEFORE

Mr. Bennett said T. D. (Duff) Pattullo, who headed a Liberal administration from 1933 to 1941, called himself prime minister but when John Hart succeeded him he changed the office sign back to premier.

Mr. Bennett invited the press to photograph the new plaque.

Later, he told the gallery, he wanted to "clarify it a little further.

"It's very confusing in many ways because all the correspondence I have from people who represent Her Majesty is always addressed 'Mr. Prime Minister'. It always has been and it still is.

"But in certain places it is not used and in others it is.

"At the ceremony in Montreal, the chancellor of McGill said, in reference to some, Mr. Prime Minister and Mr. Premier to others—and that suggests something different.

"It happens all the time at federal provincial conferences and there's always a bit of discussion about it.

"So rather than have two different forms, I want to make it one.

"B.C. is Canada's No. 1 province and should have the same.

"It's not that I feel that way myself.

"I'm only thinking about the people of British Columbia as their premier . . . I mean as prime minister."

. . . OLD FOLKS

six-month waiting period. So far the beds are reserved for patients who can do nothing for themselves.

One anonymous social worker maintains, "You have to be almost a vegetable to qualify."

There's another category of care that no one talks about, because it's an embarrassment to the community.

These are the private residences which offer a "bootleg" boarding home service. Operators ignore the bylaws that limit private residences to one paying guest, without a licence.

They take in the elderly in exchange for their $105 pension cheques and tailor the service and food to fit the bill—after profits. They are uninspected. They often don't have the fire and sanitation protections demanded of licensed institutions.

No one knows how many there are and what percentage are giving kind-hearted care—and what percentage are taking advantage of elderly guests.

When pressed, many social workers will admit that even among the licensed boarding homes many low-grade accommodations are permitted under licence.

"Where would we put the people if we closed them down?" they say.

The case is stated gently here. A number of people will complain because various individual cruelties are not exposed.

But this is a broad view aimed at a broad classification of mismanagement.

Who do we blame for the mess?

Victoria's doughty fighter for improved care for the elderly, Ald. Mrs. Lily Wilson, says the rate problem and the lack of beds is a provincial responsibility.

But the province says it has set up machinery whereby it will help the community solve all these problems, if the community takes the initiative.

In the final analysis, however, the province is us and the municipality is us.

Only when the public recognizes a problem does it push its elected representatives at all levels, into corrective action.

And it often appears that the average citizen can't be bothered to raise his voice in anger—until his family is directly involved.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Rain ended in the province overnight as the associated weather system moved rapidly eastward. Partial clearing also occurred over most areas. A well-established ridge of high pressure has built along the coast and will give further clearing today to most areas. Another Pacific disturbance will spread cloud into the south coast region late Sunday. Temperatures will be a little warmer today and Sunday.

Time to Protect Your Bill of Rights!

The continued use of injunctions in British Columbia's labour disputes is a cynical and destructive abuse of the Bill of Rights, and an affront to the spirit of harmonious labour relations.

Last year, 17 Trade Unionists were jailed because injunctions were misused.

The time has come to make a stand. Your very future depends on it. We cannot any longer allow labour-management relationships to be poisoned by the threat of ex-parte injunctions. Only in British Columbia is this manipulation of the law tolerated; all it takes to correct it is an amendment of the Trade Unions Act. We want that amendment now, before any more innocent citizens are jailed.

You will shortly be asked to sign our petition demanding an amendment of the Trade Unions Act, to prevent the misuse of injunctions in labour disputes. We ask you to sign it. We ask you to bring British Columbia's labour laws into line with those of every other civilized country in the world. We ask you to act NOW to end an injustice, and to give labour its full measure of civil rights.

MARTIN

MUST DEAL SEPARATELY WITH EACH SITUATION

TORONTO (CP)—External Affairs Minister Martin Friday renewed his call for a stop to U.S. bombings in North Vietnam.

Earlier, Dean Rusk, U.S. secretary of state, said he would like to hear any foreign response as to what governments would do if the U.S. stopped bombing in Vietnam with no results from Hanoi.

Mr. Martin, on a campaign tour for the Ontario Liberal party, said Canada has to deal with each situation as it arises.

"I said I was making this proposal because I believed it was the only possible solution. I still believe that is the case.

"If the North should not respond, then of course that is a situation that would have to be examined. I don't think anyone should be expected to deal with situations that are not fully before us."

SADDENED by those who give "divided counsel" to the fighting forces in Vietnam, former president Dwight D. Eisenhower Friday celebrated his 77th birthday with a call for the people to be "moderate in tone and emphasis." He said no one can be "all seeing or can afford to be dictatorial."

Forsake All Others? Never! Quoth He

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—Magistrate Jeanette Johnson was about to perform the marriage ceremony when the would-be groom took a deep breath and rushed from her courthouse office.

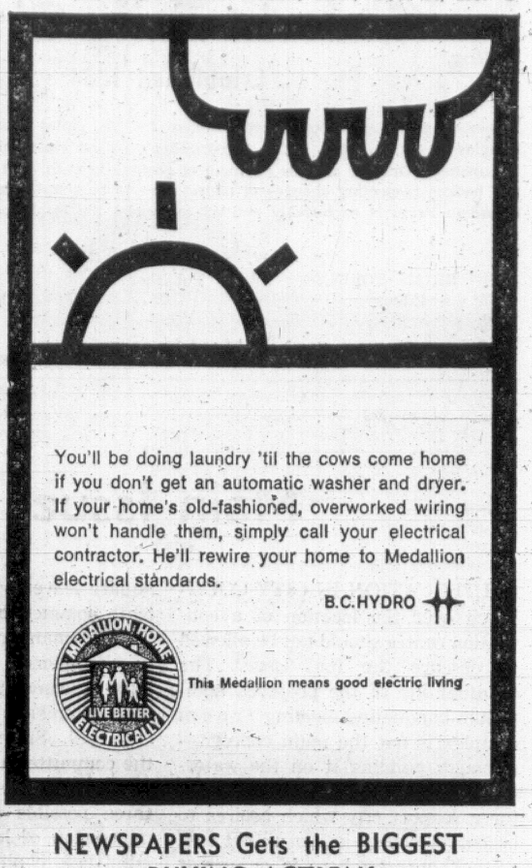

But not for long.

His would-be bride ran after him, and the couple returned in a few minutes. The young girl was beaming and the boy was red-faced and nervous.

Magistrate Johnson started the ceremony again and all was fine until she reached the words "and forsaking all others and keep ye only unto her so long as ye both shall live?"

Suddenly, the boy shouted: "I won't."

He bolted out of the office and this time the bride didn't chase him.

REPORTS 'INACCURATE'

U.S. Planes Hitting 'Civilian Targets'

This dispatch was filed by an Australian correspondent who reports for Communist newspapers from Communist countries from which most non-Communist correspondents are barred.

By WILFRED BURCHETT

HAIPHONG (AP)—The U.S. communique reporting direct hits by American planes Thursday on shipyards and a big military barracks in Haiphong was inaccurate.

The first and main raid in the small hours of the morning in fact demolished a large hospital convalescent complex, unoccupied except by two caretakers and the four-year-old daughter of one of them.

All three were killed in their beds. At least 20 bombs—500 and 1,000-pounders—landed square on the complex, which was almost a total wreck.

In other early-morning raids, bombs fell in the Lach Tray River, about three miles southwest of the city and surrounding ricefields, wounding a 37-year-old peasant woman and a 14-year-old girl. I visited both bombing sites a few hours after the attacks.

FERRY STATION HIT

A third raid at mid-day was against a ferry station more than a mile from the ship repair yards. The ferry station had been heavily attacked some weeks earlier.

The U.S. command in Saigon reported heavy damage Thursday to two Haiphong shipyards, one on the Lach Tray River and the other on the Cua Cam River, as well as to a big military base just south of the city where Russian missiles and helicopters are assembled.

In talks with Haiphong Mayor Le Duc Thinh and other city officials, it was claimed that one-third of the city's residential areas had been destroyed, mainly in heavy raids which started Sept. 1 and were intensified in recent days.

They claimed that in nine attacks Oct. 3-7, Haiphong had been hit with 620 500- and 1,000-pound bombs; 45 CBU "mother" bombs, each average 300 tennis ball-sized fragmentation bombs; 527 rockets and 32 missiles.

In the following three days, they said, night attacks were made with a total of 124 high-explosive bombs and numerous missiles and rockets.

In a tour of the city, heavy destruction was obvious in residential areas, especially in the most densely populated Hong Bang ward, one of three city wards.

CIVILIANS EVACUATED

Heavy civilian casualties have been avoided only by a large-scale evacuation of the city and by having virtually all remaining residents living only in ground floor rooms adjacent to individual concrete air raid shelters.

A feature of the raids since early September has been the dropping of a high proportion of delayed action bombs, which hamper rescue work and are aimed at paralysing movement in the city.

There are three main types—with vibration fuses to explode on roads at the passage of trucks or in fields at the passage of a tractor, with magnetic fuses to explode in rivers when a vessel comes near, and with timers.

The targets for these bombs, besides communications networks, are dikes, ferry stations and small industrial plants.

The delayed action device has been introduced on the murderous CBU cluster bombs, dozens of which are scattered along two of Haiphong's main streets and on the street around the Can Niem tuberculosis hospital.

30 Million U.S. Poor

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Thirty million Americans live in poverty, compared with 39,000,000 in 1959, says Undersecretary Wilbur J. Cohen of the department of health, education and welfare. Cohen predicted the number at the poverty level could drop to 25,000,000 by 1968. The government's yardstick for those living in poverty is an income of $3,000 a year or less.

Main Issue

ALTERCATION IN CITY COUNcil over the location of a convention centre should not be allowed to obscure the real issue. The eventual site of the proposed auditorium-banqueting-meeting room complex is not the main concern—although building it on the waterfront appears to be a logical choice for a seaport city which aspires to become a widely known resort centre. The ocean here is our great asset and an obvious component of any visitor centre which is to be publicized all over the continent.

But this matter, important as it is, is still a side issue compared with the much greater prospect of a wholesale redevelopment of the waterfront from the Causeway to Johnson Street and of the 16 city blocks adjacent to the area. That sweeping suggestion has been approved by both the provincial and federal governments as a suitable subject for study with a view to consideration for an urban renewal program. While this lengthy and exhaustive survey is under way, it would be foolish to decide on an alternative location for the convention centre.

Let us obtain all the possible facts—not only regarding the likelihood of federal financial aid, but also the physical and other advantages that could be derived from a full development of the area. The program would probably include a nucleus of government-sponsored improvement which would stimulate private development much as the Bastion Square and Centennial Square leavening resulted in immediate commercial follow-ups.

Alderman Frampton has strongly championed a private plan to build a convention centre as part of a commercial complex near the city Hall. Since he is chairman of the committee appointed to conduct an impartial fact-gathering study of three possible sites, he gives the impression of having made up his mind before all the information is in.

* * *

In any case, the private interests sponsoring the Douglas-Pandora-Blanshard project will in all probability develop their valuable property holding regardless of the absence of a convention centre. Such was their original proposal. And Mr. Frampton's point that a year or two would be saved in obtaining a convention centre is not a compelling one in view of the importance of the facility and the long period of use for which it will be destined.

But the major issue for the people of Victoria is the overall waterfront proposal. Fully developed, it is difficult to over-estimate the impact the project would have on the city. It could virtually create a new downtown district of great attractiveness and value, and do much not only to restore the deterioration of many years of neglect but launch out on a rejuvenated picture of Victoria which would be to the lasting benefit of our tourist industry no less than to our environment as a preferred place in which to live.

Ridiculous

In reference to the article of October 4, 1967, headed "Bring back the Bobbies, Smarten up Liquor Clerks." I do not agree with Mr. Willam Pattison.

The reinstatement of the bobbie uniforms is completely ridiculous and impractical. I feel that our law-enforcers are hard-tasked citizens, doing their job and not advertising gimmicks to promote business.

To reserve lakes or bodies of water for the fly-fishing tourist is completely out of place.

The suggestion to "smarten up liquor clerks" is, without a doubt, a gross injustice to the Liquor Control Board employees. — J. H. Collins, 1071 Gosper Crescent.

Far too much groundless, nauseating propaganda is being published on the subject.—J. P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer.

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

An Unorthodox Budget Approach by Mr. Hamilton

THE most unorthodox contribution to the budget debate was probably the speech of Mr. Alvin Hamilton on Tuesday. Its significance is not clear because at no point did the former minister indicate that he was enunciating Conservative policy. Mr. Hamilton began, reasonably enough, by observing that the Keynesian doctrines, said to have inspired governments since the war, were in fact worked out with the experience of the United Kingdom particularly in mind. They are not necessarily well designed for our purposes because Canadian conditions differ in important respects from those of Britain.

Western

To illustrate this point, Mr. Hamilton noted that Britian is an essentially homogeneous country, a country very sophisticated in its industry, an importer of raw material and exporter of finished goods, and a country which, over most of its economic history, has had a surplus in external account and has been able, in consequence, to export capital. None of these observations apply to Canada, at least to the same degree. It might be added that Britain is also a unitary-kingdom which makes a great difference in so far as fiscal policy is concerned.

This criticism assumes, however, that Canadian governments have in fact followed Lord Keynes. This is strange because no finance minister in a mixed decade, which has included the most prosperous years in our history, has ever reported a budget surplus. The utmost now considered tolerable is a balance on a national accounts basis. If there is a choice, it is between a large deficit and a small one. What surely has been added to Keynes is a belief in the virtue of marginal inflation (say two to three per cent a year) as a generator of economic progress.

Mr. Hamilton then addressed himself to the problem of regionalism. There is not likely to be much quarrel with his diagnosis; the trouble is with the proposed remedy. As he complained, there may be heavy inflationary pressure in particular areas, principally the great industrial cities, while in others there is a surplus of manpower or productive capacity. (It does not follow, however, that the effects of inflation are limited to these cities because a great many prices are set on a national basis, with variations for transport costs.)

Selective Policy

The remedy, according to Mr. Hamilton, is selectivity in the application of monetary and fiscal policy; selectivity by regions and by industries. Evidently this would be achieved by making the loan policy of the chartered banks conform to the government's reading of the economic temperature in each of the various regions.

This seems very dangerous in theory and quite unworkable in practice. Fiscal policy is obviously subject to regional political pressures now. Why expose monetary policy to the same pressures? In any case, money is not like water (except in the way it is spent by governments); it flows uphill to the highest interest rates. This is why Canada as an importer of capital must maintain rates higher than those prevailing in the United States.

Any attempt to hold down rates in underdeveloped areas (except, as happens now, by subsidizing various groups) would surely have the effect of channelling even more investment into the cities feeling the inflationary pressure. Mr. Hamilton said: "All I know is that nothing of this kind is being done at the present time and there is no harm in trying." The probability is that a good deal of harm would be done and this, presumably, is why nothing along these lines is currently being attempted.

For if it were otherwise the present government—with heavy support from the very areas which are feeling the inflationary pinch — would have the strongest reasons of self-preservation for experimenting along the lines suggested.

In another reference to Keynesian policies, Mr. Hamilton indicated a difficulty which is undoubtedly real. This is the time lag between the action (a change in bank rate, for example) and the impact. It also makes for difficulty in budgeting since a minister may propose remedies for an inflationary situation when in fact a correction has already set in.

Power to Move

To meet this situation Mr. Hamilton would go very far as the following extracts will show:

"I suggest that the time has now come and that in the next budget the House should be asked by the minister of finance, if he is a responsible minister, to give him the power to move, with timing suited to the need, so as to check the economy by, if necessary, slowing it down in any particular sector."

Government action should not be made retroactive. "I suggest ... that in future power be given the minister in our budget legislation to make moves either backwards or forwards in the same fiscal year; and further that, if Parliament is equally responsible, it should grant the minister these powers."

Mr. Hamilton added that: "We know enough now about controlling the economy through the actions of governments that we can trust to the ability of those who are guiding the minister to use the appropriate measures quickly and effectively — if they can be stopped and started — and particularly if industry knows in advance what the measures might be."

Economic Grounds

There is certainly a case for this on economic grounds. But Parliament has always been extremely jealous of delegating such powers to ministers and it is much to be doubted that some of the more prominent Conservative watch-dogs would accept anything of this character without a struggle. They have not in the past been anxious to confide anything like such trust in those who guide ministers. After all, Mr. Benson presumably had the benefit of such guidance when he uncovered the piggy banks that ended a debate on interim supply. This in no way appeased the Conservative critics who were outraged, and not without reason.

It will be interesting to see how much of the speech was policy and how much Mr. Hamilton. In at least one respect, as Mr. Benson afterwards showed, the former minister was wrong. Mr. Hamilton assumed that the government is "heavily pruning costs." As the president of the treasury board emphasized, the existing budget is "quite appropriate for the existing fiscal year" and the paring is for 1968-69.

Mr. Rusk Speaks Out

UNITED STATES SECRETARY of State Dean Rusk emerged in a role this week akin to that of his late predecessor, Secretary John Foster Dulles, with a call to the American people to join in an Armageddon against the hostile forces of communism (Chinese rather than Russian, this time) which threaten "catastrophe for all mankind."

Under questioning, Mr. Rusk refused to label his policy "containment" of China and he declared that the United States was not nominating itself as "the policeman for all Asia". But the views he expressed made it clear that this would be the net result of his policies. Mr. Rusk apparently believes fervently that communism is evil and expansionist and that the United States must lead the forces of good to check its aggressive intentions.

The Secretary at his press conference raised the spectre of the world facing, a few years hence, "a billion Chinese ... armed with nuclear weapons, with no certainty about what their attitude toward the rest of Asia will be". America's real purpose in Asia was perhaps revealed when Mr. Rusk said, "We are not picking out Peking as some sort of special enemy. Peking has nominated itself by proclaiming a militant doctrine of world revolution and doing something about it."

Mr. Rusk's performance can be seen as a major attempt to rally the nation to the administration's Vietnam and Asian policy in the face of the rising tide of dissent.

Perhaps most significant of all, Mr. Rusk made it plain that so long as President Johnson accepts his advice any attempts to negotiate an end to the Vietnam war short of virtual surrender by Hanoi will not be acceptable to the United States.

The Secretary's blunt statement of his credo presents would-be peace-makers with a seemingly hopeless task and the world with a dismal prospect. So long as the President heeds Mr. Rusk there is little hope of ending the Vietnam war by compromise. Indeed, a further escalation of the conflict would seem to be inevitable and, with Peking and the "billion Chinese armed with nuclear weapons" as the frankly revealed enemy, the "catastrophe for all mankind" which Mr. Rusk purports to be checking could instead be moving closer.

An Ex-Newspaperboy's Tribute

A CLEAR ASSESSMENT OF their work and a tribute to the manner in which they carry it out has been given this year by a former newspaperboy to his present-day successors in that vocation. Marking National Newspaperboy Day, which is observed today, he says: "The work of newspaper carriers is an essential link in the complicated process of keeping Canadians informed. Because your job is normally carried on so efficiently and quietly, whether before dawn or after dark, many of us whose homes you serve sometimes forget how important a role you play in our daily lives.

"But few schoolday vocations offer such a combination of training, experience and discipline. Your rewards include valuable experience in operating your own business; self-confidence achieved by meeting and dealing with people; the dependability and responsibility that newspaper carriers automatically acquire."

This is a viewpoint shared largely by others in the newspaper field, a tribute in which they join. It comes from a man who speaks with authority for Cahadians and with experience in the job for which boys are honored today. His name is Lester Bowles Pearson.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Overplaying the Self-Appointed Role of Underdog

ONE of mankind's more attractive characteristics — instinctive sympathy for an underdog — has been getting in the way of diplomacy of late and, on occasion, thoroughly bedeviling world affaris. Beneficiaries of such sympathy have ranged from the North Vietnamese, who are dodging American bombs, to the West Germans and Indians, who are dodging exclusion from the "nuclear club"; and from Ibo tribesmen of breakaway Biafra, who face slaughter from the Nigerian army, to the Boston Red Sox, who know just how the Biafrans must feel.

Frye

The trouble with sympathy for an underdog, however, is that the candidate is not always wisely chosen.

North Vietnam is scarcely an authentic claimant. Hanoi is much more like the child who came weeping to his mother with the whimpered complaint, "Johnny hit me back."

In point of fact, the United States has offered to halt the bombing of North Vietnam in return for nothing more than a promise of peace negotiations — and Hanoi won't be pinned down, even on that. (President Johnson "assumes" the enemy would not take military advantage of the halt.)

For more than 25 countries in the United Nations to call for a cessation of the bombing in these circumstances is one of the more remarkable perversions of the underdog cult.

At Geneva, in 17-nation disarmament talks, countries not members of the "nuclear club" have long sought to claim they would be "discriminated against" if they were not allowed to build or buy the A-bomb.

"Equality of sacrifice!" they say — meaning that present "club" members must simultaneously give up their bombs.

Since total nuclear disarmament by the Big Five is not going to happen, and could not be effectively policed if it did — facilities for hiding nuclear weapons being what they are — this is simply a dodge, a bid to escape responsibility for sabotaging the nuclear non-proliferation treaty which is under negotiation.

Small powers have been getting away with this act for quite a while but time is running out. Both the United States and the Soviet Union voiced exasperation this past week.

The truth is that Washington and Moscow are agreed on all essentials of one of the world's most significant arms-control measures — even on inspection provisions, which are embodied in an as-yet-unpublished article of the draft treaty.

They have not said so publicly, because that would constitute an appeal to world opinion over the heads of the small powers — and the Big Two have hoped to win their voluntary co-operation. But Washington and Moscow are not likely to remain silent much longer.

When world opinion fully realizes what is happening, and finds out that a major agreement is being hung up by small countries whose real wish is to retain freedom to risk world security, the underdog pose will collapse of its own presumption.

Some of the world's aspirant underdogs have yet to win recognition in the role. Jordan's King Hussein has turned to both the Soviet Union and the United States seeking sympathetic treatment, but neither Moscow nor Washington has seemed eager to leap to his aid.

Israel, for her part, continues to benefit from an authentic prewar underdog role — long after even her own most enthusiastic supporters have ceased to claim she qualifies for the part.

White Rhodesians have tried hard to portray themselves as a lonely band of virtuous freedom-fighters, besieged by a misguided or vindictive world community. Few people have ever been so egregiously miscast, the genuine underdogs in Rhodesia being the 4,000,000 blacks who have been caught in the cogs of a police-state regime.

But Prime Minister Ian Smith has been able to win enough sympathy, here and there — especially in Europe — to provide a moral shield behind which evasion of UN sanctions has been taking place.

The effect is a serious setback to world order. It is a real jolt that economic sanctions — virtually the only significant weapon yet developed for the UN armory — should be thus discredited in so many eyes. This, of course, is precisely what some of the sanctions-busters, notably the South Africans, who might themselves one day be in the gun sights, have in mind.

The common denominator in Viet Nam, at Geneva, in the Middle East and in Rhodesia is that sympathy for an underdog is fine — provided the beneficiary is not an imposter who has chosen himself for the role.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

Those who go out to John Dean Park, Mt. Newton, and wander along the old trails, will find many things of interest.

On the way up the road, the shrubs and trees have almost hidden the stone pillars that were put up in 1938 when the road was built.

Ramble around the area where the old cabin once stood. Here you can find traces of plants that were introduced. There are fine holly trees growing by the edge of the bush. Some of them are over 20 feet tall. Here there is English ivy now growing among the rocks and over the old stumps.

There are a few apple tree seedlings, which have no doubt spread out from the old tree that bore fruit but has been cut down.

It seems a pity that the old log house has been torn down, for it was one of the landmarks of the mountain and all the material was hauled up over the rugged trail by horses.

The boxed-in spring at the foot of the draw is still running and clean fresh water bubbles up from the earth.

If one looks hard enough he can find traces of the old trail that led down to Mt. Newton Cross Road. From the ridge you can look down and see the old Church of St. Stephen.

Take the trail going north from the old site and you will come to the picnic area. The very old Douglas fir there was called His Majesty by the late Mr. Dean.

Along the trail there are very many dogwood trees growing, perhaps one of the heaviest concentrations of this beautiful tree anywhere on the peninsula. I have found blossoms eight inches across among them. Growing with them you can find thimbleberry with canes six to eight feet tall.

See the high straight cliff there and note how huge blocks of rocks have broken away under the action of frost and rain.

John Dean Park is one of the real beauty spots in our area.

Vigorous New Debate Ahead On Economic Nationalism

By PETER C. NEWMAN

OTTAWA—In the long jostling of history, Canadians have never been able to settle a nagging question: Whether this northern sub-continent can retain its political sovereignty while espousing only indistinct and not always compatible brands of nationalism.

While attention this weekend is focused on the meeting of provincial Liberals in Quebec City, where one set of French Canada's nationalistic aspirations will be painfully negotiated, nationalism in English Canada—a dormant force since the humbling of Walter Gordon—is re-awakening too. The coincidence of the two forces surfacing simultaneously could become historically significant.

Unlike Quebec nationalism, which has basically cultural and social roots, English Canada's nationalistic urges — such as they are —will be tested in the less emotional field of economics.

Newman

The special task force set up by the Pearson government a year ago to probe into the problems created for the Canadian economy by the influx of foreign—particularly American—investment funds has now made its preliminary recommendations approved both by the cabinet committee assigned to assess its findings (besides Walter Gordon, it consists of Mitchell Sharp, Jean Marchand, John Turner and Roger Teillet) as well as a supporting committee of senior civil servants.

Tough New Era

The new approaches being suggested by the Pearson government's task force have yet to win approval of the full cabinet, and then undergo the long process of being turned into legislation. But senior Liberal politicians who have read the drafts of the cabinet document are predicting that it may become the basis both for a tough new era in American-Canadian relations, and a major plank in the Liberal government's next election platform.

They are strengthened in this belief because they see economic nationalism as the kind of issue which might give this country a post-centennial set of objectives on which both French and English politicians could agree.

Specific recommendations of the task force's working paper remain secret, but it is believed to make at least two important points.

It accepts in strong terms Walter Gordon's long-held conviction that the gush of American investment funds cascading into this country since 1947 has had detrimental effects on the Canadian economy. At the same time, it rejects Gordon's methods of dealing with this problem through punitive and retroactive regulations.

The document argues the issue in a new context, adapted in part from John Kenneth Galbraith's tradition-shattering book, "The New Industrial State."

Galbraith claims that means of production are now so sophisticated they're based on "technological compulsions . . . not ideological or political will." He argues that planning and the sharing of technology have superseded the free forces of the market in every crucial area of economic existence.

According to the Galbraithian view of life, ownership of capital has become far less important than control over imported technology exercised by any host country.

One Not Other?

One of the main objectives of the Pearson government's task force has been to disassociate imported technology from direct foreign investment. Can Canada, in other words, obtain one without the other?

One suggestion for accomplishing this involves methods by which American corporations would be granted incentives to rent their patents and processes to Canadian companies, rather than setting up subsidiaries of their own.

Six other specific proposals are understood to form the nucleus of the task force's approach:

1. A well documented attack on extra-territorial application of American laws in Canada, such as the Trading with the Enemy Act and some specific clauses in U.S. anti-trust laws which have the effect of giving U.S. firms operating here incentives not to sell minority interests to Canadian shareholders.

2. A sophisticated defence of the values and purposes of a Canadian Development Corporation, charged with providing entrepreneurial funds to domestic investors not otherwise available.

3. A tough and unanswerable case for compelling disclosure of financial operating details by the Canadian subsidiaries of American corporations and unions.

4. A strongly-phrased proposal for listing by American parent corporations of minority shares in their Canadian subsidiaries on local stock exchanges. This might require foreign companies to divest themselves of approximately 25 per cent of their equity holdings here.

(Walter Gordon's previous contention that one-quarter of these firms' directors should be Canadian citizens has been rejected, as has been his impractical notion that 25 per cent of their stocks should be held by Canadian investors.)

J. K. GALBRAITH
. . . strong influence

The new theory is that listing of the stocks would serve the purpose of forcing the disclosure of the American corporate giants' basic financial details and destroy the monolithic nature of their control over some of the industrial sectors in which they operate.

5. A rejection of tariffs as an important factor stimulating Canadian industry. The task force agrees with previous studies that tariffs are forcing Canadian per-capita income at least one-third lower than their American equivalents.

6. A set of far-reaching resolutions aimed at a basic re-orientation of Canada's anti-combines legislation, designed mainly to compel competitive behavior among the U.S. industrial oligopolies operating here.

This would include imaginative uses of fiscal policy to maximize the Canadian share of taxes paid by international firms with major Canadian outlets, as well as reform of patent legislation to encourage the inflow of outside technology without accompanying foreign ownership.

One of the most significant side-effects of the task force's efforts has been the emergence within the Canadian academic community of a hard nucleus of nationalistically-minded young economists. They are determined to challenge the opposing orthodoxy long preached by Harry Johnson, the University of Chicago and London School of Economics professor, whose thoughts on the subject have dominated Canadian campus debate for a decade.

Completing Paper

The task force's cabinet paper is now being completed by Prof. Melville Watkins of the University of Toronto's economics department. His collaborators include A. E. Safarian and Abraham Rotstein, also from the U of T; Bernard Bonin of Montreal; W. J. Woodfine of St. Francis Xavier; Gideon Rosenbluth of the University of British Columbia; Stephen Hymer of Yale (formerly of McGill) and Claude Masson of Harvard (formerly of Laval).

At this point, it remains uncertain how much of the task force's specific recommendations will filter through to the legislative stage. But enough concrete measures will probably survive to launch a great new cross-country debate on the merits and consequences of nationalism in both French and English Canada.

A Brilliant End Likely For Echo-1

By ANTHONY TUCKER
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — One of the brightest earth satellites, Echo-I, is approaching a demise that should be scientifically valuable and could be a stunning show as well.

Since, after it was launched in August, 1960, Echo-1 went into a circular orbit 930 miles up, it might seem surprising that it is likely to come down so rapidly, particularly as it was in a circular orbit 744 miles up only a month ago.

But because of the cyclic nature of the relationship between the satellite, the earth and the sun, Echo-1 has an orbit which changes yearly from circular, to elliptic, and back again to circular.

484 Miles

During its last elliptic phase its perigee height dropped to 484 miles, from which it was able to recover in spite of the effect of air drag. It is now thought that, in January or February, it will reach a perigee height of only 310 miles.

Once it gets so far into the atmosphere it will not recover. Its end will be sudden, unpredictable and brilliant.

How brilliant no one knows, for in spite of its size—an aluminiumized plastic balloon 98 feet in diameter—it weighs only about 150 pounds. Since it is not a rigid structure like Echo-II, it may well deform and spin frantically before it finally burns up. Indeed, what has been for six and a half years a steady starlike object, rather brighter than the Pole star, may suddenly become much dimmer and flash irregularly.

Last Stages

This will be only during the final stages of decay, although unpredictable irregularities of orbit are likely to start and to get worse during the weeks preceding this. At the moment predictions are unlikely to be more than about five minutes out and, because Echo-I can be seen easily, it seems likely to provide the first fully observed decay of an earth satellite.

Rabid Separatists Trial To Majority in Quebec

By FRED EDGE

(Mr. Edge two years ago moved his family from Winnipeg to Quebec. This is the second of three articles giving his observations of the French-English problem in Canada, which he sees as primarily one of communication.)

"Why don't you speak a white man's language?"

The young man who said that to me was a French Canadian separatist who lives in a small village in the "Little Alps" that are Quebec's Laurentian mountains.

I had been speaking to another French Canadian in English, and he had taken exception to my not speaking French. He also took exception to his fellow French Canadian speaking to me in English.

It is rabid separatists such as these that are a great source of embarrassment to the overwhelming majority of French Canadians.

The French Canadian is determined to make Canada a truly bilingual and bicultural country, or to isolate himself politically or ideologically if he can't accomplish this. But he does not believe in the ignorance and the belligerence of the militant separatist.

It pains him when English Canadians talk of Quebec "bomb-throwers" and the English language press throughout the rest of Canada quotes at length on violent separatism.

"It is unfortunate," said Jean-Paul, the owner of a small, Alpine-like hotel in the Laurentian ski country, "that a few small minds have the biggest mouths and make the loudest headlines."

With a few exceptions, the separatist movement in Quebec is made up of the French Canadian student element and not even all of that is committed to separatism—certainly not to militant separatism.

"A student," Jean Paul said, "has to be a rebel." He shrugged. "It is the nature of a student. If he weren't a separatist, he would be a Communist. If the sign he carried didn't read 'Down with the English in Canada,' it would read 'Down with the Americans in Vietnam.'

No Time for Separatism

"When the separatist graduates and he has to make his own living—when he gets married and the babies start to come—then he stops being a separatist. It takes him all his time and effort to be a good husband and father."

This is, of course, an over-simplification.

The bombs that have gone off in Quebec mailboxes are very real bombs and the radicals who have put them there are the hard core of the very real, if very small, militant French Canadian separatist movement.

There is no pat answer to this. French Canadians like Jean Paul answer only, and typically, with an eloquent Gallic shrug. "There are hoodlums everywhere," he says. "Here in Quebec, they call themselves separatists."

The adult, intellectual separatist is something else again. He is not a violent man. Violence he considers to be beneath his dignity, but he is fully dedicated to the fact, and not just the principle, of one flag, one people, two languages.

If this can be achieved throughout Canada; if he can speak to any fellow Canadian from Newfoundland to B.C. in French and be answered in French, even though the conversation might just as easily swing into English, then he will no longer be a separatist.

True bilingualism and biculturalism throughout all of Canada are his conditions. Otherwise, he is committed to the establishment of Quebec as an independent state.

One of the most difficult things for a newcomer to understand about today's French Canadian is that he is at least as antagonistic towards France as he is towards England, as both apply to Canada.

The Queen is English Canada's queen, not his. But neither is Charles de Gaulle, president of France, his president.

Gen. de Gaulle's now-famous "Vive le Quebec libre" drew resounding cheers from the student and radical separatist factions in Quebec during his recent visit.

It was a high source of amusement for most Quebecers, French and English Canadian alike, who instantly recognized a great showman and who enjoy a good joke at least as much as Canadians throughout the rest of Canada—especially a political joke.

"It's a great time for the general to be coming around to offer help from France," French Canadians observed laconically. "He's only about 125 years late . . ."

Making Political Hay

In Gen. de Gaulle's words, however, and the uproar they caused among English Canadians, intrepid French Canadians gleefully saw a great way to make political hay.

Much as Cuba's Fidel Castro played off the Russians against the Americans to further his own country's ends, Quebecers are quite prepared to play off France against the more obstinate elements of English Canada.

It is not only the majority French Canadian element in Quebec that feels that it is time for change in Canada's national character. I found in my two years in "La Belle Province" that English Canadians, too — with the obvious exception of the "old guard" — believe that Canada's destiny is as a truly bilingual and bicultural nation.

And why not? they ask. To be fully conversant in both French and English is to be better educated, and therefore a more whole person.

"What have you got against making yourselves better educated, more cultured? What great sense of insecurity makes you want to hold on so tightly to your English tongue to the exclusion of the language spoken by such a great mass of your fellow Canadians?"

Today, such questions and arguments are little more than an exercise in futility. Quebecers, both French and English, intend to make Quebec a showcase of the practised principle of "one flag, one people, two languages." The as yet unanswerable question is whether or not it will be the flag of Canada.

NEWS HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

Reviewed by Peter Murray, Times Wire News Editor

The recent deterioration in relations between East and West was underscored this week with the announcement by the Soviet Union that it is increasing its defence budget in the coming year by 15 per cent.

The boost was the largest ever for military spending for a peacetime year by the Kremlin.

Finance Minister Vasily Garbuzov attributed part of the increase to the need to ship more arms to Russia's allies to "meet the threat of aggression." He accused the U.S. of creating the international tension by its "adventurism."

Another factor in the increase was believed to be Soviet reaction to the recent U.S. decision to set up a costly anti-missile defence system.

Ernesto "Che" Guevara, a legendary Latin American revolutionary figure, met a shabby death this week that did little to enhance the legend.

Guevara was leading a ragtag band of rebels in the wilds of Bolivia when he was gunned down by an army patrol.

His diary revealed Guevara's awareness of the failure of the Bolivian operation and indicated he was attempting to flee the country when the patrol caught up with him.

Guevara wrote of his frustrations in attempting to inflame the backward Indian peasants of the region to his revolutionary cause:

"The inhabitans are as impenetrable as stones . . . you speak to them but in the deepness of their eyes you note they do not believe you."

If Guevara dreamed of martyrdom, Bolivia seemed hardly the place to fulfil his destiny.

●

Even before Guevara was killed the army had cut into guerrilla leadership with the arrest of French Marxist intellectual Regis Debray, now on trial for his life in the Bolivian city of Camiri.

With news of Guevara's death Debray abandoned his defence against the charges and confessed his involvement in the rebel movement, which was also said to be confirmed in Guevara's diary.

●

An opposition threat to topple the government of President Charles de Gaulle failed to materialize in the French National Assembly this week.

A motion to censure the government for its economic policies was defeated by a margin of 38 votes even though de Gaulle supporters have only a one-seat majority.

The School Bell Rings, The Revolution Halts

By ART STOTT

From Moscow this week Reuters relayed a Tass news agency report that relative calm had returned to Peking. The explanation leaves me incredulous. The teenage Red Guards have returned to school, says the story, and the riotous insurgency of their support for Mao Tse-tung has abated.

Stott

The situation may be as Tass and Reuters describe it. That is credible. What seems incredible to me is the implication that someone can ring a bell and end an apparent revolution.

The inference I take from the item is that somebody said: "All right, kids. Vacation's over. Get back to your books."

If this assumption is correct, what went before seems to be child exploitation carried to the ultimate. The horror of the excesses committed in the name of the cultural revolution appear to be matched by the callous way in which the young people have been used.

Revolutionaries, as I have conceived them, have a goal. You may disagree with it. You may be deeply shocked by the inhumanity of behaviour. But, as I see it, you expect them to have a cause. No doubt, in the history of revolutions or rebellions, a lot of dupes have been drawn into the stream by adroit leaders. Accepting that, it is still difficult to visualize the process as a flow that can be turned on or off like water controlled by a tap, or a summer holiday activity that starts and ends with the ringing of a bell.

To me such a concept represents the complete rejection of adult responsibility to the young. The leaders who stirred teen-agers to the extremes attributed to the Red Guards may judge that they have accomplished all they can with the children as an instrument, or that they have reached an impasse which makes further utilization of that tool unproductive. But what does it do to the teen-agers?

The indicated insensitivity toward the ultimate effects of such exploitation may not, however, be a phenomenon peculiar to Red China in the long, hot summer just completed. How sensitive are we who are shocked by the incidents on the other side of the Pacific? Probably a great deal less than we should be.

On this continent riot and rampage have attracted youth in several centres—either inspired by the attitudes of their elders or taking advantage of opportunities to revert to an inherent violence.

Moreover, in the commercial field, shrewd operators have been stimulating an appetite for things among the young not from any desire to improve their material standards but purely from a recognition that youth—an ever-increasing percentage of our populations—represents an important and growing market from which profit can be extracted.

We have come a long way from the child labor and exploitation of the earlier days of the Industrial Revolution. We protect the young from the sweatshop abuses once imposed upon them. We insist that they be regarded as individuals and have generally discarded the idea that their first 10 or 15 years is a time less of living than of preparing for life.

★ ★ ★

But while we have been trying to encourage them to think and act for themselves, have we been negligent in pointing out to them the advantages they can derive from the experience of older people—the ones who have made their mistakes and, in some cases, learned from their errors? In the current surge to give them independence, to let them have a larger part in directing their own lives, have we failed to point out to them that in order to live together people have to observe certain rules, even conventions, and exercise self-discipline? Are we neglecting to let them know, in a reasonable way, that immaturity can leave them without the defences they should have, or the judgment that knowledge of the world should provide?

Are we, in fact, abdicating the role of counsellors—and on occasion, imposers of discipline—in a way which leaves them open to manipulation as commerce manipulates the juvenile market, or as extremists with effective techniques manipulate the young to serve extremist ends?

Rejecting many of the values of an earlier generation—which certainly has made its mistakes and worshipped false gods—and uninstructed as well as inexperienced in determining when they are being used for ulterior motives, will our free young people become excessively vulnerable as the Red Guards seem to have been vulnerable, to the machinations of exploiting interests? Are they being developed to stop and start at the sound of a bell—even in such chancy activities as a so-called "cultural revolution"?

Today We Pay Tribute to Your Newspaperboy

MATERIALS, PLACEMENT and height of walls should all be considered carefully when building or remodelling. Planning pays.

WALLS CAN BE EXCITING . . . FORGET THE DRAB LOOK

By PAULINE GRAVES

If you are planning to build or remodel, give a thought to what your walls can do for you, in addition to dividing a large space into rooms and providing a place to hang pictures.

In years past, a photograph like this would only show a long, narrow hall and a living room separated by a six-inch wall. In this home, designed by architect Raymond Kappe, the hall is long and narrow, only three feet wide, but it is exciting to see, and it looks much wider.

A low cabinet composes half the length, offering storage on both sides, the top available for buffet serving, convenient because of proximity to the dining area.

Brick forms the second half of the wall, extending full height to the ceiling for living room privacy, shielding it from the house entrance.

The wall turns a corner, creating a recess in the living room, fine for furniture placement and giving a feeling of intimacy to the west side of the room, contrasting with the open plan and the glass wall on the garden side.

Although the wall was left unadorned, because of the texture of the brick, if it were of a plain material, panelling or interior stucco, a small picture gallery could be installed.

As it is, attention focuses on the one picture at the end.

Helping to make the hall seem less narrow is the cropped ceiling, of translucent plastic, which diffuses light from the fluorescent tubes overhead.

Exotic Temples Draw Visitors

Sword fighting, silk weaving, elephants and water buffalo at work, snake feeding, boxing, and classical dancing—they are all part of Thailand's country life and culture.

It could take the visitor weeks of touring, to experience all this land of exotic temples, teak forests, canals and rice paddies has to offer.

But everything is neatly laid out in a 20-acre park called—Thailand in Miniature—just a few minutes from Don Muang Airport on the road to downtown Bangkok.

For the visitor passing through Bangkok, linked with Europe by Scandinavian Airlines new one-stop Trans-Asian Express starting November 4. The tour presents backwoods Thailand in a nutshell, with all its rural highlights and traditions. SAS passengers going through to Singapore can stop in Bangkok before resuming their trip.

There is folk dancing in brilliant native costumes to the accompaniment of the haunting tones of age-old bamboo instruments; there are craftsmen and women at work demonstrating their centuries of skills in silk weaving, wood carving and gem cutting.

Tourists Like Tallest of All

Th Empire State Building is one of the most popular tourist attractions in New York City. Over 1½ million visitors view New York each year from observatories on the 86th and 102nd floors of the world's tallest building. Other busy tourist lures in New York include the United Nations and the Statue of Liberty, each handling well over a million sightseers each year.

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENERS

Nature Never Leaves Its Soil Unprotected

By JACK BEASTALL

What will your garden soil be doing this winter?

This is a question few home gardeners ask themselves, but the success or failure of next year's garden could be influenced by the answer.

Jack

Soil is a mass of living and inert matter, the living portion working on the inert portion to provide sustenance for plants.

Anything containing life cannot be static; it improves or it deteriorates. This is true of the soil in the garden.

Although it is considered a social blemish to have weeds in the garden, the plants we call weeds are the natural protectors and improvers of soil.

Man has been educated to keep the soil free of all unwanted plants, to use what is called clean cultivation. In this way the soil is exposed to the elements.

Nature never leaves a piece of soil exposed for longer than is needed to cover it with so-called weeds, and this fact is now being recognized by soil authorities.

RAINS HARMFUL

Carefully conducted tests have shown that heavy winter rains have a harmful effect on the mechanical texture of the soil.

Pounding rain separates the clay or sand particles from the humus particles, leaving the humus on the surface to be washed by surface water into little heaps.

Frost, which we have been told is beneficial to the soil, is now thought to be of more harm than good to soil devoid of a covering of plants.

The heaved soil becomes loose, and as the frost returns to water, the humus content separates leaving the grains of sand without a binder, or the grains of clay with nothing to hold them apart.

Any modern book on soil conservation will give more illustrations of the adverse effects of weather on uncovered soil, including the loss of topsoil through various degrees of erosion.

What will your garden soil be doing this winter?

Will it be deteriorating through exposure, or will it spend the six months improving itself for next season's crops?

These questions apply particularly to areas which have been used for vegetables, chrysanthemums, dahlias, gladioli, and other plants which are now taken indoors for the winter.

The spaces they occupied will become vacant for six months during which time it can work to its own benefit or its detriment.

INCREASE HUMUS

Humus is the material from which soil is made, and humus is the component which is lacking in our gardens. Anything we can do to increase the humus content will be of benefit.

Animal wastes and discarded vegetation provide humus. We obtain these in the form of barnyard or stable manures mixed with bedding materials, or as compost from compost heaps.

Horse and cow manure, or partially decomposed compost, can be spread on vacant ground now to protect the surface and provide humus for incorporating in spring.

The soil can also be protected by cover or green manure crops. While the agriculturist recognizes a difference in these two, the gardener need not differentiate because he is concerned only with a small area to be protected and improved.

The sowing of fall rye is the accepted practice, other grains, clovers and vetches being added for specific soils.

One crop which adds a large quantity of green material to the soil is broad beans, with the added advantage of being able to thrive in our normal winter temperatures.

In fact, any unwanted vegetable and flower seeds can be mixed and scattered over a small area of ground, to be turned under in spring.

FUTURE USE

Not only is the soil protected when producing a winter crop, but plant foods are also being retained for future use.

As long as the soil retains summer warmth, the bacteria continue their work of changing complex chemicals to simple forms usable by plants, and when these chemicals reach the available form they are readily soluble in water and soon carried away.

A winter crop picks up these chemicals, converts them to leaves and stems, then returns them to the soil when the crop is turned under. The chemicals are still in a form suitable for plants to use and readily picked up by spring crops.

Whether a garden soil is better or not next spring depends entirely on the gardener.

What will your garden soil be doing this winter, improving or deteriorating?

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. I thought all my colchicums bloomed and were finished for this season. Now there are blue crocus-like flowers coming up all through the border. Not mauvy pink, but real blue. In this new garden we do not know what to expect. Can you tell us what they could be? — L.N.J., Uplands.

A. These are likely true fall crocuses, C. speciosus, delightful fall flowers. There are many varieties available.

Q. When is a peach tree pruned?—J.L.K., Esquimalt.

A. Peach trees bear their fruit on new growths made the previous season and those growths will not bear fruit again. We can cut out the fruiting growths with the fruit attached at picking time. In this way we are sure of removing the correct shoots.

WEEK'S WORK

Gladiolus leaves should be browning off now. Dig the corms, cut off the foliage, and put the corms to dry quickly in a warm room for a few days before cleaning.

Peonies should be planted, or moved if it is necessary, without further delay.

Look around plant stores and nurseries for flowering plants of hardy cyclamens in small pots. Set out into shady spot with leafmould and lime.

Take up the corms of acidantheras and tigridias, both worthwhile flowering plants here in the summer garden, but not hardy outdoors over winter. Store the corms in dry soil in a cool place so they do not dry out.

Cut down withered foliage of nearly all kinds of perennials. Exceptions are kniphofia, hemerocallis, dierama. Tidy these plants a bit, but their old foliage protects new growths made at ground level during mild spells in winter.

Lift and store carrots and beets in sand if soil is messy to get on later in season.

Plant raspberries and other small fruits as they are available.

Hall of Fame

A feature of the new Madison Square Garden Centre, opening this winter in New York City, will be a "Hall of Fame" honoring sports and entertainment stars who brought renown to the Garden over the years. The Hall will display films, action photos, plaques and memorabilia associated with the honored personalities.

BOOK VIEWS

Speaking With The Body

By JOAN COLDWELL

I have just met the author of a book I reviewed earlier this year. Such encounters can be tricky, but Cicely Louise Evans was most willing to discuss the ideas in her novel The Newel Post and critics' reception of it in general. She has every reason to be pleased. Plans are already in hand for a movie version of her novel, with British author William Golding suggested for the screenplay.

Coldwell

When I asked who might be the stars, Miss Evans replied, "There's always Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor — well, Burton anyway."

The Newel Post is about a middle-aged couple who recover from their past mistakes and find that it is never too late for love. The most vibrant character is the man, Stanning, whose impulsive, nonsense enjoyment of life gradually breaks down the barriers Charlotte has built against love.

●

Miss Evans says that what she wanted to convey was the idea that change is essential to happiness, that people can experience again "the clear, ecstatic sort of happiness we felt when we were young," if only they have courage to face whatever inner hurt or fear might be blocking growth.

"I tried to show in the book that someone who was too busy, perhaps even too unselfish, to indulge in the pain of loss at the beginning had to go back through that pain to be able to accept happiness again."

In some respects, Miss Evans is a latter-day Lawrence.

Her novel is prefaced with the quotation "at every stage of the human condition, the body is trying to tell us who and what we are." Charlotte had refused to listen; she had arranged her life with her mind and professed to be satisfied with it, but it was a purely static existence and it resulted in nervous breakdown.

●

Miss Evans emphatically refuses to set an age limit on the experience of love.

"I don't think it matters that young people have this blindness about their elders, but I think it is tragic if older people themselves think it is too late to fall in love. Even in their sixties."

My own criticism of the novel involved the use of the newel post as an object of religious significance.

Miss Evans was chivalrous, but felt that reviewers generally had missed the point or had not tried to sympathize with her intention.

She herself has a sense of there being many occurrences in life that cannot be rationally explained. She is keenly interested in extra-sensory perception and other psychic phenomena and feels that there is a depth to man's character in this respect "which makes him more powerful and far-reaching than modern fiction tells us he is."

●

What I thought particularly well done in The Newel Post was the relationship between Charlotte and her daughter. That the author should have captured so well the implications of parental responsibility is not surprising — she is herself the mother of four children.

The demands of home and family have kept her from writing for 15 years or so, but now that she has started again she is wasting no time. Her second novel, Nemesis Wife, set in England just after the war, will soon be published by Doubleday.

These are Miss Evans' first novels but by no means her first publications.

She has written stories, articles and broadcast talks, and as a teenager contributed "an anti-war play" to Eight New One-Act Plays of 1935, along with such writers as Ernst Toller, Lawrence Housman and Ivor Brown.

●

Cicely Louise Evans is a native of Edmonton ("The only really bad reviews of my novel came from Edmonton") but she now lives in Victoria.

She is one of many authors who find, and make, this city an exciting place to be.

In the next few weeks I plan to talk about some others — if we don't fall to blows along the way.

She Wrestles With Past: Ghosts of Stalin, Mother

TWENTY LETTERS TO A FRIEND: Svetlana Alliluyeva, translated by Priscilla J. McMillan; 246 pages; Fitzhenry and Whiteside; $6.95. Reviewed by Anthony Jenkins.

"Maybe when I've written it all down, an unbearable burden of some kind will fall from my shoulders at last and then my real life will begin . . . I've grown so weary of this weight. Maybe I shall be able to throw it off at last."

It is in this way, as one woman's confused attempt to find meaning in her early life and as an effort to overcome that knowledge, that the letters of Stalin's daughter are likely to be of lasting importance.

●

There are no state secrets.

The Politburo can rest easy, for the book could not possibly have been masterminded by the CIA.

Instead, it offers a unique and extraordinary glimpse behind the scenes of power as seen through the eyes of a bewildered and frightened child: a chillingly simple picture of the loneliness at the centre of the revolutionary maelstrom.

These 20 letters were written in 35 days during the summer of 1963 at a holiday retreat near Moscow.

For personal reasons Mrs. Alliluyeva makes no mention of her third (and happy) marriage, nor does she explain directly what led to her self-exile from Russia. Yet the answers are there.

One feels that this book was a necessary step in freeing the author from the past, as she wrestles with the ghosts of her father and mother. That struggle has not yet been completed, however. Both parents remain strangely ambiguous figures.

●

How could the "dear little papa" who loved her and wrote clumsily affectionate notes to his "little sparrow" have been the same man who sent thousands to their deaths during the Terror?

Stalin's psychotic moodiness brought disaster to everyone around Svetlana.

Yet papa Stalin and Stalin the ruler remain strangely detached from one another.

Svetlana reports the facts

SVETLANA
. . . life with father

and then explains that "People were a lot more honest and emotional in those days. If they didn't like the way it was, they shot themselves."

●

It takes her longer to come face to face with her mother.

Ironically, Svetlana only learnt of her mother's suicide some 10 years afterwards by reading an American magazine. The pain that death caused is evident from the way her account of it is delayed until she can avoid it no longer.

Her mother emerges as the shining influence of the household without whom "nothing was the same. Life was changed out of all recognition."

Yet Mrs. Alliluyeva seems strangely unaware of the incongruity of her feelings.

Her exotic mother, with the slender hands and the dark, southern eyes, busied herself with the affairs of the Party and was seldom with her children. Unlike Papa who spoiled and comforted his young daughter, the mother was a distant Figure: "I cannot recall her kissing or caressing me ever."

●

Beneath the book's contradictory surface, Svetlana has her own explanation of what happened. She attributes her mother's death to her dejection over the dissipation of the old revolutionary spirit as those in power betrayed their former idealism and went about feathering their own nests.

She sees her father's coldness and brutality as partly the result of her mother's death.

Her suicide-note contained a withering indictment of the political situation, and Stalin felt himself deserted by the person to whom he was closest and whom he trusted most.

●

In consequence, be destroyed everyone who had ever been associated with his wife.

Obviously the author is too emotionally entangled with the events to arrive at a dispassionate judgement.

As she herself admits, "what's happened isn't nearly so important as what one thinks about it now."

Yet two things stand out very clearly.

Firstly, there is her portrait of the aging Stalin, the victim of his own giant power.

If her mother died because of her disillusionment, then her father ended in the same way.

Alienated by the greed of his fellow Party members, he shut himself up in one room that did duty as an office, dining room and bedroom. Oppressed by his mythic reputation, he was unable to travel in his beloved Georgia because of the hysteria of pressing crowds of worshippers. He died in tragic isolation.

●

Even more important are the qualities of Svetlana herself.

Through all the details of blood and fear one wonders how her spirit did not crack too.

She is extraordinarily self-effacing and invites no sympathy for her own role in the events she describes, yet the impression she gives is one of enduring innocence.

She believes firmly that man "cannot live without God," a naturalistic deity whose presence she finds in the Russian countryside and in the beautiful faces of the first revolutionaries.

Despite the bitterness of her childhood and her defection to the West, Svetlana Alliluyeva remains triumphantly herself and a Russian.

Here Is a Novel Very Like a Poem

THE SMALLER SKY, by John Wain. Macmillan. $4.25.

Reviewed by John Peter

John Wain has survived the disastrous publication of his second novel, Living in the Present.

He has also survived the conspiracy by dull-witted British journalists to confound his integrity with Kingsley Amis's and Iris Murdoch's in a weird sort of Angry Trinity.

What had lately begun to worry his admirers a little, I think, was his ability to survive into posterity as something other than a poet —at least as regards his best and most congenial work.

No one, I hope, will care to maintain that his fiction has been poor. But, good as they are, books like The Contenders and Strike the Father Dead might have been written by any gifted successor to Arnold Bennett, or even J. B. Priestley.

At their artistic centre is something not unlike solidity; plainly the writing of them failed to challenge and quicken the full scope of the talent evidenced in Wain's poems.

Now comes The Smaller Sky, a strange, almost Camus-like account of what results when a disillusioned scientist gives up his home life and his work and seeks shelter instead, tensely anonymous, under the dirty glass roof of Paddington Station.

Why is Arthur Geary disillusioned?

We are not told the reason, beyond some cloudy hints.

What special appeal does Paddington have for him? Again, we find it hard to say.

These questions, seemingly crucial, become less and less relevant as the book proceeds. We realize that what Wain has done is to present a truly arresting symbol for malaise; that Arthur Geary is really the sane-mad Everyman of 1967; that all that happens to him betrays some bearing on ourselves and our own lives. That (to put the point succinclty) here is a novel conceived and structured very like a poem.

But a poem in prose.

The special task for a writer wrestling with this kind of universal subject is to clothe it so convincingly in the garments of actuality that his reader's credulity never wavers. Nor is this easy: think of Piggy's spectacles in Lord of the Flies, for instance, blandly transformed into burning glasses—a poetic flourish that defies the prosy laws of Physics and so falls deadly flat. To my mind the real advance represented by The Smaller Sky lies not merely in the seeking out of a richer, more viable, more finely disturbing subject, but in the ease with which this subject is bodied forth in the terms of what we like to call normal life.

John Peter is author of novels ALONG THAT COAST and TAKE HANDS AT WINTER.

Granted its initial premise that Geary has elected to take up residence in Paddington (and is that so much stranger than the initial premises of other novels?), everything in this tale rings true.

Even when a character's behavior takes us by surprise, as Geary's does when he strikes up a conversation with the TV compere, Adrian Swarthmore, a little reflection will show that this is not a fictional convenience, a manipulation by the author, but exactly like the surprises sometimes visited upon us out of the characters even of our closest friends: Geary is drawn to Swarthmore because, just for the moment, and most untypically, the TV man is nearly as nervous and discomposed as Geary himself.

What smacked perhaps of stolidity in some of the previous novels here becomes control, forcing the reader to believe and understand.

And yet, beneath the cool prosaic narrative, a desperate lament for the predicament of modern Man is constantly contriving to express itself. We are in Paddington with Geary, groping about for our own humanity, stumbling as we attempt the dance of life, frightened by drums.

The Smaller Sky deserves to be called a kind of poem. It is also John Wain's best novel since he first took up the form with Hurry On Down in 1953.

CANADA AS A PROBLEM

Public Opinion and Canadian Identity, by Mildred Schwartz. With foreward by S. M. Lipset. Fitzhenry & Whiteside, Ltd.)

Reviewed by R. E. L. Watson

Events from around the world make us aware that many countries, both new nations and old, face the problem which Canadians know as national unity. It is the problem of building a sense of national identity among the widely disparate groups which make up the population.

In this book, Mildred Schwartz, herself a Canadian, examines our success in establishing a national consensus. Recent developments in the province of Quebec, if not the celebration marking one hundred years of confederation, give the study particular relevance.

Schwartz finds her basic data in materials collected over a period of 20 years by various public opinion poll organizations. The specific topics polled are classified into those relating to national symbols, to internal problems and to external relations.

While she is interested in seeking any shift in opinion over time, her main focus is upon discovering whether there is general agreement in the way these matters are viewed at any time or, alternatively whether because of regional, ethnic-religious, social class or other factors, such a consensus is lacking.

●

Most readers of the press will have some familiarity with the reports of polls which appear from time to time.

It is clear that many of the specific issues on which opinions are solicited are those on which agreement is least likely. They are polled precisely because they are contentious.

Most impressive in view of these limitations of the data, is the amount of agreement or consensus found on many issues even between French Canadian and the "English". Not surprisingly, however, regional and religious-ethnic factors are associated with variation in opinions.

In many respects, the most valuable sections of the book are those in which Schwartz moves beyond analysis of poll materials to draw on more general sociological theory.

●

Here the question is raised as to what degree of consensus a modern state requires if it is to remain viable.

Clearly perfect consensus is not only unlikely to be attained, it would be undesirable if it did exist for it implies suppression of the non-conformist and innovator.

Again, in this matter as in many others, all are not equal; the status of opinion holders is important.

"Lack of agreement between high and low status groups or among low may prevent development of a unified nation but such a situation is unlikely to lead to serious problems . . ."

It is when near equals differ, groups already influential or powerful, that serious consequences may follow.

Is this the situation already reached in the English-French dialogue with respect to constitutional development?

Schwartz does not attempt to answer but her concluding chapter sems to suggest that many of the obvious political adjustments currently proposed might serve to aggravate rather than to resolve the conflicts.

FOCUS

By BRAD NUGENT

Americans naturally form the biggest record-buying and dance-going percentage of the North American population.

A survey really isn't necessary to prove this, or the fact that the U.S. is where the big dollars are for bands.

Here in Canada we have a lot of great groups, many brimming over with enough talent and energy to carry them to stardom in the United States.

A group could expect to earn in one night what it would take 10 nights to make here in Canada.

So, then why aren't they down there right now sharing the loot?

One would think when all that money is waiting for talented groups they would put every effort possible into getting across the border.

It's not, however, that they don't try, for I'll almost guarantee that every major promoter and booking agency in the U.S. has somewhere in its files a few letters and photos from Canadian talent.

Most Canadian groups get just as far as the promoter's files and that's all.

What else keeps them out of the States? That's the question I'll try to answer in the next few columns.

BITS AND PIECES

Oh no, The Beach Boys haven't been washed out with the surf. Their soon-to-be-released album has changed titles from "Smile" to "Smiley Smiles." On it are their two "most recent" singles "Heroes and Villains" and "Good Vibrations" both of which are a bit overdue for album use.

Seems it took over nine months to quell a dispute concerning royalties. (One of them needed a bit more coin to put his grandmother through surfing school or something.) Oh well, forget the Beach Boys.

Still on the album bit though, Herman and His Hermits have got a new one titled "Blaze" and Eric Burdon and the Animals have come up with "Winds of Change."

Included on the Animals effort is that "San Francisco Nights" thing and get this—a six-and-a-half minute version of the Stones' hit "Paint It Black." Why can't they leave a good thing alone?

NANCY
. . . strikes again

Sam The Sham's back on the prowl with "The Sam The Sham Revue" (complete with a line of chorus girls I'd imagine). This wasted wax headlines his "Black Sheep" and "Groovin'." Can't say I'm looking forward to that one too much.

The Young Rascals are well into their U.K. tour that includes a series of TV performances. By the way, The Rascals on their recent tour of Hawaii outgrossed the Rolling Stones with a whopping $103,000 one-night stand at the Honolulu International Center.

They are sure getting young! Little Dion, a six-year-old singer has made his debut with a single "Lonely Tear Drops." I wonder who Little Dion's parents are. Sounds like a Dino, Desi and Billy deal.

The Sunshine Company and The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band will make their first motion picture debuts in "For Singles Only!" to star Milton Berle.

If Bobby Gentry's "Ode To Billy Joe" doesn't become immortal something's got to be wrong. To date instrumental versions have been recorded by Artee Butler, The Kingpins, Ray Bryant and The Bob Summer's Orchestra.

Well it had to happen. The Electric Flag, an offspring of The Electric Prunes, has made its appearance.

SOUNDING the opening fanfare for an unrivalled display of military pageantry, will be these members of the regimental band of Her Majesty's Welsh Guards, when the Welsh and Scots Guards appear at Memorial Arena, Oct. 23. The massed bands, drums, pipes and dancers will unite in a rousing demonstration of military splendor.

They'll Dance 'Old Trousers' In All Their Guards' Finery

When the Highland dancers of the Scots Guards leap to the tunes of the massed pipers at Victoria Memorial Arena on Monday, Oct. 23, spectators will witness authentic Highland dancing as it is seldom seen outside Scotland.

The dancers will be on the program presented by the Regimental Band of the Welsh Guards and the Pipes, Drums and Dancers of the Scots Guards.

Highland dancing has been handed down from one generation to the next. Most of the Scots Guards dancers learned the steps from their fathers and their grandfathers who once cavorted on village greens.

The dances best known outside Scotland are the Highland Fling, which is easy to learn but most difficult to perform correctly, and the colorful sword dance which ancient clans danced after a victory.

Among other famous Scots dances is the slow and graceful Seaun Trouibhas (a Scots term meaning "old trousers").

Tourists visiting Britain have been thrilled watching the superb dancers of the Guards at royal ceremonial occasions.

In their gaily colored glengarry and kilt of the Queen's Own Royal Stuart tartan, waving their gleaming swords and accompanied by the massed pipers, the guardsmen are a splendid sight.

Other features of the program here include a re-enactment of the Ceremony of the Keys, which has taken place nightly in the Tower of London for more than 700 years and is seldom witnessed by outsiders.

The Prince of Wales Company squad of the Welsh Guards will demonstrate some of its precision drills usually performed at Buckingham Palace.

Consumer Act 'Limited;' Power Rests With Provinces

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's constitutional structure means that responsibility for consumer protection will continue to rest mainly with the provinces despite establishment of a federal department in the field, Registrar-General John Turner said Friday.

The comment came as a result of New Democratic Party criticism in the Commons that the proposed department of corporate and consumer affairs will be weak and powerless.

Mr. Turner, 38, who will be the new department's first minister, said it certainly will face certain limits because of divided jurisdiction.

"In fact, probably the greater share of the responsibility for the consumer lies at the provincial level, particularly with respect to the retail and distributing end of the market place," he said.

He guided the act to establish the department through the resolution stage of debate to first reading, and also brought a Senate bill amending the Canada Corporations Act through the House.

FIRST BILL PASSED

"Hurrah, we've got something through," shouted Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) as the act received third reading.

It is the first to receive passage in Parliament since the fall session began Sept. 25. The corporations act amendments were on the list of 10 secondary pieces of legislation the government hopes to see passed this year.

The bill to establish the corporate and consumers affairs department is one of the 25 primary statutes on the fall list.

MPs turn Monday to another priority measure, a government resolution proposing a one-cent increase in postage for letters mailed in Canada for delivery within the country. A changed rate structure for newspapers and periodicals and administrative changes related to postal tenders and contracts also are proposed.

In the consumer affairs debate, NDP assertions that the proposed department will be weak were coupled with the criticism of Conservative MPs that it will be another bureaucratic growth.

NOT NEW DEPARTMENT

However, Mr. Turner denied that it will be even a new department "in the strict sense." The present registrar-general's department and its agencies would be grouped under a new name, with two further responsibilities: Co-ordination of consumer affairs programs at the federal level, initiation of new programs and so on; and representing Ottawa in the area of corporate securities.

"This department will not be a bureaucratic monster," Mr. Turner added.

"If you want to use the vocabulary of the octopus of government, this is not a new tentacle.

"It is a rearranging of the tentacles."

The bill to establish the department gives Mr. Turner the power to "initiate, recommend or undertake programs designed to promote the interests of the Canadian consumer."

It includes under his wing responsibilities already vested in the registrar-general: matters such as corporate securities, combines, mergers, monopolies, bankruptcy and insolvency, patents, copyrights and trade marks.

OTHER RESPONSIBILITIES

Added is the responsibility to "promote and encourage the institution of practices or conduct tending to the better protection of the Canadian consumer and co-operate with provincial governments or agencies thereof, or any bodies, organizations or persons, in any programs having similar projects."

It also must "undertake, recommend or assist in" programs to help make consumers more fully informed about what they are buying in goods and services.

The department may initiate research and publish reports. A consumer advisory council also may be appointed by the minister.

Responding to a budget-conscious opposition, Mr. Turner said all this won't cost much. The registrar-general's budget this year is $8,000,000, minus $6,000,000 in revenue from patent applications, incorporation applications and other such matters.

"The cost to the taxpayer will be between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000," Mr. Turner said. "There will be no additional cost of any significance."

Cribs, Playpens In Cars by '69?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cribs and playpens for infant auto passengers, windshields that don't pop and roll bars for motorcycles are among 47 new motor vehicle safety standards the U.S. government is considering.

The proposals, announced Thursday by Secretary of Transportation Alan S. Boyd, would become effective in 1969 or later. The first federal safety standards were issued earlier this year.

Cribs and other restraints for infants would be an extension of an earlier standard which requires seat belts for children up to 50 pounds who are able to sit upright.

New cars apparently would be required to have fittings so such devices could be installed by owners, a department spokesman said.

The motorcycle standard would require foot rests, roll bars and exhaust system covers.

The windshield standard, intended to keep people from being thrown out of vehicles during crashes, would require mountings to prevent pop outs.

These and seven other standards would be effective Jan. 1, 1969. Law requires the government to announce proposals in advance so interested parties can make suggestions.

Other proposals to begin Jan. 1, 1969 call for:

—Performance standards for brake linings on cars, trucks, buses, motorcycles and trailers.

—Elimination of outside protrusions that could hurt pedestrians or cyclists in accidents.

—Warning devices for vehicles stopped for emergencies. These include flares, red cloth flags, red electric lanterns and red emergency reflectors.

—Auto hoods that won't open inadvertently.

—Pressure radiator caps that are safe to open.

—Headlight covers and movable headlights with "fail-safe" reliability.

—Visible serial numbers for quick identification of passenger cars.

JAPAN ASKED TO PURCHASE MORE WHEAT

TOKYO (Reuters) — Canadian Trade Minister Robert Winters has formally asked Japan to buy more Canadian wheat on a regular basis, a spokesman for the Japanese food agency said today.

The request was made when Winters talked Thursday with Tadao Kuraishi, Japanese agriculture minister.

The spokesman said the visiting Canadian minister said Japan's imports of Canadian agricultural products, particularly wheat, decreased this year.

Kuraishi said in reply that the recent decline was attributable to a revision in the Japanese pricing policy to make domestic prices reflect international market prices.

He promised that the Japanese government would do its best to comply with the Canadian request.

Fibreglas Homes 'Have Possibilities'

House built of fibreglas are going up in England.

And local contractor William Campbell thinks the new method has "tremendous possibilities."

He admitted that he has never heard of fibreglas housing in Canada or seen it in construction magazines.

One of the great advantages of fiberglas houses is that they are maintenance free for up to 60 years, which would be a saving of about $5,000 in exterior painting costs alone.

After 60 years, the fiberglas can be given an economic surface treatment extending its life for further similar periods.

Last week, in a statement on housing, the Victoria Labour Council said the housing industry "has been hampered far too long by obsolete technology.

"In a society in which other industries have utilized to the full the efficiencies of mass production, most of the work in house construction is still done on the old-time basis. Research is needed to overcome obsolete building codes and out-of-date technology."

Sales Sharply Higher

TORONTO (CP)—Seven Arts Productions Ltd. of Toronto Tuesday reported sales of $46,801,414 and profit of $6,520,541 or $2.56 a share in the year ending June 30, 1967.

Japanese Share In Another Mill

TOKYO (Reuters) — Tohoku Pulp Co. Ltd., a Japanese pulp maker, plans to share in a $4,500,000 pulp and timber operation in northern British Columbia through a joint venture with a Canadian interest, a company spokesman said today.

The company recently dispatched a nine-man survey team to B.C. to study the planned joint ventures, he said.

Plans call for Tohoku and the Sumitomo Forestry Co., another Japanese firm, to team up with Cattermole Timber Ltd. of B.C. to build the operation, which will be capable of producing 150 tons daily of pulp.

The new joint firm will be established in the Finlay district. Half the capital will be put up by the B.C. firm and the other half shared by the two Japanese concerns equally.

CITY DECISION CRITICIZED

The city of Victoria was accused Friday of "coming dangerously close to subordinating over-all civic design and urban values to private economic interests."

The comment was made by Larry Ryan, secretary of the Victoria Labour Council, after city council agreed Thursday to give the owners of a partly-finished apartment building at Quadra and Topaz a three-month reprieve on a demolition order.

Mr. Ryan said city council's action is "disappointing."

"The council has been too lenient already and ought to have taken a firmer position before now. The owners have had ample time to clean up the mess."

Tighter Money To Come?

OTTAWA (CP) — Classic signs of still tighter money have appeared in the money market since the Bank of Canada signalled a restrictive turn in monetary policy Sept. 27.

During the two intervening weeks since its rediscount rate went to five per cent from 4½ per cent, the central bank has not acted to replenish cash reserves of the chartered banks which have been obliged to take steps on their own.

Between Sept. 27 and Oct. 4 the banks called in $122,000,000 in day-to-day loans—the spare money lent to investment dealers at low rates of interest and subject to repayment within 24 hours.

The banks apparently used most of the cash for general loans, which increased by $142,000,000 during the seven-day period.

Although day-to-day loans increased again by $55,000,000 in the seven days to Oct. 11, the investment dealers or money-market "jobbers" still found themselves short of cash to finance their inventories of short-term securities.

Between Sept. 27 and Oct. 4 the jobbers went to the Bank of Canada in its capacity as a lender of last resort, negotiating to secure $86,400,000 through purchase and resale agreements.

DECLINE IN HOLDINGS

Another phenomenon noticeable since early September has been a sharp decline in chartered bank holdings of government treasury bills.

From a high point of $1,825,000,000 on Sept. 6, the banks reduced their treasury bill holdings to $1,732,000,000 this week, a drop of almost $100,000,000.

WEEK ON MARKETS

Heavy Selling Pressure

By LARRY DWORKIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canada's major stock exchanges came under heavy selling pressure this week as prices fell to their lowest levels since mid-July.

However, there was no panic selling as only 13,172,000 shares changed hands in the four-day trading week at Toronto compared with 17,941,000 last week.

Analysts say the markets recent weakness reflects efforts by the Canadian and United States governments to introduce anti-inflationary measures to cool off the economy.

Markets have been inflationary-induced since last October, and as a result profit takers have stepped in—uncertain as to the effects of government policies on profits, they say.

Brokers add that higher interest rates in the bond and mortgage markets have also been responsible for attracting money away from stocks.

INDUSTRIALS FALL

At Toronto, the industrial index, which measures the price movements of key stocks, tumbled 2.81 to 165.51.

During the last half of the week declines have outnumbered advances about two to one.

Blue chips took it on the chin as CPR and Inco dropped 1½ each to 64½ and 117⅞, Massey-Ferguson 1 to 20¼ and Bell Telephone ¾ to a low of 45.

Ford of Canada slid 6¾ to 166 as the company's factory's shut down due to the strike against its U.S. parent.

Other heavy declines went to Bow Valley, down 2¼ to 19¼, BACM Industries 2⅜ to 15¼, General Motors 2⅛ to 90 and Pembina 1¾ to 16½.

Bank issues continued to lose ground as Royal backed off 1 to 14½, Montreal ¾ to 11½, Toronto-Dominion ⅝ to 12⅝ and Nova Scotia ½ to 13⅛. Imperial-Commerce added ¼ at 12¼.

One bank official said that because of this year's Bank Act revisions, banks face higher costs in the increased interest paid on savings deposits. These higher costs are not being fully recovered in the increased interest rates on loans, he added.

Base metal prices dropped as Rio Algom declined 1¾ to 35¾ and Denison and Pine Point ⅝ each to 85⅛ and 52⅞. Roman Corp., whose chief asset is Denison shares, tumbled 2 to 28¾.

Dome Petroleum was down 2¼ to 58¼ in western oil activity. Canadian Superior was off 1⅝ to 43⅜, Great Plains 1 to 18 and Banff 1⅛ to 15. Pacific Pete moved up 1¼ to 20¾ and Hudson's Bay 1⅛ to 38.

SHRUM ADVICE TO INDUSTRY

'Your Techniques Need Examining'

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Architects, engineers and construction men meeting in Montreal Friday were challenged by B.C. Hydro co-chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum to meet earthly problems with the zeal astronauts apply to space research.

The meeting was for the 1967 concrete awards, sponsored by the federal department of industry co-operating with the national design council and the Portland Cement Association.

Kent

Dr. Shrum—partly responsible for the millions of tons of concrete used in W. A. C. Bennett dam — conceded that concrete technology is here to stay.

But it needs continuing design work and the construction industry must find ways of making the cost of building cheaper, Dr. Shrum said.

Otherwise the industry will have contributed to an acute sociological problem—pricing homeowners out of the market.

"Denying couples with growing families a suitable place to live strikes at the very foundation of our society," the engineer-physicist told his audience.

It seems ironic that in Canada, with ample building materials, skilled workmen and no real shortage of engineers and architects, there is a housing shortage, and in spite of incomes being at an all-time high, he said.

Yet there is no shortage of cars and of car buyers—people frequently have two and three cars in the driveway, even though housing may be substandard.

If it is because these people feel they get better value in cars than in a home, "your marketing techniques need examination."

"Regretfully, I forecast that we shall be providing more and more subsidized housing for families who will be spending more and more of their incomes on new automobiles and other luxuries which are not as important as better homes for their children," Dr. Shrum said.

"Unfortunately luxuries seem to have a fascination for spenders . . . coupled with this is the growing philosophy that a beneficent government will probably provide the necessities."

★ ★ ★

He also singled out the high cost of land and burdensome taxes, but directed his main criticism at low productivity and wages that are out of line.

Construction industry costs skyrocket with increased labor costs and low productivity rather than high equipment costs, making it necessary to cut on-site labor with such techniques as prefabrication, Dr. Shrum said.

Also, bargaining must be undertaken "realistically," not "in the manner of the federal government but with the same motivation as that apparent in those manufacturing industries which must be competitive with imported goods."

"Increase efficiency and reduce costs," sums up the message he gave the meeting, and in that way workers and managers might help build a better world, as determined and dedicated as spacemen who tackle the universe.

Again on loan to conduct the annual Canada savings bond payroll deduction campaign on Vancouver Island is Victoria investment salesman Bill Munro, of Hagar Investments.

Munro

He is veteran of 21 previous bond drives, including the Victory loan effort of the Second World War.

David Else, also of Hagar's, will assist in the organization, which will take the men into logging camps, mines and factories.

In spite of the attractive interest rate and compounding feature of the current series of savings bonds, not all previous series should be converted.

Persons wondering about exchanging the bonds for the new 5¼ per cent issue should remember that last year's centennial issue carries a yield of 5.6 per cent average compared with 5.48 per cent for the new issue, and it also has the double-your-money feature if held to maturity.

Another which should be held to maturity is the series 14 due for redemption next November at a $3 premium, and still another is the 1962 series paying 5½ per cent up to 1976.

Angry Reaction To Mill Closure

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—The announcement Friday that steel making will be ended in this East Coast city by Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. brought a quick and angry reaction.

In an announcement that stunned Cape Breton, the big island at the north end of Nova Scotia, Dosco sad steel making operations would end by next April 30.

Premier G. I. (Ike) Smith, visibly angered, told reporters that Dosco lacked a sense of "corporate responsibilities to its employees and to the community."

Health Minister Allan MacEachen, Nova Scotia's representative in the Canadian cabinet, said he was deeply shocked."

Robert Stanfield, premier of Nova Scotia until a month ago and now national leader of the Progressive Conservative party, said: "It is difficult to imagine a more serious problem in our part of the country than this one."

William Marsh, leader of the United Mine Workers union in Cape Breton, said Dosco had "robbed and raped" Cape Breton.

Dosco is a member of the British Hawker Siddeley group of companies.

Mr. MacEachen suggested that Dosco officials appear at a public meeting in Sydney Monday to answer questions from government, union and municipal leaders, but Mr. Smith said he understood Dosco officers would not attend such a meeting.

RUMORS SPREAD

Rumors spread quickly throughout the city when it was learned that Sir Arnold Hall, chairman of the Hawker Siddeley group, and Dosco Chairman T. J. Emmert were meeting in Halifax Friday with Mr. Smith's cabinet.

The two company officials were stern-faced and silent when they entered the meeting. They left with similar expressions, still refusing to comment.

The closing announcement came at 7:35 p.m.

Switchboards at newspaper offices and at radio stations were jammed with calls.

Mr. Smith, who succeeded Mr. Stanfield as premier, said his government will give immediate consideration to the possibility of placing the steel mill under the responsibility of the new Cape Breton Development Corp.

This corporation was established to oversee the phase-out over 15 years of the 6,000-man Cape Breton coal industry while, at the same time, attempting to attract new industry to the island.

For more than 60 years coal and steel have been the twin economic backbones of industrial Cape Breton, peopled by hardy descendents of settlers from Ireland and Scotland and, more recently, several continental European countries.

If Dosco succeeds in abandoning its steel mill, built in 1900 and the smallest of four Canadian basic steel plants, and if the coal mines are closed on schedule, the Cape Breton way of life could be totally altered within a few years.

While there was gloom here, there has been industrial development 80 miles away at the Strait of Canso. A pulp mill has been built and an oil refinery and heavy water plant are among plants on the drawing boards.

And there have been some new industries established near here—such as a Japanese auto-assembly plant and a heavy water plant in nearby Glace Bay. But these will employ only a few hundred.

U.S. Senate Protectionists Up in Arms

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The trade revolt scheduled for the U.S. Senate next week by the "new protectionists" may lead nowhere this congressional session.

But the U.S. government and most of the trade-conscious foreign observers here are running scared. Congress is in a cranky frame of mind, rejecting proposed tax increases, cutting poverty spending and fighting President Johnson over Vietnam. Forecasting is hazardous.

Even if no effective action is taken to restrict imports of petroleum, lead and zinc, steel, dairy products, textiles and many other items, the government is facing the first major protectionist drive in many years.

Tariff concessions gained from Canada, Europe, Japan and other major American export markets at the Kennedy Round of tariff reductions could go down the drain.

One official estimate is that the assorted restrictionist bills before Congress, if enacted, could lop $3,600,000,000 from the U.S. import bill.

CANADA A LOSER

Canada, as the biggest single U.S. supplier, potentially could lose millions of dollars worth of sales in crude oil, beef, lead and zinc, dairy products and steel.

Canadian officials concede the restrictionist climate could mean serious trouble for the Canada-U.S. auto production agreement, to be reviewed this year on its first three years.

They see no letup until next year's elections are completed in early November.

Some of the senators leading the Senate move, including Democrat Vance Hartke of Indiana, fought the 1965 legislation that eliminated North American tariffs for manufacturers of new motor vehicles and original parts.

Hartke is to introduce a bill Monday cutting imported steel, a blow mainly affecting Japan. But Canada sold $170,000,000 worth of pig iron and steel here last year. Some actually was re-exported to Canada after manufacturing.

LONG ANTI-CANADIAN

Ironically, Democrat Russell Long of Louisiana, as chairman of the Senate finance committee, is on the anti-Canadian side this time. He is holding hearings Wednesday, Thursday and Friday as chairman of the committee which seems likely to approve assorted restrictive legislation.

Long himself is sponsoring a bill that would clap a firm ceiling on Canada's crude oil exports, rising steadily since 1961. That would be the major economic setback for Canada.

Ottawa to Increase Pensions by $1.50

OTTAWA (CP) — The basic federal old-age pension will rise to $76.50 a month from $75 next year under the first automatic cost-of-living increase, informants said Friday.

Government calculations have placed the cost-of-living increase in the year ended June, 1967, at two per cent.

Coincidentally, the increase is the maximum permitted under the federal formula which hinges major pensions to cost of living increases. The minimum is one per cent.

The two-per-cent increase goes into effect at the beginning of 1968. It will also apply to the federal old-age supplement and to those who receive retirement payments under the national contributory pension plan.

The maximum old-age supplement will rise to $30.60 a month from $30. Therefore the pensioner receiving both the $75 flat figure and the full supplement will have his monthly income raised to $107.10. The increase is $2.10.

The monthly pension ceiling under the national contributory pension plan will rise to $106.25 from $104.17, up $24.96 for a full year. But the full retirement pension doesn't come into effect until 1976.

Other changes:

- Maximum earnings on which Canada Pension Plan contributions can be made will rise to $5,100 a year from $5,000.
- Maximum annual contributions to the plan by both employers and employees will rise to $81 from $79.20.
- Maximum annual contributions by self-employed people will go from $158.40 to $162.

Workers Against Strike

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP — Employees at three interior lumber companies near this Cariboo centre Friday voted not to strike to back demands for wage increases.

Employees at a fourth company voted in favor of strike action in the government-supervised ballotting.

The contracts for the lumber workers—members of the International Woodworkers of America — expired later than those of other Interior woodworkers. All are seeking parity with coast woodworkers.

Voting in favor of strike action were employees of Merrill and Wagner Ltd. Voting against were workers at Lignum Lts., a Vancouver-based company, Canim Lake Lumber and West Fraser Timber.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor Friday rejected a system of voluntary wage-price guidelines recommended by Finance Minister Sharp.

"Labor is tired of being made the sacrificial lamb for the mistakes and excesses of others," said Ray Haynes, secretary of the federation.

The federation accused the federal government of ignoring the advice of the Economic Council of Canada which rejected the practicability of income policies in Canada in a recent report.

It urged the government to implement the Carter tax recommendations to decrease consumer spending.

FRAZIER RIDES TWO MORE WINNERS . . .

. . . MUTUEL PLAY DROPS WITH SANDOWN DRIPS

Fantastic Was Word for Basil's Handling of Prince

By HAL MALONE

In horse racing, a business that can be "chancy," at the best of times, some things remain constant. Especially at soggy Sandown Park.

Would you believe rain and Basil Frazier?

Friday the 13th and all the voodoo associated with it not withstanding, Frazier was the dominant subject of conversation. (The rain was widely discussed but not precisely in complimentary language).

Frazier has the jockey crown wrapped up in his gloved hands, gloved to prevent the skin from cracking. (His hands were frostbitten in the Second World War, in which Basil served with the Marine Corps.)

But he goes out there day after day, risking his neck as all the riders do, and rides like a hungry rookie.

Most horses he gets immediately move up a couple of lengths (in the estimation of his supporters) and down a few notches on the totalizator board.

But perhaps stunned by the biting fingers of a wind that wrapped itself around Sandown Friday, the punters did not pay too much attention to two of Frazier's amounts.

They won.

Assyrian Prince returned $10.80; Top Canadian was the day's top price at $15.10.

Fantastic is an overworked word at the track but it applies to Frazier's handling of Assyrian Prince.

Lightly campaigned (this was only his 12th start) because his legs are slightly 4F, Assyrian Prince likes to get the front. He often has but when other horses shove their snouts at him, Assyrian Prince has shown a strong inclination to sit down on the curb and rest.

Pride O'Red challenged him for three-eighths, before Frazier pulled away. In the stretch Sienna Fire barrelled down on the Prince and even stuck his head in front at the 16th pole.

Somehow Frazier communicated with the Prince, held him together and in a dazzling throat-to-jugular finish stuck his lip in front on the wire.

As one Sandown observer said, "Fantastic. I can't recall any time since the meet started that Basil came into the stretch on the lead and lost the race."

His ride on First Canadian was perhaps less demanding but it bore his stamp of excellence.

He took Jimmy Halkel's gelding to the lead and let the others play "catch me if you can."

None could. Milord of Kent might have but he lost valuable lengths going wide on the first turn and gave apprentice Jim Arnold trouble by lugging in through the stretch.

Milord's aggressive elbowing precipitated a foul claim by trainer Jim McDougal. He alleged that his horse Hay Billy took all the worst of it in the stretch.

The stewards, after reviewing the films, disagreed and upheld Milord of Kent in second place. Red Repulse was a close third with Hay Billy, the 8-5 favorite, fourth.

Two other riders shared honors with two wins each. Kerry Sam, who sits low in the saddle and shows a coolness uncommon among apprentices, steered in Malheur Kitten and Akardan. Ron Arnold, now the second leading rider, took photo decisions with All Smoke and Ray Iron.

The mutuel play was $84,878, down $6,135. After 15 days, the total mutuel handle is up approximately $30,000 over the same period last year. At one stage it was up $90,000 but somebody turned on the tap and with every drip it dropped.

KINGS TO MAKE DEBUT WITH ROOKIE IN GOAL

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—Los Angeles Kings received a jolt Friday on the eve of their National Hockey League debut against Philadelphia Foyers when goalie Terry Sawchuck was injured in practice.

He will miss the first two or three games.

Sawchuk, 37, around whom the expansion team is being fashioned, took a shot on the right elbow from Brian Smith. The elbow hemorrhaged and quickly swelled.

Sawchuk's elbow was placed in a sling. He will miss the opener and will not play against Minnesota North Stars Sunday.

Sawchuk will be replaced by 25-year-old Wayne Rutledge, who played for Omaha of the Central League last year.

Penguins Post Win Over Blues

By The Canadian Press

Pittsburgh Penguins of the expanded National Hockey League posted their second impressive performance in three days as they whacked St. Louis Blues 3-1 Friday night.

Veteran forwards accounted for all three of the winners' goals. Ab McDonald opened the scoring and Art Stratton produced the winning goal in the second period. St. Louis was shorthanded for both tallies.

Earl Ingarfield stole the puck with his club a man short in the third period for the third Penguin goal.

Larry Keenan, a former Toro to farmhand with Victoria Maple Leafs, replied for the Blues.

Pittsburgh absorbed a 2-1 defeat from Montreal Canadiens, an established club, in its season opener Wednesday. Montreal officials later said the Penguins played almost well enough to win.

The teams left St. Louis immediately after the game for a rematch tonight at Pittsburgh in one of five games.

Philadelphia visits Los Angeles and Minnesota opposes California at Oakland in other Western Division games. In the established Eastern Division, Detroit Red Wings invade Montreal and Chicago Black Hawks visit Toronto.

HAWKS HAVE INJURIES

The Hawks, defending league champions, will be hampered by the absence of four valuable members of the 1966-67 club.

Left at home were all-star centre Stan Mikita, wingers Doug Mohns and Chico Maki and goaltender Denis DeJordy, who captured the Vezina Trophy last season.

Mikita suffered a pulled groin muscle during a three-game swing through West Coast cities. Maki is recovering from an appendectomy and Mohns is fighting a hamstring injury.

DeJordy, a holdout throughout the training season, finally joined the club Tuesday and is not yet in playing condition.

REAY USES ROOKIES

Several players without previous NHL experience will be used by coach Billy Reay to plug gaps. Defenceman Paul Terbenche will fill one spot and Gerry Goyer, Wayne Maki, Doug Shelton, Bill Orban and Geoff Powis will operate at forward positions.

Toronto coach Punch Imlach was not concerned with Reay's problems. Imlach used seven defencemen during a workout Friday because Larry Hillman has not signed this year's contract and Tim Horton is nursing a sore knee.

Rookie rearguards Jim Dorey, Duane Rupp and Darryl Sly are possible replacements for Hillman and Horton, or both.

Happiness for a jockey at Sandown Park these days is riding front-runner on rain-sodden racing strip. Maloney Wrecks Gulls; Head Thwarts Runners

By CANADIAN PRESS

A pair of Western Hockey League veterans found themselves doing what comes naturally Friday night — Vancouver's Phil Maloney was scoring goals and goalie Don Head was blocking shots, only this time in a Seattle uniform.

Maloney scored the first hat trick of the season when he fired in three goals to lead Vancouver to a 5-3 win over San Diego Gulls in Vancouver.

Head, who used to give Seattle fits when he tended the Portland nets, made 23 saves as the defending champions beat Phoenix 3-1 in Seattle.

San Diego took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Warren Hynes and Nick Libett, but Maloney cut the margin with only 50 seconds gone in the second.

REDAHL SCORES

Pete Panagabko tied the score and Maloney put the Canucks in front for good on a power play just 44 seconds later. He closed out the scoring on another power play with 1:29 gone in the final period.

Phoenix Roadrunners, new to the league this year but with several veterans who came with the Victoria franchise, opened the scoring in Seattle. The goal by Gordie Redahl came with Seattle's Marc Boileau sitting in the penalty box for throwing a flurry of punches at Bob Kabel.

Seattle tied it on a shot by Chuck Holmes early in the second period and went in front on Boileau's goal four minutes later. Guyle Fielder, last year's leading scorer and WHL leader in assists ran his career total to 1,089 with an assist on Boileau's tally.

Kjeld Keeps Them Out And Scores Them, Too

Claremont's Ted Clarke and Pete Mason of Oak Bay share the scoring lead in the Inter-High School Soccer League. Now Kjeld Brodsgaard wants to get into the act.

As Victoria High Tyees' goalkeeper, it is Kjeld's job to keep 'em out. Friday he showed a liking to putting 'em in.

Brodsgaard was appointed Tyees' penalty-kicker after the Vics had missed one from the spot Wednesday. Kjeld took two penalty shots Friday, scored on both as Tyees preserved their undefeated status by blanking dangerous Claremont 3-0.

Ken Kulai scored Tyees' other goal.

GAME POSTPONED

In the only other game played Friday, second-place Oak Bay hammered Esquimalt 6-0. Weather and field conditions forced postponement of a Mount View-Mount Douglas meeting.

Glen Myles, with two goals, and Mason, with his fifth, scored to spark Oak Bay. Myles, Stu Wallace of Victoria and Lorne Bunyan of Mt. Douglas all have scored four goals.

Oak Bay's other marksmen Friday were Bob Fish, Al Lima and Robin Burrell.

Pre-Season Outing Might Have Helped

Junior Cougars Bow to Kamloops In Opening Game

KAMLOOPS — About those pre-season exhibition games: don't knock 'em.

If coach Doug Anderson of Victoria Cougars has his way, exhibitions will become standard pre-season procedure for the B.C. Junior Hockey League team.

The Cougars didn't play any in their embryo season and Anderson figures that "might have made a difference" in Victoria's opening game.

Kamloops Rockets clipped the Cougars 5-3 Friday as the new provincial league parted the curtains on the 1967-68 season. A crowd of 1,508 fans—about half of the Kamloops arena's capacity—saw the opening game.

SHOOTING POOR

"I think we could have won this," said Anderson. "Our team skated as well if not better than Kamloops, but wouldn't shoot.

"I think if we could have worked in a few exhibitions, that might have made a difference."

Cougars, appearing a slightly bigger team than Ken Stewart's Rockets, were out-shot 50-25 by Kamloops. But the actual skating edge didn't appear quite as great.

While Anderson would like to believe an exhibition outing, or two, would have made a difference, Cougars' main lack Friday was positional play. Kamloops players excelled in that department whereas Cougars were continually caught out of position. It was especially so in the final half of the game when the Cats tired noticeably.

FINLAY WAS FINE

Still, there were several facets of Victoria's play that impressed Anderson and manager Bob Reid. Both expressed pleasure with the performance of goaltender Murray Finlay, defenceman Bill Mainland and the forward line of Barry Clarke, Dennis Ferrill and Neil Sanders.

Ferrill scored the game's first goal in the opening minute of play. Garth Greig, a hustling 16-year-old, popped in Victoria's other pair in the third period, after Kamloops had climbed into a 4-1 lead.

Victoria drew three of the game's four penalties, including a pair in rapid succession in the first period. Cougars were shorthanded two men for a minute, 44 seconds but managed to hold Kamloops off the scoresheet.

ON TO PENTICTON

Jim McNeill, Ken Begg, Randy Rota, Marv Ferb and Rick Beauchamp scored Kamloops' goals. McNeill counted his goal—Kamloops' first—when Victoria drew its only other penalty in the game.

Tonight, Cougars swing into Penticton to face a club that is being touted as the team to beat in the Okanagan. Victoria plays in Kelowna on Sunday, in New Westminster on Wednesday and then comes home for its first Memorial Arena game—against Penticton next Saturday.

CHASE ROUGHIES

Stamps Using New Glossary

By The Canadian Press

Calgary Stampeders this year have a new football glossary in which the words "we must win our next game" mean "Saskatchewan Roughriders won their last one."

The clubs have been jostling each other for first place in the Western Football Conference all year and they both play games in Alberta this weekend.

The leading Roughriders meet the Eskimos in Edmonton and the Stampeders face Winnipeg Blue Bombers in Calgary Sunday. B.C. Lions take on Hamilton Tiger-Cats in Hamilton in an interlocking Canadian Football League game Sunday.

"It's a must game," said Calgary general manager Roger Lehew of the contest against Winnipeg.

Roughriders are two points ahead of Calgary and each club has only four regular-season games remaining.

Bombers last weekend surrendered a 53-0 decision to an inspired Toronto Argonaut club but the Calgary glossary covers that situation with Lehew's words: "Zaleski's been doing everything psychological."

Translation: Bomber coach Joe Zaleski has shown his club his cigar-shifting tongue has a rough edge. In addition, he's pointed out Winnipeg must win to improve its chances of a playoff spot.

FEAR COMPLACENCY

Meanwhile, Stampeders coaching staff have been trying to ensure that their players don't become complacent and are reminding them that one of Calgary's three losses this year was against Winnipeg.

Lions went to Hamilton with no hope of a playoff spot and coach Jim Champion is looking to 1968.

Third-placed Eskimos also have a spur as they meet Saskatchewan: A win would improve their chances in the jockeying with fourth-placed Winnipeg for the third playoff spot in the West.

Only the B.C.-Hamilton game will be televised—on the CTV national network.

CLUB RECORDS

Calgary quarterback Peter Liske has set club records for passes thrown, touchdown tosses and yards gained. If he can pick apart Bombers' defence as Argo Wally Gabler did, he can aim for WFC marks.

NATS SIGN JIM LEMON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jim Lemon, who played baseball for Washington in the late 1950s and has been a coach for Minnesota Twins the last three years, was named manager of Washington Senators today.

Lemon, 39, succeeds Gil Hodges, who signed Wednesday to manage New York Mets.

Lemon, who played for the American League Senators from 1954 to 1960, had agreed on a two-year contract.

Ingraham Buckaroos and Victoria Press hit it off right in the opening games of the 1967-68 Stuffy McGinnis Hockey League season at Memorial Arena.

Goals by Keith Wilson and Bob Painton carried the Pressmen to a 2-1 victory over Victoria Machinery Depot while the Bucks, sparked by John Mossey's pair, dropped Drake Hotel 5-3.

Gord Wickware, Brian Andrews and Larry Larochelle scored Ingraham's other goals. Ken Stewart, Wilf Procevait and Ken Henderson were Drake marksmen.

LARRY SHEPARD SIGNED . . . . . TO MANAGE PITTSBURGH

Pirate Pilot Plans Pilfering

PITTSBURGH (AP)— Pittsburgh Pirates' new manager hopes to steal a page from a book approved by Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Cardinals.

"There weren't many people last April or May who thought they could do what they did," Larry Shepard said after signing for an estimated $20,000 Friday to manage the Pirates in 1968.

Shepard said pitching gains and some key hits are all the sixth-place Pirates need to make up the 20½ games that separated them from St. Louis in the National League this season.

He expects to succeed with the same personnel with which Harry Walker and Danny Murtaugh failed this season.

He said he would not decide on his coaches immediately, but it was learned from reliable sources that Johnny Pesky, Clyde King and Hal Smith have been fired. A fourth coach, Alex Grammas, is being considered for Shepard's staff.

"I don't think too much of anything was wrong that a few key pitching gains and some key hits wouldn't have fixed," he said.

Shepard, who managed in the minor leagues for 18 years and handled 16 of the present Pirates, joins Dave Bristol of Cincinnati as the only major league manager without any major league playing experience. Walter Alston of the Dodgers played in one game.

Shepard's first taste of the major leagues was this season as a Philadelphia coach after managing the Pirates farm club at Columbus from 1961-66. Before that, he managed six other minor league teams.

Victoria Chinooks will have to move over and share the Inter-City Junior Men's Basketball League territory that, up to now, has been their exclusive stamping grounds.

That's because a University of Victoria team has been accepted into the league.

"It could create some interesting, cross-town rivalry," commented Chinooks' manager Harold Turner.

Uvic's entry, the Jayvees, and Chinooks will open the league with a game at Oak Bay Senior High next Saturday.

Four mainland entries complete the league's lineup. Vancouver teams are Killarney, IGA, CYO Saints and North Shore.

Killarney has been strengthened by personnel from the disbanded Kerrisdale team, including the Kerries' coaches. IGA was formerly known as the YMCA team.

Maury (Moe) Turner is returning as Chinooks' coach.

Charlie Granewall will coach the new Uvic team, which will play its home games in the Gordon Head campus gym. Although the opener has had to be scheduled at Oak Bay, Chinooks' remaining home games will be played at Central Junior High.

Each team will play a 20-game schedule.

Chinook games this season will be played as part of doubleheaders with the Coffee Macs, senior "A" men's entry, and Rawlings' senior women's team.

"When Chinooks are in Vancouver," said Harold Turner, "Rawlings and Macs will play in doubleheaders here. Wherever possible, there will be doubeheaders. This should stimulate greater interest in all three inter-city teams."

THREE FOR HOLNESS

Newcomers Aid Stocker Cause

If opening introductions are an indication of things to come, Stockers North Americans could provide the big surprise in the Vancouver Island (nee Esquimalt) Hockey League.

With new additions taking care of all the scoring, Stockers shot down Queen's Own Rifles 5-3 in their season's opener at the Sports Centre on Friday.

Bob Holness, returning to the league after an absence of a few years, scored Stockers' first three goals and Nick Nicoletti, with the now-disbanded Combos last season, added the other two.

John Zeller, Dave Stones and Mick Brown scored for Rifles after Stockers had built up a 5-0 lead before an opening-night turnout of 1,295 fans.

TUDORS TIE

In the night's other game, defending champion Tudor Monarchs and University of Victoria Vikings settled for a 2-2 draw.

Vikings had to come from behind twice. Bill Rudyk and George Fuller, the latter scoring with 90 seconds remaining, scored for Uvic while Ray Gregoire and Dave Griff counted for Tudors.

From cellar to penthouse in three short years.

That's the success story of Cowichan Timbermen in the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League. Now coach Tom Yano and his Timbermen are reaching for playoff honors.

First-place finishers in the four-team league this season, Cowichan will rate as the favorite when they meet Oak Bay Farmer Construction Sunday in the first of a two-game series for the Island championship.

The first game, to be played at Carnarvon Park, will start at 2 p.m. The rematch, on Oct. 22, will be played in Cowichan.

Red's Know-How Played Key Role

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Red Schoendienst played his Cards right and became The Associated Press' National League Manager of the Year.

The soft-spoken manager teamed up with his former roommate, Stan Musial, and St. Louis Cardinals ran away with the National League pennant before beating Boston Red Sox in the World Series. The Cardinals won 101 games during the season.

Schoendienst went to spring training certain the Cards could move up from their sixth-place finish in 1966. The Cardinals finished seventh in Red's first year as a manager, 1965.

Mike Shannon's conversion from the outfield to third base played a big part in the Cardinals' success, Red said.

"It was important for more than one reason," Schoendienst pointed out." He doesn't look like a good hitter sometimes, but he gets the job done.

"And we needed a third baseman. He gave us the opportunity to use Roger Maris. If he didn't make the move I wouldn't have been able to use young players like Bobby Tolan, Alex Johnson and Ed Spiezio."

Shannon often said Schoendienst's confidence in his ability was important. Orlando Cepeda praised Schoendienst because "he treats us like men, like human beings."

YAZ RECEIVES INSTANT LAWN

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox will take some of Fenway Park's left field home with him.

The grass is being lifted up and transplanted to the Lynnfield, Mass., home of the American League's Triple Crown winner.

The grass is ripped up every year to make room for football stands used in Boston Patriots' home games in the American Football League.

Jets Release Sad Sam Jones

COLUMBUS (AP) — Columbus Jets announced Friday the unconditional release of veteran pitcher Sam Jones.

"Sad Sam," in baseball since 1950, had been with 14 different clubs in his 18-year-career, including the last four with the Jets of the International League. In four seasons here he was in 198 games, won 23, lost 20 and pitched 287 innings.

His major league career included Cleveland, Detroit and Baltimore in the American League, and Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco in the National. While with the Cubs he pitched a no-hitter.

Alvie Only Canadian To Pass PGA's Test

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Bobby Cole, 19-year-old golfer from South Africa who won the British Amateur championship last year, hung on to a one-stroke lead to win the Professional Golfers Association qualifying tournament Friday.

The 30 low shooters in the 144-hole tourney qualified to join the rich PGA tour next year.

Alvie Thompson of Toronto was the only Canadian to qualify for the tour.

Cole shot a one-over-par 73 and a 76 Friday for a 572 total. His three sub-par rounds earlier in the tourney—a 69, 68 and 71—gave him the necessary cushion to overcome his last round falter.

Thompson shot 73 and 72 Friday for a 581 total and 10th place in the tournament.

Phil Giroux, another Canadian, shot 71 and 75 Friday and ended with a 603 total. Lawrence O'Hearn of Halifax shot 788 and 77 and finished with a 604 total. Ken Fulton, another Canadian, had 74 and 77 for a 609 total. Ronald Folk of Regina shot 79 and 81 for 616 while Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver shot 77 and 80 Friday for a 625 total.

Third Crack At Ring Title

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Vincente Saldivar, a little fighting machine from Mexico, gives Howard Winstone of Wales a third shot at his world featherweight title tonight in Aztec Stadium.

Saldivar, making his seventh defence of the title he won from Sugar Ramos three years ago, has been guaranteed $80,000. Winstone, a decision loser to Saldivar in London and Cardiff, Wales, will earn about $25,000.

The 24-year-old champion, a favorite in the betting odds, has won 17 straight in nearly five years. He has a 32-1 record, including 24 knockouts. Winstone, 24, has a 58-4 record, including 24 knockouts.

BIRDS TAKE FIRST ROUND

VANCOUVER (CP) — A crowd of at least 10,000 is assured for Monday night's football clash between University of B.C. Thunderbirds and Simon Fraser University Clansmen, advance ticket sales showed today.

The game will be the first gridiron meeting between the cross-town schools.

Round one in the rivalry went to UBC after a raiding party scaled Burnaby Mountain Thursday night and burned the initials "UBC" in the Clansmen's practice field.

Toronto to Have Conacher Square

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto is to have a Conacher Square in honor of the late Lionel Conacher, Canada's all-round athlete of the first half of the century.

The parks committee has recommended that a park on Cottingham Street between Yonge Street and Avenue Road be named after Conacher, who was born in the area served by the park. He died May 26, 1954.

Do-It-Yourself Knack Pays Off

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Arnold Palmer moved into the final of the Piccadilly World Match Play golf championship against Peter Thomson of Australia today, carrying with him some knowledge he picked up in his father's pro shop a long time ago.

The 37-year-old Latrobe, Pa., master recovered his brilliant putting touch Friday to defeat Bill Casper 3 and 2, while Thomson eliminated defending champion Gary Player of South Africa 2 and 1.

Palmer, unmatchable from tee to green, was 10 under par for the 34 holes he had to play—and all 10 shots could be found in his putter. He had just 58 putts, precisely 10 under perfect figures.

Why?

"Well, I did make an adjustment," Palmer explained. "I changed the grip of my putter a little. I built it up from the back to give me more club in my hand."

CALLED ON EXPERIENCE

He worked on the club himself, employing the knowledge he learned many years ago from his father, and still uses like any simple club professional when he is dissatisfied.

Palmer canned putts from three feet to 30 feet in a burst of four straight threes which just about crushed Casper.

The 36-hole final, climaxing the three-day classic in which eight selected top stars engage in match play, carries a top prize of $14,000 for the winner. But the honor of the crown means a big boost for a golfer's earning capacities.

Deadline Tonight For Pin Entries

Tonight is the deadline for filing entries in the Victoria zone women's tenpin singles rolloff.

Bowlers will compete for the zone title at Mayfair Lanes during two weekends, starting Oct. 21 on the 20-game event.

RIGHTS TRIAL

Informer 'Boasted Of Killings'

MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP)—The name Jim Jordan—similar to that of a paid FBI informer—emerged as a central part of prosecution and defence lawyers' cases Friday in the trial of 18 men charged in the slaying of three civil rights workers near Philadelphia, Miss., in 1964.

The prosecution read a statement by one of the defendants which said Jim Jordan shot Negro James Chaney, 22, after complaining: "You didn't leave me anything but a nigger, but I'll kill me a nigger."

A defence witness said a Jim Jordan told him that he had shot two civil rights workers and a Negro.

James E. Jordan, 41, a Ku Klux Klan member, turned state's evidence Thursday and told his story of how the three civil rights workers were slain. He said he had received money from the FBI to leave the state.

Jordan also is charged but his case has been put over to another federal court. The 18 are charged with conspiracy to violate the rights of the civil rights workers.

The defence said it will call the bulk of its witnesses today in an attempt to punch holes in the justice department's case.

COURT SITS TODAY

U.S. District Judge Harold Cox ordered a rare Saturday session to expedite the trial.

Twenty-four defence witnesses testified Friday to the defendant's character and whereabouts at the time the prosecution says the workers were slain on June 21, 1964.

Defence witness Alfred Keene testified he worked with a Jim Jordan in Gulfport, La., in October, 1964. Keene said Jordan told him that he—Jordan—shot two white civil rights workers and a Negro on a June night near Philadelphia.

He said Jordan told him that he killed the two white men in the back seat of their station wagon and the Negro as he was running from the car.

The bullet-riddled bodies of Michael Schwerner, 24, and Andrew Goodman, 20, white New Yorkers, and Chaney were found buried in an earthen dam on Aug. 4, 1964, after a 44-day search.

Their charred station wagon was found June 23, 1964, about 13 miles north of Philadelphia.

The defendants are charged under an 1870 law with conspiring to violate the civil rights of the three slain workers. No state charges were ever filed. State officials have contended that the FBI refused to provide evidence necessary to prosecute.

POLICE SEIZE MARIJUANA

TORONTO (CP)—Police today said the seizure of 11 pounds of raw marijuana Thursday night was one of the largest ever made in Canada and may have cut the main supply line to Toronto.

Stanley Dobrowski, 20, of Toronto, a second-year student at University of Toronto's Victoria College, has been charged with illegal possession of marijuana.

Police said the retail value of the marijuana found in the trunk of a sports car is about $35,200.

Will Use Arms Against Apartheid—Africans

LONDON (Reuters)—Two outlawed African nationalist groups said Friday they have launched a joint armed struggle against apartheid and racial oppression in southern Africa.

The African National Congress of South Africa and the Zimbabwe African People's Union of Rhodesia said in a statement that this was "the only way through which the African people can overthrow the rule of apartheid and racial oppression practised against the African people in southern Africa."

"Having exercised superhuman patience for decades, breaking point has been reached," the statement said.

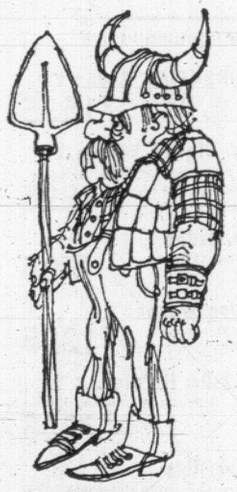

Apartheid is the segregation of the races in South Africa.

The statement said white politicians in London, Salisbury, Rhodesia, and Pretoria, South Africa, were once more "holding feverish discussions concerning the situation in South Africa and Zimbabwe (Rhodesia) without regard for the views of the 18,000,000 oppressed people in those countries."

'Most Shot-At Skipper' Dies

LONDON (AP)—Cmdr. Sir Roy Gill, known in the Royal Navy as Britain's "most shot-at skipper" of the Second World War, died suddenly at his London home Friday. He was 60.

Born in Philadelphia, Pa., the son of a British dentist, Gill was commodore of ocean convoys between 1940 and 1945. He was knighted for his work in shepherding thousands of freighters across the Atlantic, bringing munitions and food to Britain.

The 1968 Volkswagen has everything that you expect a Volkswagen to have.

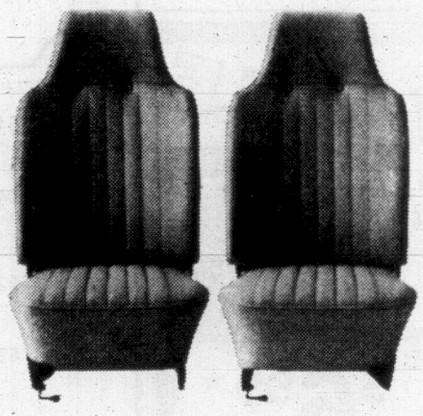

And a few things you don't.

You don't expect a Volkswagen to have some of the things that other cars have.

Like big repair bills. Big upkeep bills. Or staggering gasoline tabs. And you're right. It doesn't.

But what about a thing like comfort? In all honesty, that isn't one of the first things to flash into most people's minds when they think of a VW. And understandably so.

In all honesty, the VW doesn't particularly look like a comfortable car.

Two easy chairs up front.

But up front, there's more legroom in a little VW than there is in most big cars. And there's enough headroom for a six and half footer wearing a hat.

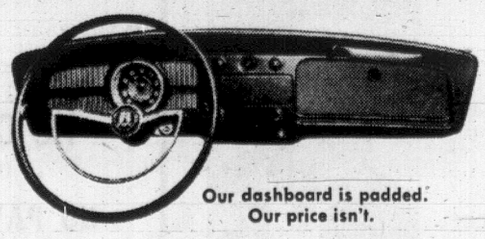

The individual bucket seats are contoured. Adjustable. Deeply cushioned. Self-locking. And this year have built-in padded headrests.

A special ventilating system scoops fresh air inside when it's warm outside.

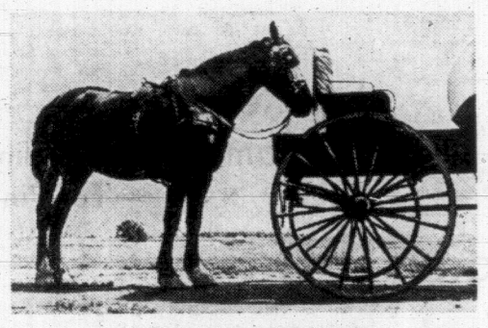

And when it's cold outside, a heater as well as a heat booster keeps you warm inside.

Another lesser known feature of the bug is its features.

Padded sunvisors. Padded armrests. Recessed door handles. Coat hooks. A four coat enamel paint job, everywhere. A cleanly designed instrument cluster. Ashtrays front and back. Map pockets. And a padded dash.

Our dashboard is padded. Our price isn't.

There are good reasons for having the engine in the rear.

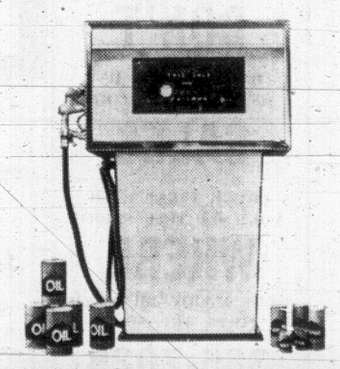

And then there's something that everybody expects a Volkswagen to have.

An engine in the back. But do you know why we put it there?

Because tucked away in the rear the way it is, with all of its weight over the drive wheels the way it should be, you get maximum traction on ice, in snow, in mud, slush or anything else unpleasant.

It's also cooled with air. So it can't freeze up. Or boil over.

And because it's in the back, it doesn't need a big, heavy drive shaft like big heavy cars. This also means it doesn't have to work as hard. And because it doesn't work as hard as other car engines, it doesn't get as tired. Or as hungry.

The VW's 66 horses don't eat much.

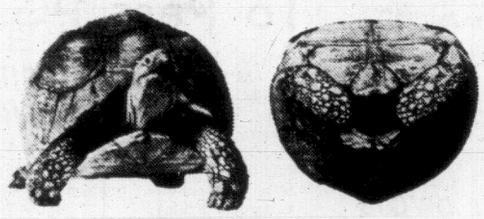

That's why 32 miles to the gallon in a VW is the rule not the exception. Why you don't need anti-freeze ever. Why an oil change only uses up five pints instead of the normal 5 quarts. Why you can drive all day and all night at over 70 and never hear a whimper.

And then all around the comfortable VW interior and the money-saving VW engine, is the famous VW body. By most standards not a Body Beautiful, but by engineering standards a beautiful body.

The reason it looks a little like a bug is because it's designed a little like a tortoise.

A tough shell of steel is welded on to a solid steel bottom. So there's nothing to rattle. Or come loose. And not only does this make the VW noiseproof, but it also makes it waterproof. Which in turn makes it rustproof.

Sticks and stones won't hurt the Bug either. The steel bottom protects a VW the same way a tortoise's bottom shell protects the tortoise.

Top and bottom view of VW body construction.

And to protect you, there are seat belts, a collapsible steering wheel this year, an energy absorbing steering column, a dual master brake cylinder and big wheels with big tires generally good for a big 40,000 miles a set.

Windows of toughened safety glass, two speed windshield wipers and outside and inside mirrors help you see where you're going. Four way safety flasher lights let other people see you when you're not going.

We also made the bumpers higher so that other cars will bump the bumpers and not the Bug.

What we didn't change very much this year (or any year for that matter) is the way the VW looks. And because we only changed things to make it work better, instead of changing things just to make it look different, we didn't have to change our price much either.

It's still under $1900 for a Custom Bug.*

Which once again this year, if you're pricing new cars, is a pretty big change.

Leafs Meet Hawks In Tonight's Hockey Opener

Hockey Night in Canada returns to the TV sets today with Toronto Maple Leafs meeting Chicago Black Hawks in the 1967-68 season opener. It will be seen on Channels 2 and 6 beginning at 5:30.

Tonight's game will be colorcast from Maple Leaf Gardens with commentators Bill Hewitt, Brian McFarlane and Ward Cornell.

In Montreal, the games will be handled by Danny Gallivan, Dan Kelly and Dick Irvin, Jr.

In addition to the six regular NHL teams, hockey fans will get a chance to see the new expansion teams from time to time.

Interview Romney

Governor George Romney (R.—Mich.) will be the guest on "Meet the Press" Sunday, at 5 p.m. on Channel 5, from Detroit.

Interviewing Governor Romney will be David S. Broder, of the Washington Post; Alan Otten, of the Wall Street Journal; John Chancellor, NBC News correspondent; and Lawrence E. Spivak, producer and permanent panel member of "Meet the Press."

NBC News correspondent Edwin Newman will be the moderator.

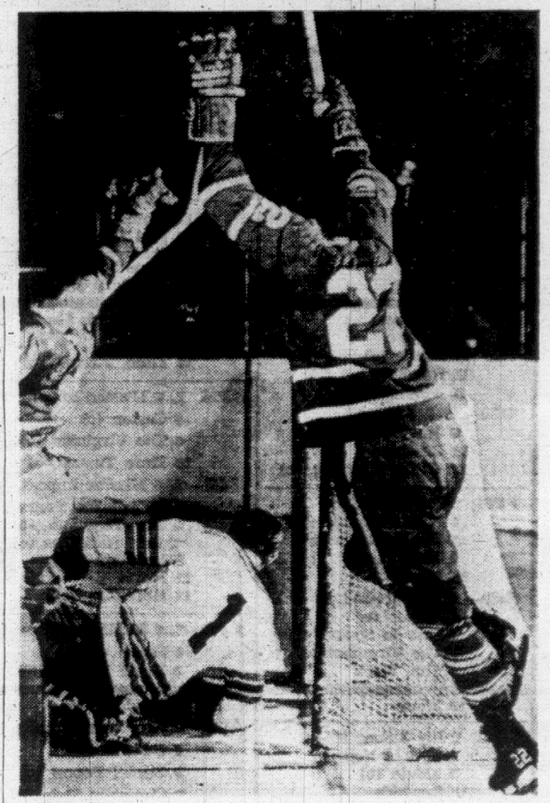

'Baby Bandit'

Bantamweight Jose Luis Valdovinos faces Cowboy Billy Smith in the main event on the Saturday Night Fights, tonight at 11:20 p.m., in color on Channel 5.

The 20-year-old Valdovinos, often called the "Baby Bandit" by his supporters, was rated No. 12 until his recent Los Angeles win over Raul Herrera in 10 rounds. With a 13-1 record thus far, Valdovinos will be shooting for his 4th straight TV win in the match with Smith.

Cowboy Billy Smith of Steubenville, Ohio, has a record of 21-3 with 12 KO's to his credit since turning pro in '63. He possesses a terrifying right hand that has been responsible for many of his wins.

Dick Enberg and Mickey Davis will call the action from the Olympic Stadium in Los Angeles.

THIS IS the kind of action fans can expect when Hockey Night in Canada resumes broadcasting tonight at 5:30 on Channels 2 and 6.

GUESTS on the Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour, Sunday, at 9 p.m., on Channels 7, 8 and 12, are Simon and Garfunkel. Also appearing on the show will be Pat Paulsen, Kate Smith, Louis DaPron Dancers and the Nelson Riddle Orchestra.

Long, Hot Summer

An examination of the causes and events surrounding the recent summertime racial riots is offered on "Challenge," Sunday, at 6 p.m., in color over Channel 4.

In "It's Been a Long, Hot Summer," the clergy panel reviews the mass misunderstandings and subsequent racial reactions that have erupted throughout the nation.

"Challenge" panel members are Dr. Lynn Corson, senior minister at University Methodist Temple; Rabbi Raphael Levine, senior rabbi at Temple de Hirsch, and Father William Treacy, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church.

Dr. Corson, who visited the scene of the New Jersey violence shortly after it subsided, observes that residents outside the riot-torn area had little cognizance of the real problem. Since it had not actually "touched" them, they felt little compunction to pursue a course of action that might prevent similar action in the future.

The panel discusses the average American citizen's awareness of the intricate racial problems, and stresses that if riots are to be prevented in the future, everyone must work toward a solution, not just those residing in the so-called "ghettos."

'Southern Songbird'

"Songbird of the South," Kate Smith, singers Simon and Garfunkel and actor-comedian Ronnie Schell join Tom and Dick Smothers with Pat Paulsen in "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" Sunday, at 9 p.m., in color on Channels 7, 8, and 12.

Miss Smith sings "The Splendor of You," then teams with Tom Smothers for "You'll Never Walk Alone" as she tries to teach him her expansive vocal style.

Simon and Garfunkel sing "Overs" and "Punky's Dilemma."

Schell, a co-stary on "Good Morning World" on the CBS-Television Network, reminisces with Tom and Dick about their mutual association in the past, then delivers a comedy monologue followed by a pantomime.

Tom and Dick Smothers perform a comedy song-and-dance routine to "Me and My Shadow." Later Dick, representing the Smothers Political Poll, inquires into the presidential preferences of an assortment of wild characters portrayed by Pat Paulsen, Gino Conforti and Leigh French.

In the finale the Smothers Brothers, Miss Smith and Schell combine with Paulsen and the other comedy regulars in a musical farce in which a band of spirited evangelists try to rescue a bellicose bum from skid row.

BILL COSBY
. . . a teacher?

He May Wait A Long Time To Get Wish

Bill Cosby has often stated publicly that he hopes eventually to give up show business to teach school in his hometown of Philadelphia, but if the public's acclaim for this entertainer continues at its present pace, Cosby may be the oldest teacher ever to take up the profession.

Now in his third year as co-star of NBC-TV's "I Spy" in the role of agent Alexander Scott, Cosby is one of the busiest and most sought-after performers in the entertainment world.

He won not only world-wide popularity among television viewers in his first season on the show—which, incidentally, marked his debut as a dramatic actor—but he walked off with top acting laurels by winning an Emmy. He won another Emmy in the same category the past season.

While meeting his starring role commitments to his daily film schedule on "I Spy," Cosby was still able to fulfill weekend concert dates 10 months out of the year throughout the United States.

During each production hiatus, the Cosby name graces marquees at the top night spots and hotels from Reno and Las Vegas to Miami. He has not had a vacation in three years.

COMEDY ALBUMS

Add to this, record-breaking sales of comedy albums, motion picture offers that pour in regularly, television guest appearances, plus TV specials which he will headline as well as produce, and you have the Bill Cosby of today. He is not yet 30 years old.

Born and raised in Philadelphia, Cosby had a comedy bent as early as grade school. He created his first impromptu comedy routine for his fifth grade classmates. It was a performance that, if nothing else, proved that his instructor indeed recognized a comedy talent when she saw it since she thought it good enough to request an encore.

An excellent athlete, Cosby often neglected his studies and after repeating the 10th grade, left school to join the navy. He finished high school while still in the service and when he was discharged, enrolled at Temple University with the intention of becoming a physical education teacher.

Cosby is married to the former Camille Hanks whom he met in 1964 when she was a student at the University of Maryland. They reside in Beverly Hills, Calif. with their two daughters Erica, 2, and Erinn Shalene, 1.

American Look at Canada

Cameras Roam Coast to Coast In Hour Special

The diversity of Canada and its people is explored by NBC News in "American Profile: Canada Faces the Future", a one-hour color special to be presented on Channel 5, Friday at 10 p.m.

Stuart Schulberg is the producer and director. NBC News correspondent Sander Vanocur is the on-camera reporter.

Mr. Schulberg's cameras roam from one end of Canada to the other, showing the diversity of the people, many of their colorful customs, much of the beautiful land.

Viewers will see, among other things, the Nova Scotia fishing area, the majestic Rockies of the west, folk dancing, and traditional ceremonies like the changing of the guard at Parliament Hill in Ottawa.

A graphic account of 20,000,000 people in search of a nation, "Canada Faces the Future", depicts a people spread out over a vast land of difficult communications, a people made up of diverse nationalistic groups that are creating a nation far different from the melting pot pattern of the United States.

British Canada is described—from Cape Breton at the tip of Scottish Nova Scotia over to Ontario, skipping Quebec, and on to Victoria, where the English syndrome persists most stubbornly and is reflected in tea and lawn bowling and news of the Queen Mother. Ralph Cowan, Liberal MP from Toronto, expresses some personal opinions on British Canada.

The British have become a minority in Canada, which is now one-third British, one-third French, and one-third immigrant. The so-called "New Canadians," especially the 1,500,000 Ukrainians centred in the prairie provinces, steadfastly retain their ethnic characteristics. In this segment of the program viewers will visit a typical Ukrainian village in Manitoba, hear from a Ukrainian newspaper editor and also from Peter Newman, the influential Canadian columnist.

Mr. Vanocur examines the growing American influence—financial and cultural in talks with Harold Town, the well-known Canadian painter, and Tommy Douglas, head of the New Democratic Party, which may soon take over from the Conservatives the main opposition to Prime Minister Pearson and the Liberals.

Viewers will see the encroachment of American habits and customs in the country and the effects of investment from below the border. Mr. Vanocur and Mr. Schulberg go to the Americanized boomtown of Calgary, where thousands of Americans work in the oil industry of Alberta. There Louisiana-born Eddie Laborde, a local oilman, explains why he

The program spotlights the gave up his U.S. citizenship. original conflict between the French and British interests and the military campaign which resulted in making Canada a part of the British Empire. Quebec became eventually a French island within the confederation, which is celebrating its 100th year, and viewers will see and hear from Quebecers what that means to them today. Both Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau, creator of Expo, and Pierre Bourgault, Quebec separatist leader, are interviewed.

Divorce, Politics

Sketches on politics and divorce, Hollywood-style, highlight the next Bob Hope comedy special, in color, to be telecast Monday at 9 p.m. Debbie Reynolds, Steve Lawrence and Eydie Gorme are guest stars, appearing with Hope in skits and sharing the musical spotlight, on Channels 2, 5 and 6.

Bob and Debbie team up to spoof the political scene, as Boss Greed (Hope) conducts a search to find a candidate to oppose former child star Debbie Dimples for Congress. A quartet of possible candidates are all played by Miss Reynolds, who also appears as Debbie Dimples.

In the divorce sketch, Bob and Eydie Gorme portray a Hollywood couple on the eve of their divorce, with Steve Lawrence making his contribution as Rossano Pasta, an Italian movie star who is "the other man."

Miss Gorme and Lawrence also appear with Bob Hope in a sketch portraying life in the Haight-Ashbury section of San Francisco, the hippie

THE PSYCHEDELIC sounds of the Jefferson airplane highlight the proceedings when the O'Keefe Centre presents "The Rock Scene—Like It Is!" on CBC television, Monday, at 8 p.m., on Channels 2 and 6. Also featured on this first of six hour-long color specials are The Doors, Dionne Warwick, Sergio Mendez and his band, Eric Andersen and Don Thompson's 25-man orchestra.

With Hope as a hippie, they sing in trio, "If My Friends Could See Me Now."

'Killing Ground'

"You know what that is out there, Daddy? . . . That is the killing ground out there!"

Randall, a Negro youth who drops out of the night into a shabby Brooklyn candy store, is describing dark streets outside.

Slow Dance on the Killing Ground, the widely-acclaimed Broadway play by William Hanley, will be seen in a TV adaptation written by the playwright for CBC-TV's Festival. Produced and directed by Melwyn Breen, it will be telecast on the series Wednesday at 9:30 p.m. over Channels 2 and 6.

Three people come together in a dreary little store near the Brooklyn Bridge—Randall, a fast-talking and bizarre young man; Mr. Glas, the shopkeeper, and Rosie, a girl in search of an abortionist.

All three are guilt-ridden. As they live out the night together they reveal their separate hells. And as Randall keeps pointing out to Mr. Glas, "there's no hiding place."

Festival's television version of Slow Dance on the Killing Ground stars Billy Dee Williams as Randall, Gillie Fenwick as Mr. Glas, and Marilyn Lightstone as Rosie.

Mr. Smythe

Conn Smythe, one of the most notable figures in Canadian sports in the last half-century, is the subject of a half-hour, color profile on CBC-TV's Telescope 67, Thursday at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

For the program, cameras followed the colorful Mr. Smythe to Maple Leaf Gardens, one of the most admired arenas in North America, built by Smythe during the depression; to his office and in his country home near Toronto.

The 73-year-old Smythe was born a slap-shot away from the site of the Gardens, as he points out on the program, and lived and breathed hockey from the time he was a youngster. The son of an Irish father and English mother, Smythe attended Upper Canada College, where he supposes he was the "poorest kid there," and then University of Toronto, where he captained the varsity hockey team.

There's No Beeps

Ed Sanders and his pop-rock group, The Fugs, have been in so much trouble with police authorities and other guardians of public morals, that they have become famous.

Their TV interviews contained so many electronic bleeps to censor out their expressive language, that they took to saying their own bleeps instead.

On Thursday at 3 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6 popular daytime public affairs show, Take 30, presents a half-hour visit in New York City with Ed Sanders . . . with no bleeps. Take 30 considers this fact is some sort of record, because Ed Sanders is a very bleepy boy.

Perhaps it was the presence of charming lady interviewer Adrienne Clarkson, who kept her composure throughout the conversation with Sanders as they sat close together on a mattress in Ed's East Village bookstore called The Peace Eye Gallery. There was no other furniture.

Although many adults find The Fugs a travesty on their beliefs and other things they hold dear, the younger people find them their cup of tea.

Cattle Drive

A look at the "old west" way of driving cattle to grazing land is featured on "Exploration Northwest," Tuesday at 7 p.m. in color over Channel 4.

In "Okanogan Cattle Drive," a family of nine in Riverside, Washington (near Omaha), stages its annual, one-day cattle drive from the ranch to summer grazing ranges nearly 20 miles away.

The Harry Hubbard family, with the assistance of other Riverside youngsters, are wranglers in the drive—all on horseback. Many of the participants are from pioneer families in the area, and are continuing a tradition their ancestors knew well.

Modern equipment, including trucks to carry easily-tiring calves is used, but the atmosphere is straight out of history.

Part of the drive takes them down the main street of Riverside, in addition to a stop for a traditional chuckwagon lunch, midway in the trek.

Eastern Church To Be Restored

By DON McLEOD

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Use of one piece of Newfoundland history to assure the preservation of another has succeeded in raising $1,400 for restoration of Christ Church at Quidi Vidi, a monument to an early ill-fated ecumenical movement.

Mrs. Norman Gooderich, publicity chairman of the Newfoundland Historic Trust, said Thursday night the showing of the movie The Viking Sept. 8 has netted enough to assure payment for heavy structural work on the 133-year-old church.

About $1,200 was realized from the showing of the movie —Canada's first feature sound film—in Memorial University's Little Theatre. Another $200 has come in since then as donations, possibly resulting from two subsequent television screenings of the movie here last month.

The money brought cash returns from all drives to $5,400. About $1,500-$2,000 in materials has been amassed and volunteer labor has been assured for some 30 to 50 per cent of the reconstruction task.

BUILT IN 1824

An Anglican place of worship since 1843, the church was built nine years before that, ostensibly to serve Anglicans, Methodists and Congregationalists in Quidi Vidi village, a tradition-steeped fishing enclave now encircled by St. John's.

Some say the early church-union movement failed over the distribution of rum tots to workmen building the structure, a practice to which the tee-talling Methodists took exception.

Eventually the church fell into such disrepair that Anglican authorities at St. John's said it would be cheaper to build a new one than it would to restore it and, in any event, Quidi Vidi residents could easily attend other churches in St. John's.

They de-consecrated it and it was to be torn down when the historic trust was formed, primarily to save the church.

The problem was money and despite a fund drive and other donations the thing that put the first phase of work over the top and assured contractors their bills would be paid was the decision to show The Viking for the first time in Newfoundland, where it was made.

SHOT IN CHURCH

Scenes in the story, a portrayal of the life of sealers ashore, were shot in the church itself by cameramen working for New York director Varick Frissell in 1930.

He hired the sealer Viking,

"THE GLORIOUS IMPOSSIBLE"

MIRACLE is claimed by missionary Mrs. Robert Parkinson who found safety after liner was torpedoed in 1942. Her husband drowned.

Divine Hand Led to Safety

By THOMAS CRIBBENS
Times Church Editor

When the Canadian liner Lady Hawkins was torpedoed in the South Atlantic in 1942, Rev. and Mrs. Robert J. Parkinson and a number of other passengers jumped into the dark sea.

Mr. Parkinson was never seen again and 250 of the 300 odd passengers were believed drowned. But his wife found a lifeboat and was saved.

"It's a miracle I found it," Mrs. Parkinson said in Victoria today. "It was 2 a.m. and I seemed to be swimming around for hours, not knowing where I was going, when suddenly I had an urge to strike out in a particular direction.

"And it led me straight to one of our lifeboats. There were 76 of us aboard that boat and we drifted for five days and nights. Some of us died before we were picked up by a U.S. passenger boat and taken to Puerto Rico."

Mrs. Parkinson believes she received divine guidance when swimming around in the South Atlantic with no light to guide her — and she will speak of this in a talk to the congregation of Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

At 11 a.m. she will be guest speaker at North Douglas Pentecostal.

Mrs. Parkinson, born at Brockville, Ont., in now national director of the Women's Missionary Council of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, in Toronto.

TRINIDAD

Previously she was active in many missionary fields. When she and her husband were torpedoed in 1942, they were bound for a missionary posting at Trinidad.

After being picked up and landed at Puerto Rico, Mrs. Parkinson decided to go on alone. She flew to Trinidad and carried on active missionary work for three years before moving on to other places.

Will she remain in Toronto indefinitely?

"Who knows?" says Mrs. Parkinson. "I may have an urge to go to Montreal — or Peking. To be a true missionary you must be ready to go anywhere."

Assistant Priest Fixes Antiques

A clergyman whose hobby is refinishing antiques has been appointed assistant priest at St. John's Anglican Church, Victoria.

Rev. Leonard Jenner has a fine collection of antiques at his home at 935 Balmoral and is especially interested in Canadiana.

Born in Ontario, Mr. Jenner took his clerical training at Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Que. Before ordination, he undertook a lay ministry at the Sept-Iles iron ore company for six months.

JENNER
. . . his hobby

After ordination, he served three years at St. George's Church, Guelph, and built up a young people's fellowship of more than 100. In the field of Christian education he set up libraries and teacher training courses and worked with youth at the deanery and diocesan levels.

Mr. Jenner then moved to the Cariboo and became vicar of the three-point parishes of Lillooet, Pemberton and Bralorne.

Again he made great strides with young people of the community and became chaplain to the Canadian Legion and the Sea Cadets of St. Croix.

ESCAPES DEATH

Last Christmas Day, while en route to take services at Bralorne, he narrowly escaped death when his car was demolished by a rockslide.

From Lillooet he moved to St. Phillip's Anglican Church, Vancouver and again became much involved in young people's work.

"He is a valuable addition to our staff," says Canon Grahame Baker, rector of St. John's.

Monday Start Set On New Sanctuary

Construction of a sanctuary for Cadboro Bay United Church will begin Monday.

A sod-turning ceremony will be held following the Sunday morning service.

The sanctuary will adjoin the Sunday school wing of the Edward F. Church Hall on Arbutus Road. It will be small but of striking architectural design to complement the modern architecture of the hall.

The Edward F. Church Hall was named after Rev. Edward F. Church who started the Cadboro Bay United congregation in 1960. Mr. Church is still living in the neighborhood, but has been succeeded as minister by Rev. C. Leighton Streight.

At a recent meeting, the congregation approved a bid of $49,185 by E. J. Hunter Construction Co. The church will be of standard frame construction on a slab foundation. The exterior will have large windows and a rough plaster finish.

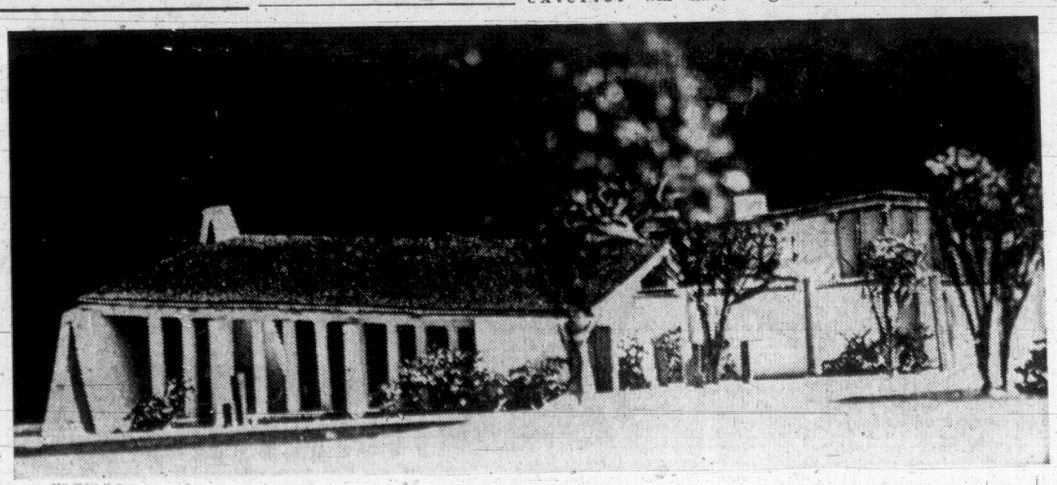

The narthex at the back of the sanctuary has been planned so that it can be used for small group meetings. The main part of the sanctuary itself will have a feeling of space due to the long upward slope of the ceiling to the chancel end.

VOICES TO BLEND

The choir will be seated beside the congregation and at right angles to it, so that the voices of the two groups will blend as one chorus.

The baptismal font, communion table and pulpit will be manufactured by the contractor from Japanese cherry plywood and solid stock. The pews also will be manufactured by the contractor.

"We hope to hold services in the new sanctuary early in the new year," a church spokesman said.

SPRAWL-CONTROL

Bylaw Fails to Slow C. Saanich Building

Despite a temporary bylaw restricting sub-divisions in farming areas to a five-acre minimum, home construction continues at an accelerated pace in Central Saanich.

The bylaw was enacted three months ago pending a sub-division bylaw being prepared by the Capital Region Planning Board and a report on the location of a pipe line for a proposed sewage project.

Municipal officials felt these two factors would tend to discourage building—at least until the pipe line route was made known as this would indicate the best areas for housing. The objective was to prevent sprawl.

But this has not proved to be the case. Construction permits issued last month totaled $143,250, compared to a total of $44,500 in September of last year. Most of these were for housing.

Figures for the first nine months of the year record a total of 141 permits to the value of $1,336,880, an increase of $200,430 for the same period in 1966.

Municipal officials said building is taking place on sub-divisions which were approved before the subdivision restrictions were enacted.

"But even then we felt that building would slow down until the sewer report was made known," said municipal clerk Fred Durrand. "But this isn't so."

Most of the development is taking place in the Tanner Road district.

There are three subdivisions in the process of being developed, one with 19 lots. The others have 13 and 8 lots.

BURST OF ENERGY marked start of Fleet School Walking Race Friday in which 14 teams of six members each competed over four-mile course. Winner was Bos'n Division which covered ground in 41 minutes, five seconds to beat other teams from CFB Esquimalt. Race was along Colville, Tillicum, Gorge and Admirals back to parade square in the barracks.

CAS Finds Parents Of Abandoned Child

NEWMARKET, Ont. (CP)—York County Children's Aid Society said Friday it has found the parents of a four-year-old girl abandoned with John Winters, 24, and his 22-year-old wife.

The girl, Heather, was left "just for a weekend" by a couple who took 14 dogs, nine cats and two birds with them and never returned.

CAS Director Donald Van Camp said the parents denied abandoning the child. He did not reveal their identities or any other details.

The society has said Heather can stay with the Winters until the society investigates her case. The couple have a three-year-old daughter of their own and wish to adopt the girl.

They occupy a one-bedroom apartment while Mr. Winters attends the Institute of Trades School in Toronto, 30 miles south of here.

For Our Sins

"Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." (I John 4:10). This is the Golden Text from this week's Bible Lesson on the "Doctrine of Atonement" to be read in all Christian Science churches on Sunday.

LAYMEN WANT BISHOPS AT MEETING

Communication Lack Hit

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Delegates to a world congress of Roman Catholic laymen are complaining of a lack of communication between their meetings and those of Pope Paul's synod of bishops taking place simultaneously.

Informed sources said some seminar groups of the third world congress of the lay apostolate were circulating a memorandum Friday asking for more collaboration between the 2,500-delegate congress and the history assembly of the 200 synod bishops.

The memorandum was said to ask, among other things, that the bishops sit in on the laymen's seminars.

Lay officials say they are especially disturbed because they were told Pope Paul had planned for the congress and the synod to meet at the same time and that this had significance.

So far, they said, they cannot see what this significance is.

Some laymen also are fuming over what they consider an attempt by the hierarchy to muzzle their debates.

A directive by Maurice Cardinal Roy of Quebec, head of two Vatican lay agencies, told bishops at the congress that they must not intrude in the laymen's debates but should correct any doctrinal errors that might crop up in the discussions. His aides say the move is intended to give a freer rein to the discussions.

Child Welfare Group Organized on Island

A new branch of an international organization dedicated to child welfare has been formed on the Island.

Only a few months old, the Island branch of the Association for Childhood Education is recruiting parents, teachers and anyone interested in helping youngsters.

The group is already planning its first project, an Oct. 21 workshop airing the pressures on children, conducted by phychologist Andrew Mikita.

The chapter met recently to hear about trends in U.S. public education from Rebecca Mauzey, field secretary of A.C.E. Island branch.

So far, teachers of kindergarten and primary school form the core of the 18-member A.C.E. Island branch.

"But we're looking for parents," says spokesman Mrs. J. B. Mills of 1710 Richmond.

"It seems everyone in education has an organization, but parents have been left in the cold."

The new group is not directly connected with the Victoria branch of the A.C.E., which celebrated its 20th anniversary recently.

Mrs. Mills said the Island branch's general approach to childhood education is that experience, creativity and self-expression are important.

President of the Island branch is Mrs. R. D. Waterfield of 5206 Old West Saanich Road, a kindergarten teacher.

LOVE LOSES MATCH TO SOCCER

WARSAW (AP)—A man and wife recently presented themselves before the divorce court in Kielce, central Poland.

She was asking for divorce on grounds of mental cruelty.

"He's not interested in me, not in anything but soccer," she told the judge. "He remembers the dates and results of all matches, but he doesn't even remember the date of our wedding."

"It's a lie," the husband exclaimed. "I married you on the day when the Blues beat the Ostroweic club."

At that point the judge stopped the proceedings and granted the woman a divorce.

Abortion Proposal Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Bar Association's proposals on legal abortion came under sharp fire from professional colleagues and laymen on the Commons health committee Thursday.

For more than three hours association president Gordon Cooper of Halifax and Ronald C. Merriam of Ottawa, secretary, were grilled by the MPs about association resolutions suggesting wider grounds for legally terminating pregnancies.

They protested at times that the precise wording of the bar's resolutions was meant merely as a guideline and shouldn't be taken as anything more than that.

Retorted Robert Stanbury (L—York-Scarborough), a lawyer: "As the parent body of lawyers, it seems strange to me you would propose a model bill so full of holes as this one. Any legislature that passed it would be incompetent as well as ill-advised."

DISCUSSED PROPOSAL

Much of the discussion centred on a bar association proposal that abortions be made legal when pregnancy results from a sexual offence, such as rape or incest, provided a provincial "termination board" approves.

Stanbury, noting the recommendation that provinces pass "termination of pregnancy" acts setting up termination boards, said he failed to find any provision in the draft for consent of a woman under age 21 to an abortion being performed.

Good Samaritan Fined

MAYERTHORPE, Alta. (CP) — Albert Romeo, a Sandudo, Alta., farmer, was commended, then fined $50 Tuesday because he carried home and cared for an injured fawn. Mr. Romeo was charged under a section of the Alberta Game Act prohibiting any person from handling, possessing or keeping in captivity any animal wild by nature.

along with its captain, for trips to the ice to shoot scenes of storms on the ice which many say have never been equalled.

His newly-formed Newfoundland-Labrador Film Co. made an agreement with Paramount of Hollywood to distribute the film, but there was a requirement it include a love story. Frissel worked this in, setting up a climatic re-union of sealer-hero Luke and his girl, Mary Jo, in Christ Church.

Hollywood wanted better shots of icebergs and Frissel tried to oblige, sailing again on the Viking with a cargo of dynamite he was going to use to turn an iceberg over—an awesome spectacle—and film the event.

On March 14, 1931, the vessel was a few miles off the Horse Islands near the northern tip of insular Newfoundland when the ship was torn apart by a series of explosions, killing 27 among 142 aboard. Frissel was among those who died.

LOCKED IN VAULT

For more than 25 years the single surviving print of The Viking remained locked in a vault at Job's fish plant here before it was rescued, recognized as a Canadian milestone and sent to Ottawa to be copied on modern film.

The original was stored in the federal archives at Beaconsfield, Que., where the 35-mm cellulose nitrate film went up in flames along with another 1,000,000 feet of historic footage in a fire in 1964.

The copy shown here last month is the only one now in existence. It had been the property of President Don Jamieson of the Newfoundland Broadcasting Corp., Liberal MP for Burin-Burgeo, who donated it to the Newfoundland archives at the time of its black-tie showing here Sept. 8.

'Christianity Roots In Drug Taking Cult'

NEW YORK (AP) — An expert on the Dead Sea scrolls today dismissed as "sheer fantasy" the claims of a British professor that the scrolls suggest that Christianity had its roots in a drug-taking cult akin to LSD trippers.

Rev. James A. Sanders, a biblical scholar and member of a 12-man international team working on the scrolls, said "no evidence whatever" has been found of such a condition.

He referred to remarks in London Friday by John Marce Allegro, lecturer at Manchester University, who said his studies of the scrolls indicate the New Testament was "just a cover story" for Christianity's actual origins.

Allegro, a Hebrew-language specialist who is one of two British representatives on the international team, said when the precursors of Christianity, the Old Testament prophets, had visions, they were probably "taking a trip" on LSD or something akin to it.

World Mission Meeting Friday

A three-day world mission will be held in Fairfield United Church starting Friday at 7 p.m.

It will feature displays on India, Japan, China, Africa, the Caribbean and Canada.

At 8 p.m. there will be a talk by Dr. Lorna Grant, a recent graduate in medicine from UBC, who is soon leaving for India.

The film Helicopter Canada will be shown and the exhibits will be open again after the program.

For Our Sins

"Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." (I John 4:10). This is the Golden Text from this week's Bible Lesson on the "Doctrine of Atonement" to be read in all Christian Science churches on Sunday.

HYPEROPIA
Hyperopia or farsightedness is present in more than six out of 10 people. Often in this condition both distant and close objects are seen clearly. The reason for this is that the focusing mechanism in the eye can overcome the defects of farsightedness and produce clear vision. This means that the focusing mechanism must be constantly at work, if clear vision is to be obtained and thus a mechanism that is primarily intended for close work only, is constantly in use in a farsighted person. This constant use often produces fatigue, eyestrain and headaches and frequently tends to make the eyes turn toward each other. When farsightedness is corrected by glasses the focusing mechanism is allowed to relax and assume its normal role and comfortable efficient vision is again obtained. It is advisable to have your eyes examined at least every two years.

A song and dance from her native Japan will be performed by charming University of Victoria exchange student Shizuko Ito, as part of The Orient, a Folk Arts Fiesta episode devoted to the exotic artistry of the Near East and South Pacific.

Arranged by
AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

One of four major Canadian ethnic groups to appear in the Fiesta is Les Danseurs St. Laurent de Quebec, a company of dancers which has specialized in the dances of the Valley of the St. Lawrence from whence it derives its name. Les Danseurs St. Laurent have appeared in festivals in Toronto, Ottawa, Washington, D.C., New York and Tours, France, and have recently completed a long engagement at Expo 67. Their director is Guy Thomas.

FIESTA!

Newcomer to Victoria musical ranks, but one who has already established a reputation, is tenor David Galbraith. Mr. Galbraith will appear as soloist in the United Kingdom sequence and in Songs and Dances of Spain, which will also feature the Wynn Shaw Dancers.

Like a huge canvas upon which many painters have applied color and which they have enriched with a variety of individual design motifs, Canada has had the benefit, throughout the century of Confederation and in the preceding centuries, of being imprinted with the arts of many peoples of the old world. It is in acknowledgment of this heritage that a Folk Arts Fiesta is to take place at McPherson Playhouse next Friday and Saturday.

The event is under the patronage of the Canadian Folk Arts Council and Centennial Commission which have provided a total of $13,000 for participation of groups from across Canada.

It is sponsored by the Greater Victoria Centennial Society.

Ethnic groups coming to take part are the Danseurs St. Laurent of Quebec, the Polish Sokol Choir and Dancers from Winnipeg and the Dnipro Ukrainian Dance Ensemble from Vancouver.

In addition, an outstanding Italian soprano soloist, Yolande Di Paolo of Edmonton will appear.

West Coast Indian writer and artist, George Clutesi, will act as Narrator and will also bring his group of dancers from the Indian Residential School at Alberni, to open the Fiesta with the traditional dances of his people.

Victoria artists and groups participating are Gail Bamford, Canadian Highland Dance champion; singers David Galbraith, Irene Boese and David Conrad, pianist Grace Timp, the Don Kyle Singers, the Sons of Norway, Victoria Scottish Country Dancers, Jerry Gosley and his Pearlies, the Al Denoni Accordion Quintet, the Wynn Shaw Dancers, Jack and Bessie Tang, Shizuko Ito, piper Stephen Geddes, dancer David Watling, Syrinder Bains and Tica Hong and Philippine Dancers.

Co-directors of the program are Nancy Ferguson and Audrey St. Denys Johnson. A team consisting of Tom Putnam, Michael Whitfield and Maurice Johnson is responsible for stage design, lighting and production technique.

The usual intermission will be replaced by a half-hour during which an international food-tasting party will be held in the theatre foyers.

In charge of this unique feature is Miss Muriel Johnson, supervisor of Home Economics for Victoria Schools.

A highlight of the Fiesta will be the appearance of the distinguished Polish "Sokol" Choir and dancers from Winnipeg. Director of the choir is Richard Seaborn, former concert master and assistant conductor of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra. The Sokol Choir has been featured on both CBC radio and television. The appearance in Victoria will be the ensemble's first visit to Western Canada.

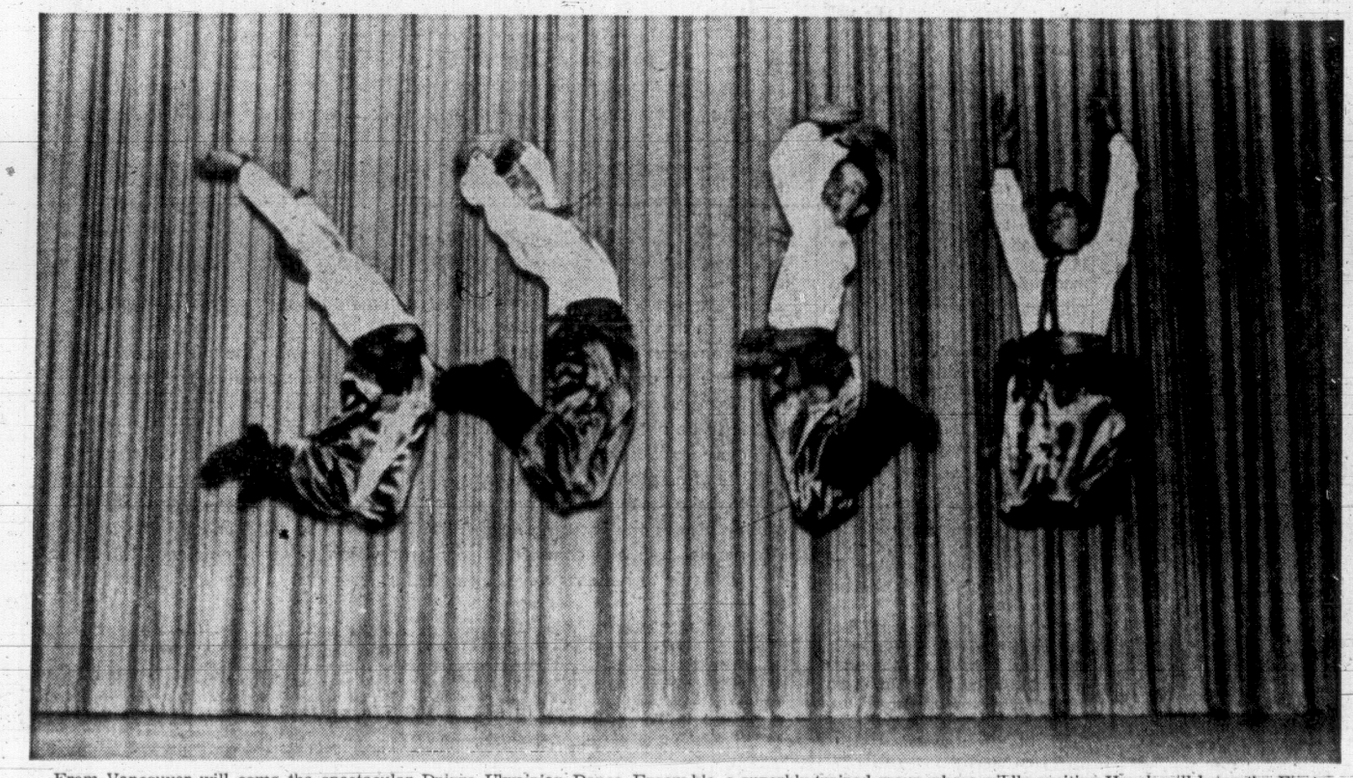

A touch of the shamrock in the sequence devoted to songs and dances of the United Kingdom will be provided by young David Watling, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Watling, Kelly Road, who dances a spirited jig.

Well-known Chinese couple, Jack and Bessie Tang, add jewel-like color and beauty with one of the legendary dance-mimes of their ancestral country's ancient culture.

From Vancouver will come the spectacular Dnipro Ukrainian Dance Ensemble, a superbly-trained group whose wildly-exciting Hopak will bring the Fiesta program to a dazzling conclusion. Men of the group are remarkable for their phenomenally athletic, Cossack-like performance of leaps and twists.

NORTH COWICHAN

Election Race Taking Shape

NORTH COWICHAN—Claude Green is to contest the reeveship with incumbent Donald Morton, December 9.

The present chairman of Cowichan hospital board, Mr. Green announced his candidature this morning, confirming rumors which have persisted for several weeks.

In a statement Mr. Green said, "For the past six months residents of North Cowichan have on numerous occasions asked me to consider contesting the reeveship.

"During the past month the pressure has increased tremendously, so much so that, after giving the matter considerable thought, I'm now convinced I may have something to contribute."

POLICY LATER

Mr. Green said he will be making a "policy and program" statement at a later date.

A member of his campaign committee, Mel Massey, said an "enthusiastic" group meeting was held Thursday evening.

Official opening of the new $4,500,000 Cowichan district hospital in September climaxed 15 years' hard work for Mr. Green as chairman of the hospital board.

Chosen last year as the district's "Citizen of the Year," Mr. Green has no previous council experience.

Reeve Donald Morton has already stated his intention to seek another term of office.

He has been reeve for seven years and a council member for 14 years.

UNDECIDED

A possible third candidate, Coun. George Whittaker, is still undecided.

Mr. Whittaker said Friday evening he was "shocked and surprised" that Mr. Green announced his candidacy without keeping a promise to inform him first.

He said, "I'll now have to consult with the people who have been goading me to run and find out their feelings."

Mr. Whittaker contested the reeveship in 1952 but lost by 13 votes.

Reeve Morton said, "I've played a lot of cricket with Claude Green in past years so it should be a sporting election."

Majority local opinion anticipates a hard-fought and perhaps bitter contest.

In municipal council, Mrs. Margaret Robertson has stated she will be running again.

Coun. Reg Clegg has intimated his retirement but Coun. John Cannon has made no decision yet.

Former council member Bill Bowles of Chemainus has indicated he will be trying for re-election.

Nematode Moves Up-Island

COURTENAY — Golden nematode disease has been discovered on a farm four miles west of here.

Previously the nematode had appeared on Vancouver Island only in Central Saanich.

Philip Cartier said he has dug up about 30 tons of potatoes since a government agriculture inspector told him he could not sell the crop because of the golden nematode.

Quarantine signs warn visitors that soil must not be taken off the farm. The government will buy the potato crop at market prices and use it for pig feed.

Mr. Cartier intends to dig a 25-ton carrot crop and market it because the disease does not affect carrots. However, every carrot will have to be washed by hand to make sure no earth leaves the farm on them.

Twin Cities Honor Pearkes

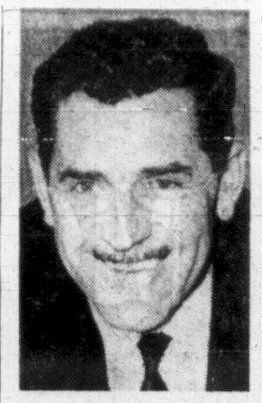

PORT ALBERNI — First freeman of the amalgamated city of Port Alberni and Alberni will be Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes.

The conferring of the honor will be made Oct. 26 when the lieutenant-governor will visit the city for the amalgamation ceremonies. Amalgamation formally takes place two days later.

THIRD CANDIDATE in Nanaimo's mayoralty race is Frank Ney, 47-year-old real estate man long prominent in community affairs. The father of 11 children, Mr. Ney said he is entering the contest to offer "the kind of leadership" needed at this time.

PORT ALBERNI-ALBERNI AMALGAMATION OPENS WITH SPLASH

International Water Stars to Perform

PORT ALBERNI — Swimmers and divers of international acclaim will star in the centennial amalgamation show here.

Billed as the finest aquatic team in Canada, they will perform at the opening of Centennial Pool Oct. 28 and 29.

Mrs. Joan Nagel, coach of Canada's championship swimmers and mastermind of the Kelowna Regatta water show, will produce the fast-moving production.

Assisting will be Bud Stevens, diving coach for the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg in 1967.

Three shows will last 1¾ hours each. On Saturday, Oct. 28, the show times are 1:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m., while on Sunday, Oct. 29, the time is 2 p.m.

SYNCHRONETTES

The Synchronettes from the Hollyburn club in Vancouver will be outfitted in their lavish, fluorescent suits and will work in darkness, with spotlights pointing out the performers.

They will perform two spectacular numbers, the famed Ballet of the Centennial Rose and the Paddle Board Number.

Meg McCarthy, the junior Canadian champ in solo and figures, and Karen Rasmussen, runner-up in those two events, will perform solo numbers.

Heading the diving contingent, coached by Bud Stevens, will be Nancy Robertson, the three-metre diving champion of Canada and the Canadian representative in the Pan-American Games.

Bobo Eaton, another member of the Pan-American team, will also be present, as will several young divers.

RACES SET

A competitive swimming display is also scheduled, under the able coaching of Ted Simpson, who was the Canadian coach in the British Empire Games in 1966 in Jamaica, where Canada was the top swimming team in the Commonwealth, beating Australia for the first time.

One of his top swimmers is Kathy Tidey, a 14-year-old who, despite her youth, was on the Canadian team in the Pan-American Games.

Jane Hughes, a veteran of international competition, will also be here.

She was in the Tokyo Olympics, on the Canadian team that toured Europe in 1965, the British Empire Games in 1966, toured Africa with Elaine Tanner in 1966, and was a member of Canada's team in the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg this year.

She is primarily a distance swimmer, standing out in the 400 and 800 metres and individual medley.

Shirley Cazelat of the Vancouver Amateur Swimming Club will bring with her experience gained on the Canadian team in the British Empire Games in 1966, the Pan-American Games this year and the Canadian team in Europe in 1965. She is primarily a back-stroker.

Jeannie Warren of the Canadian Dolphin Club is a fine all-round swimmer, standing out in all the strokes.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1967—PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

This column is not going to be easy for me to write, because it requires a departure from a viewpoint that I held for a long time. But the evidence is now overwhelming that our marijuana laws are badly in need of an overhaul.

I am not about to make a pitch for the use of pot, tea, grass, or whatever other diminutive the friends and foes of Indian hemp apply to marijuana. As with alcohol and cigarettes, we would probably be better off without the stuff.

But that it should be forbidden even to serious and qualified researchers, and that its use should expose the smoker to penalties more suited to crimes of violence, no longer impresses me as necessary or reasonable.

The clincher for me is the report made public this week by B.C. Medical Association; a professional body that would sooner gash its collective throat with a dull scalpel than advance a hasty or unstudied opinion.

On the strength of the BCMA report, and other expert testimony available, it seems that our official attitude toward marijuana may be based on a premise that owes more to fiction than to fact.

This being so, I think our lawmakers would do well to seek out the truth of the matter with no more delay than need be. Then, having come at it, they should deal with existing legislation as their findings indicate.

★

Until this is done, it is unlikely that an ugly and worrying situation will change.

The Times city page on which the medical association committee's views were printed also carried an account of a sort that has become drearily familiar.

There was only one marijuana conviction in Greater Victoria last year, we were informed.

The 1967 score to date was given as seven convictions, with another six persons on charge and awaiting trial. All are young; and you can be sure they represent a mere fraction of local young people who are trifling with laws that relegate marijuana to the narcotics category.

Well, the law is the law, and those who break it must face the consequences.

This is true, and I could wish that every Victoria young one would accept the fact and spare himself or herself a possible spell in prison and criminal record.

This urging, however, does not alter my growing conviction that the "crime" in question by no means merits the punishment provided.

The trafficker, of course, is something else again. I do not propose to bleed for anyone who chooses the role of smuggler or bootlegger, or both.

★

The meat of this matter, it seems to me, is contained in the two concluding paragraphs of the section of the BCMA report that deals with the marijuana question:

"This legal implementation in creating a new class of criminal among otherwise law-abiding people may thereby produce more social disruption than could result from the unrestricted use of the drug itself. These are serious considerations that merit dispassionate, reasoned and objective thinking.

"This is not to say that marijuana should not be subject to some legal control. It is, after all, both habituating and intoxicating. However, a more appropriate legal control than the one presently in force should be sought."

The message is plain, and I for one hope that it will be heeded by those with power to correct a law whose virtue is in doubt.

$49 Loss In Beer Deal

A 60-year-old unemployed janitor today was fined $50 after he admitted buying beer for two teen-agers.

Gordon Goeghegan, 23 Menzies Street, was paid $1 by the youths for buying the beer.

Magistrate Ostler called the accused "more stupid than criminal."

STEEL SURGERY on bow of the 8,000-ton Marie Skou by Yarrows Ltd. is well under way but it's slow work and probably won't be completed until mid-November. Staging built on bottom of Esquimalt Graving Dock had to conform to flare of hull to accommodate welders and other marine craftsmen. She lost her bow in collision with Chitose Maru in Juan de Fuca fog Sept. 20. (Times Photo by Bill Halkett)

Father of Four Killed In Comox Ditch Collapse

A 40-year-old Victoria man died Friday when trapped in a ditch cave-in during construction of a water main near Comox.

Dead is Thomas Desmond Nunan, 2774 Tudor, father of four.

Mr. Nunan, a sub-contractor on a new Comox Valley regional water project, was supervising digging operations. He climbed into a 10-foot-deep ditch and suddenly it caved in on him.

Mr. Nunan was covered by the earth. Workers at the site managed to uncover his head within about five minutes but he was already dead.

An inquest into the mishap opened today but was adjourned until a later date.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Mr. Nunan was born in Kenya and educated in Dublin at Trinity College. He came to Victoria five years ago with his wife Wanda from Kenya.

Mr. Nunan worked with Willis and Cunliffe before going into business on his own.

MORE STUDY?

Delay Asked In Sewer Plan

A ratepayers' group in Saanich said today there should be a further study on sewage disposal in the Greater Victoria area.

But Coun. Leslie Passmore replied that "all the evidence we have is that this is a good scheme."

He challenged the Saanich Action Committee to come up with hard facts and not "nebulous insinuations."

Roy Ralfs, president of the Saanich Action Committee, said members of the group "are of the opinion that the sewer study that was recently done is inadequate.

"There has not been enough attention paid to alternate methods of treatment and, or, disposal of sewage."

He said the study was expensive (it cost $70,000) but if an additional study is necessary "money should not deter us because the main job itself will cost a minimum $23 million and probably a great deal more before it's finished."

Before the big undertaking is started, "it is important that the majority of taxpayers are convinced that the way chosen to solve this problem is appropriate and adequate."

To this end, he said, the Capital Regional Board "should spend whatever is required to produce a further study to ensure that the method adopted will be both suitable for the present and capable of being upgraded in the future to meet the needs of the increasing population this area is sure to attract."

The committee, he added, will stage a public meeting next month and is lining up four speakers although he did not identify them at this stage.

The regional sewerage study recommended continued disposal at sea but through much longer pipes which would lead to deep water instead of just past the shoreline.

PURPOSE IN DOUBT

Coun. Passmore replied that he anticipated a campaign would start and while many individuals were sincere, "many will climb on to the bandwagon because they don't want to pay money for adequate sewage disposal."

He said proponents of composting sewage never provide details of how the sewage will be pumped to a composting area or what the costs will be. And no experts are provided to disprove the regional sewerage study.

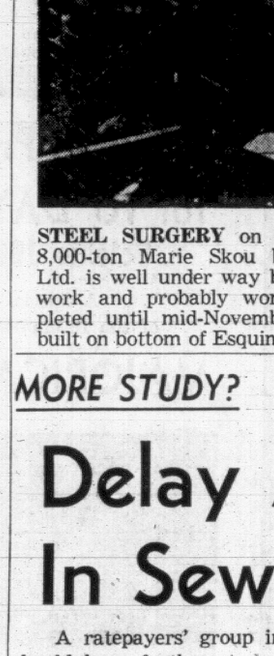

"The Metropolitan Board of Health through Dr. Whitbread endorsed getting sewage and dumping far out to sea," he said.

"All the (civic) engineers in Greater Victoria collaborated and they wouldn't do this if it was not a practical scheme."

The proposed scheme, with the rebuilt outfalls, must be approved by the provincial Pollution Control Board and licences issued.

"They have the power—we have seen this at Brentwood Bay," he said, referring to the board's rejection of a dumping plan there.

The Capital Regional Board, he recalled, received a report on sewage composting which rejected the idea and gave instances of other areas which tried this method unsuccessfully.

SECOND CANDIDATE for reeveship of Oak Bay is Coun. John D. Watts who announced his candidacy today. Earlier Coun. Fred Hawes said he would run for the office now held by retiring Reeve Allan Cox. Coun. Watts has been on Oak Bay council since 1959 and is Oak Bay's representative on the Capital Region Board. Last year he was president of the Vancouver Island Municipalities Association.

Ask The Times

Q. Where was Teresa Brewer born and when did she start to sing? M.B.

A. According to the Compo Company's records division, Miss Brewer was born in Toledo, Ohio, and at the age of two years appeared in Uncle August's Kiddie Show. That was her debut. Later, aged five, she toured with Major Bowes Amateur Hour.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the question along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Post Office Sub-Station Work Started

Work has started on the renovation of the old Safeway store at Fort and Oak Bay Avenue for a new Victoria post office substation.

Postmaster Allan M. Davies said today he had hoped the new office, to be known as Postal Station B, would be open before Christmas but now February appears to be a more likely date.

A similar office, Postal Station A, will open next month at the corner of Saanich Road and Douglas Street.

Both offices will function with all the services available at the main post office on Government Street, said Mr. Davies.

WICKET SERVICE

Each substation will have a front office with four or five extra persons employed. About 30 postmen will be served from the office for routes in the substation areas.

Mr. Davies said there are no plans to close down any smaller sub-post offices, although this might be considered if business declines to any great extent.

RETAINS PREMISES

City Music School To Merge With Uvic

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The 500-student Victoria School of Music will affiliate immediately with University of Victoria.

The move was announced today by university president Malcolm G. Taylor and music school president John Graeme.

They said the arrangement will give the School of Music conservatory status as a fully professional training ground able to attract top faculty from anywhere in the world.

The school will remain in its Pandora Ave. premises for the present, they added.

FINANCIAL AID

The affiliation is expected to mean the school of music will now receive subsidies for its work and be less dependent upon private financing.

The announcement follows a summer of negotiation and a university senate meeting this week at which the unanimous decision was made. An equally unanimous decision was reached at Friday night's annual meeting of the School of Music.

The school will now become the university's conservatory, an arrangement unique in British Columbia, Dr. Taylor pointed out, and hardly to be matched in any Canadian city outside of Toronto.

"Affiliation will enable the university's music students to receive first-class instrumental and vocal tuition in the most economical way," said Professor Peter Garvie, director of Uvic's School of Fine Arts.

INSTRUCTION AID

"It will permit the School of Fine Arts to build the performance side of its music program on resources already here without the expense of engaging its own group of teachers of performance," he pointed out.

Director of the School of Music, Robin Wood, concurred with Professor Garvie. Affiliation will mean a major extension of the school with its courses leading directly into the university's Bachelor of Music program.

"It will mean, for another thing, that the school will be able to attract the finest faculty," Mr. Wood commented.

"We already have, as a nucleus, a very good faculty," the former Royal Academy of Music professor added. "Actually as good as can be found anywhere."

"We will now be able to provide an integrated musical education for children, right through to professional status," Mr. Wood pointed out.

ARTIST'S DIPLOMA

"It is intended to set up our own examinations and to establish an artist's diploma in addition to the academic course," he said.

He stressed that the school will continue to be outward looking, desiring to serve the community as a whole and to cooperate with the private studios.

President John Graeme sees the affiliation as a culmination of extremely hard work to bring the standards of the school to a pitch which would receive university approval.

"The event is a tremendous credit to the board, from the time of its first president, Mrs. Massy Goolden, to the present and to the faculty head and his assistants," Mr. Graeme feels.

"Effects of the affiliation on the musical life of the community will be quite dramatic," he believes, pointing out that many outstanding teacher-performers will be attracted and inevitably will swell the professional musician ranks of the area.

BODIES GOING TO MAINLAND ON RUSS SHIP

The bodies of eight men drowned in the sinking of the Pan Oceanic Faith will not be landed at Victoria, contrary to earlier reports.

The Russian merchant ship Orekhov with the bodies aboard was originally scheduled to dock here tonight but a spokesman for King Bros. Ltd. shipping agency said it has altered destination.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre also said he has been informed the Orekhov will now go straight to Vancouver and the bodies will be taken off there.

The American cargo ship Pan Oceanic Faith sank in heavy seas Monday, about 870 miles southwest of Kodiak, Alaska. Twenty-two perished. The bodies will be identified at Vancouver and arrangements then will be made to ship them to relatives in the United States.

City's Apathy Said Killing Hope for Park

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Vancouver Island may lose an opportunity for a national marine park on its doorstep because of the lack of initiative on the part of Victoria.

The warning was issued Friday by a spokesman for Bamfield Chamber of Commerce.

Bruce Scott said Victoria Chamber of Commerce or the city council have never asked Ottawa to have the green belt between Port Renfrew and Bamfield on the west coast of Vancouver Island included in the national park system.

On the other hand, he said, Tofino and Ucluelet have continually pressed the government to establish the park at Schooner Cove near Long Beach.

EITHER ONE

The government is expected to choose one of the two areas for inclusion in its national park system.

"Victoria's lack of interest is inexplicable," he said. "The advantages to be gained are obvious, not only for local residents, but also for businessmen who stand to gain from the increased tourist traffic over the west coast trail system."

"It's not every city which has a potential national park on its doorsteps," he added.

He said Victorians seemed to be unaware of the primaeval beauty of the rugged coast line and its potential as a recreational area.

Mr. Scott's point is expected to be raised at the next meeting of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

CANADA COUNCIL DIRECTOR:

Fresh Look at Bastion Grant

The Canada Council is reconsidering whether Victoria's Bastion Theatre is eligible for a financial grant, Jean Boucher, director of the Canada Council, said here today.

Visiting here with council members from across Canada, Mr. Boucher said:

"We are seeking a more satisfying assessment of the work of the Bastion Theatre, and various experts will study its work during the coming season.

SAME TREATMENT

"I know there has been some feeling here that the Bastion Theatre has not been treated fairly. Actually it has not been treated differently from any other Canadian group at the same stage of development.

"Because we have not made a grant is no reflection on the quality of the Bastion Theatre. All across Canada similar theatre groups are seeking assistance.

"We have only limited resources and we have to follow a policy of investing money in a consistent pattern. Now that the Bastion Theatre has become such a live issue, we shall certainly seek a more satisfying assessment of its work."

Mr. Boucher visited Greater Victoria Art Gallery this morning with 21 members of the Canada Council, including Jean Martineau, Montreal, chairman, and J. Frank Leddy, Windsor, Ont., vice-chairman.

Great Rain-Stopper Combats Fall Weather

By PENNY SAVER

Whenever the weather is crisp and breezy and there's not a cloud in the sky, I get an irresistible urge to go for a walk. The other day I set out with the family dog for a good romp on the beach. Armed with nothing more than a lightweight jacket and a dilapidated pair of shoes, I should have known that no respectable rain cloud could resist the temptation I presented. It poured! Just to complicate matters, Dawg loves the rain. After spending half an hour in the downpour chasing the mutt up and down the beach, I gave up in despair and came home. This weather may be great for Dawg, but that's the last time I get lured outdoors without my rain gear.

It's not just Penny who needs some rain protection this time of year—our house could do with some, too. Where the leaks come from in our eaves, I'll never know, but every autumn—there they are. I'm tired of having a large raindrop fall on my head every time I walk out the front door, so I decided I'd better get the family do-it-yourself nut to repair the situation. In one store I found a fibre gum made of emulsified asphalt that can be stuck on the rain gutters. A quart of this gum is priced at $1.35 and will provide epough material to cover all the joints in the eaves. Wait for a sunny day and you can spread this rain-stopper on the eaves yourself, with the aid of only a putty knife.

To keep your suede shoes new-looking the spray cleaner I found is the answer. It's easy to use, and you'll find it a great time-saver when you're in a rush to go out. Brush the suede thoroughly, paying special attention to any shiny spots that have developed. When the shoes are completely clean hold the can eight to 10 inches from the shoe and spray. You will find it keeps suede shoes looking new much longer. It is priced at $1.

For the younger set or the artist who likes to sketch in water colors, the set of paints that caught my eye would be ideal. Every box contains 10 felt pens in a variety of colors. They are non-toxic so there is no danger if tots decide to eat the paints instead of sketching with them. These are priced at $1.25 and will provide endless hours of entertainment for the junior Savers this winter.

If you would like to know where I found these items give me a call at 382-3131.

British Styles in Toronto Feature 'Body Stockings'

TORONTO (CP) — Zippers, body stockings, mix-matching and minis are all part of the show of British fashions going on this week.

As part of a promotional British week in Toronto, 250 outfits are being shown in a fashion revue every day. It includes clothes from 150 British manufacturers representing designers such as Mary Quant, Roger Nelso, Hardy Amies, Twiggy, Jean Muir, Digby Morton. The show is presented by the clothing council of Great Britain.

Its total effect is leggy, bright and a new kind of total.

Nowadays, everything matches, bag, shoes, gloves, hat, jewelry. Checks and plaids pick up the main color so that everything can mix or match.

Britain hasn't given up the mini look at all, quite the contrary. One new application of the abbreviated style is a costume of cape and plus twos, the mini answer to plus fours.

In Step With Fashion

By Nona Damaske

THE EBB AND FLOOD OF FASHION

Fall fashion shows are here, there and everywhere.

Fresh new fall fashions are in all our stores.

When a new season's "Look" is firmly established I am always tempted to go back a few years, leaf through an old fashion magazine or two, just to see how the predictions of the fashion pundits have turned out.

Damaske

In October 1964 one of the leading glossie publications had headline reading . . . "The Body is Back." The article goes on to say "the new clothes are moving ever so subtly closer to the body."

I suspect the move was so subtle that it never really happened. The same magazine tells us in this October issue that clothes are much more fitted . . . same story but now it does seem to be happening.

Everyone has been predicting that the hemline is about to drop . . . it hasn't, and there is no real indication that it will for some time. In 1964 side-closed coats with the lean dash of a fencer's tunic made news in Paris. For fall 1967 we are seeing many side buttoned suits and coats . . . it takes a little time but we do get on the bandwagon.

"Apple Green" in 1964 . . . "Sick or Acid Green" in 1965 . . . "Mean Green" in 1966 and in 1967 it is "Chrome Green" . . . same identical color.

In 1964 the Broadway show "My Fair Lady" was having a great influence on the fashion scene. Every designer included a black and white sequence . . . ostrich feathers drifted in grand profusion on late-day clothes and large garden party hats had a short revival.

Black and white as a fashion combination has always been good and continues to be the choice of many elegant women.

Shoe buckles were just stepping onto the fashion podium in 1964. Today they step out at all hours in every shape and size. Capes have been included in all high-fashion collections during the past four years, now they take their place in our stores at prices which the average woman can afford.

There are however some drastic changes as fashion cannot afford to stand still. The needle-toed shoes of 1964 have completely disappeared. The shoe silhouette at this time is square-toed and chunky heeled.

The pant dress is big news and is being very well accepted. It is the only way to wear the mini-length and still maintain some sense of decency when sitting or bending.

Fashion is ever changing, but the woman who takes simplicity as her yardstick and shies away from gimmicky novelties will easily stay in step with style.

As you read this I will be arriving in Los Angeles to see what the California fashion creators have in store for us for spring and summer 1968. Watch for on the spot stories during the coming week.

Has Grandmother's Locket As Her Wedding Talisman

A gold locket which had belonged to her grandmother was the something old talisman for Marie Joy Philipchalk when she became the bride of Donald Malcolm Greenway at a candlelight service in Glad Tidings Tabernacle.

The jewelry complemented a satin gown styled on empire lines with a round neckline and belled sleeves trimmed in lace. Similar lace edged her train which swept back from the shoulders. A lace headpiece held her tiered veil of silk illusion. She carried a white Bible, topped with a bouquet of red roses.

Rev. Roy Upton officiated at the service uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Philipchalk of Sidney and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Greenway, 2175 Newman Road. Mr. Philipchalk gave his daughter in marriage.

Baskets of peach gladioli decorated the church for the service. Miss Sylvia Richmond was the organist, accompanying the soloist Mrs. R. Upton.

Miss Linda Philipchalk was maid of honor for her sister, Mrs. 'Phil' Giesbrecht was bridesmatron and Miss Janice Yeates was bridesmaid. They wore matching gowns of printed chiffon over peach taffeta with self-fabric bows in their hair and carried bouquets of two-toned peach gladioli. The Misses Doreen and Marion Greenway lighted the candles, wearing similar short dresses.

Little Sherry Bradford was flower girl, wearing a similar dress trimmed with ruffles. She carried a basket of summer flowers.

David Greenway acted as best man and Bruce Greenway, Jim Hartshorne, Bob and Ron Philipchalk ushered the guests.

Peach toned gladioli decorated St. Martin's-in-the-Field at the reception which followed. L. Fair proposed the toast to the bride.

Travelling to Victoria for the service were Mrs. Margaret Greenway, the groom's grandmother, Nanaimo; Mr. and Mrs. D. Walker and Mr. and Mrs. R. Philipchalk, all of Vancouver.

For travelling on honeymoon to California the new Mrs. Greenway chose a blue and black tweed suit trimmed with black fur. She accented the ensemble with black accessories and a corsage of red roses and a gardenia.

Graduates of the Same Australian Hospital

THEY'VE BECOME BUDDIES

By PAT DUFOUR

When two Australian nurses landed in Victoria last August to join the staff of the Veterans' Hospital they had no idea that one of the first persons they met would be from their old Alma Mater.

And, although mutual and unmistakable "Aussie" accents drew the trio together like magnets, it was days before the pieces of the puzzle fitted together.

Rounding out this group from "down under" is a 93-year-old patient at the hospital, Mrs. Mary Anne Peacey.

All three are graduates of the Brisbane General Hospital, which is celebrating its centennial this year and, as part of the celebration, has changed its name to the Royal Brisbane Hospital.

When the two nurses, Miss Valda Norris and Miss Lenore Adam, discovered Mrs. Peacey had graduated from their school they wrote to the hospital to tell of their find. It's thought that Mrs. Peacey may be the oldest remaining graduate and the two nurses were asked to get a picture of her.

This was easier said than done. When we visited her this week she greeted us with, "I don't believe in all this publicity rot!" but softened under her countrywomen's soothing.

But they, too, receive a little mild-mannered tongue lashing on occasion.

Mrs. Peacey writes off present-day uniforms as "mini skirts" and tells her buddies, "You don't know what hard work is, you should have trained and nursed when I did!"

Present-day graduates of Mrs. Peacey's Alma Mater have no sinecure. Miss Norris and Miss Adam report that their training takes four years. Asked "Why so long?" they'll tell you that all their training is done on the wards, studying has to be crammed into their own time and even examinations are scheduled to be written on their days off.

Like many nurses, they want to see a great deal of the world before they settle down and plan to work here for a year before setting out for Montreal and, later, Europe.

Mrs. Peacey, as you may have guessed, has done some travelling of her own, much of it under far tougher conditions than her compatriots.

As Mary Anne Browne, she served with the Canadian Army Medical Corps during the First World War, enlisting at Esquimalt on July 30, 1915. She left for overseas the next month and nursed at Salonika from December of that year until late August 1917.

She was demobilized in Victoria on July 18, 1919, and married Albert Peacey, a widower with two small children in 1930. Her husband died four years ago but her two step-children, Mrs. Lois Humphries, Vancouver, and John Peacey, 1149 Munro Street, are still as dear to her as the day she "adopted" them.

Mrs. Peacey has nothing but professional approval for the care she receives at the hospital, especially that which she receives from her two friends. But, if she has any say in the matter, she won't be staying.

She has a home of her own on Fairfield Road and is anxious to get back to it. Friends report that she keeps it neat as the proverbial pin and is a cook to be reckoned with. Her somewhat reluctant visit to the hospital is the result of a fall.

If Mrs. Peacey has her wish and returns to the independent way of life she prefers, one thing is certain. Recipes from "down under" will be featured when she entertains her pals and smiles will be combined with the elder graduate's commentaries on easy-way nursing.

Brownies Mark Good Turn Day

Brownies of the Eighth Victoria Pack marked Good Turn Day today by delivering boxes of clothing they'd collected to Brigadier S. McKinley at the Salvation Army Social Welfare Building. The items were earmarked for sale in the Army's thrift shop.

Brigadier McKinley told the Brownies how such articles were utilized, how often families in need were given clothing and other items, and how unsaleable clothing was put in bales and sold for manufacturing purposes.

Good Turn Day is an annual event for Guides, Brownies and Rangers. It has been turned into a centennial project for this year, with the goal of providing a piece of equipment for the Handicapped Children's Clinic.

Contributions toward this project are still being accepted by area guide commissioner, Mrs. H. P. McKeever.

Choristers Greet Linda McMaster As She Arrives for Her Wedding

The strains of "Ave Maria" sung by the choristers of St. John's Anglican Church greeted Linda Craig McMaster as she entered the church on the arm of her father to become the bride of Edgar Emile Sparling.

The bride was lovely in an elegant gown of oyster-white peau de soie styled on empire lines with belled sleeves gently tipping the elbow. The graceful A-line skirt was gathered at the back waistline, sweeping back to form a full cathedral train. The gown was complemented by an heirloom bridal veil of hand-made lace which misted softly from a peau d'elegance bow headpiece. White roses, stephanotis and ivy formed her cascade bouquet.

ALL-WHITE DECOR

Tall standard baskets of white chrysanthemums, white daisies and salal were at the altar and white ribbon bows entwined with trailing ivy marked the pews when Canon Grahame Baker officiated at the service which united the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. McMaster, 572 Linkleas Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Sparling of Haley, Ont.

The organist was Donald Woodworth, who accompanied the choristers as they sang the Twenty-third Psalm during the signing of the register. Purcell's "Trumpet Voluntary" was played as the wedding party left the church.

Miss Mary McMaster was the maid of honor for her sister and Mrs. Kenneth Davidson was bridesmatron. Miss Linda Perigoe travelled from her home in Toronto to be bridesmaid. The three attendants wore matching gowns of peacock green peau d'elegance styled on empire lines and featuring sleeves softly belled at the elbow and slim skirts. They carried bouquets of golden chrysanthemums.

John Cameron, Vancouver, acted as best man and Allan Wilson and William Paul, also of Vancouver, ushered the guests.

A reception was held in the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony. Baskets of long-stemmed red roses decorated the rooms. A three-tier wedding cake, made by the bride's mother, and Mrs. W. A. McElmoyle, topped with an intricate heart and rosebud ornament designed on silk net, was cut by the bride and groom.

PRESIDE AT TABLE

An antique silver candelabra holding five white candles centred the tea table at which presided Mrs. Montague Caple, Miss Ursula Malkin, Mrs. Charles Tysoe, all of Vancouver, and Mrs. George Ray, of Saskatoon, Sask. Justice Charles Lysoe, Vancouver, proposed the toast to the bride's happiness.

Following the reception the newlyweds left by plane for Vancouver where they stopped over before travelling to Toronto where they will be making their new home.

For travelling the new Mrs. Sparling chose an imported wool dress and coat ensemble in a grey, henna, turquoise and green weave trimmed with a brown mink collar, which was complemented by a matching hat fashioned from mink tails.

Change of Date Made for Bazaar

Officials of the Society for Hearing Handicapped Children announce that the date of the group's bazaar and tea has been changed from October 27 to this coming Saturday. The event is being held in the K of P Hall on Cormorant Street from 1 to 4 p.m.

People who have bought raffle change of date. Raffles include a grocery hamper valued at $50, a 20-piece breakfast set and a doll, made and donated by Mrs. W. E. Lowe.

On display at the bazaar will be a wedding gown which will go to the person giving the highest written bid.

Mrs. Malcolm G. Taylor will open the event and refreshments will be prepared by Mrs. Peggy Newman of The Inn.

Several friends have joined members in the preparation for the bazaar and tea. Among those on the committee are Mrs. C. H. Richards, Mrs. N. R. Miles, Mrs. F. J. Muir, Mrs. A. Messerschmidt, Mrs. W. Franke, Mrs. A. C. Croucher, Mrs. F. L. West, Mrs. H. Duz, Mrs. M. Hughes, Mrs. A. B Donald, Mrs L. Painter, Mrs. J. McCaskill, Mrs. L. Wilkins, Mrs. E. Palmer and Mrs. A. Nicoll.

Kendrick (at right) held a tea in the Hunts' home at 349 Mayfair Drive. With the proceeds they bought 100 tickets, which they've divided equally and given to students of Norfolk House (its headmistress, Miss A. Winifred Scott, is seen in the picture with Robin Wood) and the Victoria School of Music, of which Mr. Wood is the director. The tickets are for the recital of the Russian artist, Marina Mdevani, to be held at the McPherson Playhouse next Thursday evening. (Bill Halkett photo.)

COUPLE WED IN SERVICE CHAPEL

Following their recent wedding in Chapel of Christ the King, Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lorne Ferguson left on a honeymoon trip to Harrison Hot Springs and the northwestern United States.

The bride, the former Allene Bernice Wanless, wore a gown of white peau d'elegance styled on princess lines fashioned with a yoke of double flounced Chantilly lace and belled sleeves. Her cathedral train swept back from the shoulder and self-fabric roses held her bouffant silk veil. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

DEAR ABBY . . .

In an Emergency, Lady Is in Trouble

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a sister-in-law who just burns me up. She likes to watch television during the daytime, so she takes her telephone off the hook so nobody can bother her while she's watching television.

When I call her for hours at a time, and her line is "busy," I know her phone is off the hook.

What if someone from school tried to call to tell her one of her kids was sick? Or what if her husband got hurt at work? They wouldn't be able to get through to her.

I get so mad at her I could scream. Is there some way I can make her understand she has no business doing this?

READY TO SCREAM.

DEAR READY: If your sister-in-law prefers to be undisturbed for any reason, it's her privilege. If she's unavailable for emergency messages, it's HER problem.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I go shopping in the village, he is always greeted by many people I do not know. (Mostly women.) One woman will smile and say, "Hello, Joe." (My husband's name is Kenneth). Then a woman will wave from an automobile and shout, "O, hello there, Max!" Then I say to him, "What is this Joe and Max business?" And he says, "I must have a very common face."

What is your opinion?

MRS. K. J. F.

DEAR MRS. F.: I say your husband has a very common alibi.

DEAR ABBY: If you will print this letter, it may open the eyes of some of the hate-filled parents, who are doing their children irreparable harm.

My marriage was a mess. After a separation, a reconciliation, and a divorce suit that was called off, my irresponsible husband entered the army and stayed there for 10 years. At the end of that time, HE sued ME for divorce, but I was the one who got it.

We have two children, a boy and girl. Under the circumstances, they didn't know their father very well. But they could understand what was being said to them, and I never allowed anyone in my family to speak against their father. I let my children grow up and find out for themselves what kind of man he was.

Today my children are both grown. They cannot "love" their father, but they don't "hate" him. They call him long-distance at Christmas time, and when he comes to town for a visit, they have him (and his third wife) for a meal. My children are loyal to me, and I have always encouraged them to maintain a respectful relationship with their father.

I am sure my children are of sounder mental health because of this. When you teach a child to hate one of his parents, you do the child more harm than you do yourself good.

NO REGRETS.

DEAR NO REGRETS: Thank you for your sensible letter. It comes at a time when so many parents have agreed to disagree. I hope it opens a few eyes of those who are still able to see.

The wedding will take place on Saturday, October 28 at 7:30 p.m. in Fairfield United Church. Rev. H. W. Kerley will officiate. (Jus-Rite Portrait Studio.)

Couple Married Here Will Live in Alberni

Following their wedding in the Church of Our Lord, Mr. and Mrs. Robert James Darby left on a honeymoon trip to eastern Canada.

The bride, the former Phyllis Elaine French, wore a floor-length white brocade gown styled on empire lines with scooped neckline and lily-point sleeves. A floating panel swept en train from her shoulders. An illusion veil of tulle misted from a white satin rose headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses and white stephanotis.

Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Merritt H. French, 1150 McClure Street, Mrs. S. Darby, Alberni, and the late Mr. Darby.

The church was decorated with baskets of white and gold chrysanthemums for the ceremony at which Bishop D. A. G. Rankilor officiated. Ingram Smith was the organist, accompanying Mrs. F. Goodwin who sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

Mrs. W. French attended her sister in-law in a floor-length gown of aquamarine chiffon, styled on empire lines. She chose toning accessories and a cascade bouquet of white and yellow chrysanthemums.

Roy Bridger was best man and guests were ushered by William Lane and Leo Jager, Errington, B.C.

At the reception in Holyrood House the head table was centred by a three-tier wedding cake, iced in a basket weave and topped by a floral centrepiece. Pink rosebuds accented the head table and seasonal flowers decorated the room. Frank Miller proposed the toast to the bride.

For their honeymoon to eastern Canada the new Mrs. Darby chose a pink double-knit suit with a Chanel jacket, navy blue accessories and a feathered chrysanthemum corsage.

The couple will make their home in Alberni.

WOMEN RULE THIS VILLAGE

TWEED, Ont. (CP) — The suffragette movement of the turn of the century has reached its ultimate goal here—there are no men on the village council.

The council became an all-woman stronghold in mid-September when the sole male councillor resigned and was replaced by Mrs. Russell Whitfield.

The five women who run this village, 25 miles north of Belleville, say it is not much different than running a home—only the light bulbs, pipes, and vacuum cleaners are bigger.

Of most concern to the council is the public image of the village electorate.

Jean Crawford Becomes Bride of Victor Nelson

WED IN DOUBLE-RING CEREMONY

A gown of Chantilly lace styled on empire lines and highlighted by a front panel of ligola was worn by Jean Margaret Crawford when she became the bride of Victor Simon Nelson in the Church of St. Andrew, Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt. The bodice of the gown featured a scalloped sabrina neckline and lily point sleeves and the skirt swept back en train. A small floral headpiece held her tiered veil of silk illusion. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and stephanotis.

Baskets of multi-colored chrysanthemums decorated the church when Rev. A. G. Faraday officiated at the double-ring service. Parents of the principals are Mr. and Mrs. Ronald C. Crawford, 1292 Camrose Crescent, and Mr. and Mrs. Simon Nelson, 812 Walker Street.

Miss Shirley Berry was maid of honor and Miss Wendy Crawford, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid. They wore matching gowns of pink peau de soie trimmed with lace, with self-fabric headpieces. They carried crescent bouquets of white carnations with pale pink streamers.

Susan Malin was flower girl, wearing a similar dress and a floral headpiece en tone.

Bruce Nelson acted as best man for his brother and Randy Nelson, brother of the groom, and Ron Crawford, the bride's brother, ushered the guests.

A reception followed in the Petty Officers' Mess, Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt. A three-tier wedding cake, topped with roses, centred the head table and arrangements of multi-toned chrysanthemums decorated the room. Bruce E. Colegrave proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on honeymoon up-Island and to Seattle, Wash., the new Mrs. Nelson chose a blue linen dress topped with a floral jacket. She complemented the ensemble with white accessories and pale pink carnations en corsage.

On their return the newlyweds will make their home at Ste. 205, 40 Boyd Street.

Travelling from out-of-town to attend the wedding were Mrs. Earl Westerlund, Swift Current, Sask.; Mr. and Mrs. William Crawford and Mrs. E. Perry, all of Kamloops; Mr. David Crawford, Heffley Creek, B.C.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lister of Merritt; Mr. and Mrs. Forest Jernberg of Bellingham; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Olson, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Augustson, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Nystrom, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Young, Mr. Paul Young, Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Leonew, Mr. Brian Leonew, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Ritchie, all of Vancouver; Mrs. Veronica Walker, Nanaimo.

Annual Festival Cancelled

Officials of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Family and Children's Service announce that, breaking tradition, the group will not be sponsoring a Festival of Christmas Decorations this year. The cancellation is due to the Georgian Room of the Empress Hotel being unavailable while it is under process of being renovated. A date has already been set for next year's festival. It will be held on November 27, 1968.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BARRETT — In loving memory of our granddaughter, Bonnie Louise Barrett, who passed away October 15, 1960.
More and more each day we miss her.
Friends may think the wound is healed;
But, little they know the sorrow,
Lies within our hearts concealed.
Sadly missed by Granny and Grandad Heaslip.

BARRETT — In loving memory of a loving daughter and sister, Bonnie Louise Barrett, who passed away October 15, 1960.
An empty bed is all that is left.
That is left,
Since you passed away seven years today.
You were all the good things rolled into one,
Filled with good deads, and malice towards none.
Your winning smile, and lilting laughter,
Will be remembered by all forever after.
To a beautiful life came a sudden end.
She died as she lived, everyone's friend.
—Sadly missed by Mom, Dad and sister, Sharon.

GILLAN—In loving memory of our mother, Margaret Elizabeth Gillan, who passed away Oct. 14, 1962.
God gave us a wonderful mother.
A mother who never grew old.
He made her smile of sunshine,
He moulded her heart of pure gold.
Loving and kind in all her ways;
to make others happy was her desire.
Softly the leaves of memory fall,
Gently we gather them all.
Loving her dearly, her memory we keep
While she lies in peaceful sleep.
—Ever remembered by her son, Raymond, and daughter-in-law, Elizabeth; grandson, Paul.

HAROLD OF ENGLAND—Killed in action on the afternoon of his 45th birthday, on Senlac Hill, Sussex, Saturday, Oct. 14, 1066, defending his country against the invader, William the Bastard, of Normandy. The Anglo-Saxon writer states: "He was loved by his people."

CMA HEAD:

Canada's Diversity Its Great Strength

The strength of Canada today lies in its diversity, Dr. N. J. Belliveau, president of the Canadian Medical Association, told the association's annual banquet here Friday.

"Canada has never subscribed to the melting pot theory of nationhood," he said. "Instead, we have always sought to preserve a pluralistic society in which political and social institutions are shaped so as to protect language rights and cultural identity."

This, he claimed, is a definite part of Canadian culture and tradition.

'BLEAK DAY'

He said it will be a "bleak day" when Canadians of various origins "have precisely the same political and cultural ideas, and precisely the same tastes in books, food, dress, conversation and women."

"I know that the sentiment of the day is somewhat against this. This year the emphasis is on national unity. Naturally we should value and protect this unity and we should beware of advancing regional or sectional interests irresponsibly.

"But this does not imply that we need to abandon the positive values or regional patriotism, local pride and individuality."

On the federal medical care program, Dr. Belliveau said the legislation should be amended even at this late date to give the provinces more flexibility.

He suggested that instead of putting the power of medicare in Ottawa's hands the provinces should retain the right to establish program priorities according to the needs of their areas.

He warned that in many countries where the so-called "welfare state" is in operation, the principle of universality—that is the principle that the benefits of a program should be available to all regardless of need—is being seriously questioned.

Overcrowded Classrooms Reported

VANCOUVER (CP) — Seven cases of classrooms with 40 or more students have been reported to the B.C. Teachers' Federation office, officials said Friday.

Teachers voted at their annual convention last March to walk out of any class with 40 or more students in September.

BCTF general secretary Charles Ovans said Friday that of the seven cases reported, two have been rectified by the employment of an additional teacher. Another was solved by sending some Grade 7 students to an adjacent school.

The remaining four are still being checked for solutions, Mr. Ovans said. If they are not corrected, the Federation's Commission on Intolerable Learning Conditions will probably be called in.

Location of the seven classrooms was not disclosed.

Term Confirmed

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Court of Appeal upheld Friday a two-year prison term for Ontario Maurantonio, 29, who was convicted of indecent assault for giving physical examinations to female patients.

Fifth New Prison Opened

OTTAWA (CP)—The fifth and last medium security prison to be built under a 10-year federal program will be officially opened at Warkworth, Ont., today.

Run by the youngest warden in the federal system, the $8,800,000 Warkworth will accommodate up to 467 prisoners in a 204-acre campus-type institution.

Four other medium-security prisons of similar size have been opened since May, 1966.

They are at Matsqui, B.C., Drumheller, Alta., Cowansville, Que., and Springhill, N.S. Matsqui specializes in drug offenders.

The prisons are aimed at young delinquents and selected adult offenders likely to benefit from their vocational training facilities, officials say.

Warkworth Warden W. C. Westlake, at 41 the youngest man running a federal prison, represents a crop of youthful officials trained since 1960 to take over the new institutions.

Schooled at Kingston, Ont., Warden Westlake was a wartime army training instructor and has been in the penitentiaries service for 19 years.

He was deputy warden of Dorchester penitentiary before coming to Warkworth, where he will have a staff of 240.

Interpreter Used In Huang Speech To City Chinese

The Vice-President of the Republic of China, Hon. Huang Shao-Ku, gave a 40-minute speech in Chinese at a reception given by the Chinese Consolidated Association Friday afternoon.

But many did not understand him. Mr. Huang spoke in Mandarin, whereas the majority of Victoria Chinese know only Cantonese.

Colin Sihoe, an immigrant from Malaya, speaks both dialects and interpreted Mr. Huang's speech to those who don't know Mandarin.

The vice-president and his party were received by Jack Mee, president of the benevolent association, and entertained to dinner at the Chinese Village Restaurant, 755 Finlayson, before leaving for Vancouver at 9 p.m.

HIPPIES CAN TELL US A LOT, SAYS DOCTOR

A Vancouver doctor believes Hippies have a great deal to say to society.

"We cannot ignore their creativity or their concern for humanity," said Dr. I. M. Cathcart, a clinical instructor with the University of British Columbia's faculty of medicine.

He was speaking during a panel on community mental health problems at the B.C. Medical Association's annual convention at the Empress Hotel.

Dr. Cathcart said he disagrees with Vancouver's Mayor Tom Campbell who called the Hippies "bums."

"They are not a fringe group of runaways, thrill-seekers or deeply-disturbed young people," he declared. "They have withdrawn from the community because of its authoritarian leadership."

Dr. Cathcart said their principles are love and concern for fellow human beings.

'Let Doctors Serve On Hospital Boards'

Provincial legislation forbidding doctors to seek election to hospital boards was protested at the annual convention of the B.C. Medical Association Friday.

The directors said doctors should be eligible for election. They also recommended the governing body of each hospital should include a representative, elected by the medical staff, who has full voting privileges.

The convention heard from a committee of B.C. doctors investigating regional hospital planning.

"We are concerned that hospital planning may be clouded by local vested interests or municipal politics," said Dr. Conrad Mackenzie, chairman of the B.C. Medical Association's hospitals committee.

He suggested that a body responsible for planning hospital services should be established in each regional hospital district.

"They should be professional planners who know what hospitals need," Dr. Mackenzie said. "They should establish priorities and make recommendations to the directors of the regional district."

Minister Slams Special Status

OTTAWA (CP)—A new book by Justice Minister Trudeau says special constitutional status for Quebec would limit the province's voice in Canadian affairs.

Contents of the book, Federalism and the French-Canadian Society, became known ahead of the planned Monday release.

Mr. Trudeau, who believes in equal powers for all provinces including Quebec, suggested that giving Quebec more would reduce Quebec's influence at Ottawa.

"Those who hope to play on two tables are not realistis," he said.

Supporters of special status build elaborate structures and talk about constitutional reforms without relation to reality, he said.

"We are terribly lacking in direction," he said. "Rather than devoting ourselves to modifying our fundamental, intellectual, social and economic conditions, we are carried away by a legal superstructure idea—without even asking ourselves if it can work."

QUEBEC RULE

Present proposals for special status of predominantly French-Canadian Quebec lack logic, he said. Moreover if Quebec went further towards a separate national state, it would have to renounce its demand for parity of the French language with English at Ottawa and in the rest of the country.

But Quebec can support its equal-rights view throughout the rest of Canada by maintaining powers roughly equal to those of other provinces.

The 227-page book, written in French, is largely a critique of constitutional solutions to Quebec's problems.

AFTER RALLY

It was timed to be made public after this weekend's Liberal party convention in Quebec at which the whole issue was to be discussed. The advance leak injected the Trudeau stance into the deliberations.

The book contains French translations of previously published articles by Mr. Trudeau. But the core of it is a new section in which Mr. Trudeau makes his case for a strong Quebec within a strong federal state.

Mr. Trudeau, 46, a late-comer to the federal cabinet, has long been a leading spokesman for progressive Quebec moderates in the province's quiet revolution of the '60s.

Not Che —Brother

TUCUMAN, Argentina (UPI) — The brother of Communist revolutionary Ernesto (Che) Guevara today denied as "a farce" the Bolivian government's report that the guerrilla leader was shot and killed.

Roberto Guevara, 36, said on his return from Bolivia that the guerrilla killed last Sunday in a clash with U.S.-trained Bolivian rangers was someone else.

CANADIAN THEME

700-Book Display Opens at McPherson

A two-day centennial book show was opened in the McPherson Playhouse Friday by Mayor Hugh Stephen.

Sponsored by the Marionette Book Shop, it features 700 books by Canadian writers and non-Canadians writing on Canada. Most of the books are contemporary, but some have historical value as collectors' items.

"People often say Canadians have no culture," Mayor Stephen said. "This is a pity because I think we are doing well for a young country."

Provincial archivist Willard Ireland said the exhibition demonstrates "the maturity of Canada."

John Lort, Victoria's chief librarian, said 1,000,000 books will have been circulated in Canada by the end of 1967.

Victoria Public Library has contributed a collection of fiction by Canadian authors. The provincial archives has contributed three display cases containing some of the earliest books printed in B.C.

DIRECTOR:

Adult Schools Needed

Adult education is essential if a community is going to offer full benefit to its citizens, Dr. Bert Wales, director of adult education for the Vancouver School Board, said today.

He was speaking to representatives of Vancouver Island school districts at a day-long seminar at the Institute of Adult Education here.

"If any community only thinks of its children it is only doing part of its job," Dr. Wales said.

People identify with their community through its programs, he said. They should provide an opportunity for meeting the needs and interests of adults in the community.

One of the greatest wastes is the waste of leisure time, he said. A broad range of studies should be provided to develop the interests of adults who want something more.

"There is more to life than television, bingo and sitting in beer parlors," he said.

A good adult education program was one way a city can look after its people.

DRIVER HURT AS CAR FLIPS

The driver of a car which rolled over after a collision at Oswego and Simcoe Streets early today is in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Richard Elliott of 4095 Glanford Ave., was driving south on Oswego when his car collided with a car driven east on Simcoe by Thomas Johannesen of Suite 1011, 450 Simcoe.

The Elliott car ended up upside down on the lawn of 150 Simcoe. Elliott received head injuries.

Famed Soldier Gets His Wings

Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes will be made an honorary member of the RCAF Association 800 Wing in a ceremony at Government House Tuesday at 5 p.m.

He will receive a wing plaque from group president George Aitchison, and national president Alex Jardine of Victoria will attend.

Mr. Pearkes opened the RCAF associatoin's new headquarters on Wilson Street last January.

84-Year-Old Man Struck by Car

An 84-year-old pedestrian is in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today after being struck by a car at 5 p.m. Friday.

Adeline Ament, of 825 Cook St., was hit in a crosswalk at Fort and Cook Sts. by a car driven by Gail Bonner, 1420 Fort St.

Public Inspects Fire Department

View Royal's fire hall with its new $20,000 fire truck will be open to visitors Monday night.

Fire Chief Al Beasley said today two films dealing with fire protectoin will be shown in the hall, starting at 8 p.m.

Erratic Driving

Norman Balfour, 43, of 1257 Basil Street, was fined $300 in magistrate's court today for impaired driving.

Balfour was arrested early this morning after police observed him driving in an erratic manner on Government Street.

His licence was suspended for four months except during business hours Monday through Friday.

. . . LEVESQUE

held a post-midnight conference with backers, discussing among other things whether he should resign immediately and withdraw his resolution.

Early this morning Mr. Levesque indicated he will at least carry his fight to the conference floor where the constitutional question will be discussed this afternoon.

In discussion of procedures for today's constitutional debate, the Levesque forces were crushed by an overwhelming majority in their bid to have voting done by secret ballot instead of a show of hands.

Of the crowd of more than 600 it appeared that only a dozen or so voted for secret ballots urged by Montreal lawyer Marc Briere, who was greeted with cat-calls every time he spoke.

Mr. Lesage said in his speech that Mr. Levesque's resolution is clearly separatist because it seeks secession of Quebec from Canada and advocates elimination of the elected federal parliament.

Mr. Levesque seeked a sovereign Quebec state linked with Canada by a loose administrative association he calls l'Union Canadienne."

FLASH FLOODS

Torrential Rains Hit Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Families were flooded out of basement apartments and motorists were stranded Friday during a torrential rain that produced one of Vancouver's worst attacks of flash flooding.

The waters covered roads, blocked storm drains and spewed out of ditches across intersections to cause mammoth traffic jams in different sections of the city.

Overloaded storm sewers popped their manhole covers in front of harassed motorists trying to peer through the deluge. Police reported a rash of traffic mishaps at the peak of the cloudburst.

An official of the city's engineering department reported his men answered more than 500 calls from stranded motorists and residents whose ground-level apartments or basements were flooded.

In one district, up to seven feet of water from backed up drains poured into dwellings.

"It's the worst flooding anyone around here can remember," said one city works official.

The storm, which lasted four hours, dumped four-tenths of an inch of rain at the weather office at Vancouver International Airport but the reading for the city is expected to be much higher, forecasters said.

Rainfall in Vancouver this month had reached 5.93 inches before the deluge. The average October total is 4.62 inches.

The storm caught thousands of people by surprise but none was more shaken than an unidentified British Columbia Telephone Company employee who had to scramble out of a trench before finishing his job.

"He had to get out of there so fast that he wasn't able to splice the cable completely," a company spokesman said.

The water hit the wiring and 1,500 phones were out of order.

"It was so busy we didn't know whether we were coming or going," said one traffic officer. "It was impossible to cover all the calls that came in."

A bandit took advantage of the confusion caused by the storm to rob a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce of $400.

Police said the man indicated he had a gun then handed a teller a note that contained the words "gun" and "money." The rest of it was illegible.

Some Teachers Drive Children To Suicide—MD

The philosophies of some teachers are responsible for many child suicides, a North Vancouver doctor said here Friday.

"This push, push, push from the teachers is worse than child abuse," said Dr. G. E. Cragg, a general practitioner. "It is high time something was done about it.

"The children are told that Grade 12 is essential if they are going to get anywhere," he said in an interview at the B.C. Medical Association's annual convention here.

"If they are not successful, they can become depressed and, indeed, we lose boys and girls to suicide."

Dr. Cragg taught high school for five years before taking up medicine.

He told fellow doctors at the convention that the problem of over-cramming children is of greater magnitude than traffic accidents.

"Is there anything which can be done through the department of education to stop this type of teaching?" he asked.

School Cuts Job, Jobless Totals

Employment and unemployment in British Columbia dropped last month when students returned to school.

Employment dropped 20,000 to 740,000 in mid-September while unemployment fell 3,000 to 27,000.

The unemployment rate was 3.5 per cent higher than the Prairies and Ontaro but lower than Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

No Food 6 Days; But Couple Live

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)—An elderly Mormon couple survived six days and nights without food in south Utah's vast and desolate Last Chance Canyon country.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Lloyd lived on slimy, brackish creek water and, Lloyd said, "constant prayer."

"We're resurrected," the old man muttered as he was helped from the rescue plane which brought them to Salt Lake City Friday night.

The ordeal began Oct. 7 when Lloyd, 75, and his wife, 73, decided on a trip to the Red Rock Desert wilderness area.

Lloyd said a wrong turn led them down the Last Chance Canyon trail to a point where they could not turn the car around. While continuing downward the car slammed into a "washout" in the road.

They managed to get the car out, only to slide into a creek bed farther down. Lloyd said he did not want to try to walk out because of his wife's arthritis, so he spent most of last Saturday with a hammer and screwdriver until his hands were raw from breaking up the sandstone boulder that was jammed under the vehicle.

They finally abandoned the car late Saturday and decided to stick to the dry creek bed, which provided an occasional pool of water, rather than try for the rugged plateau above.

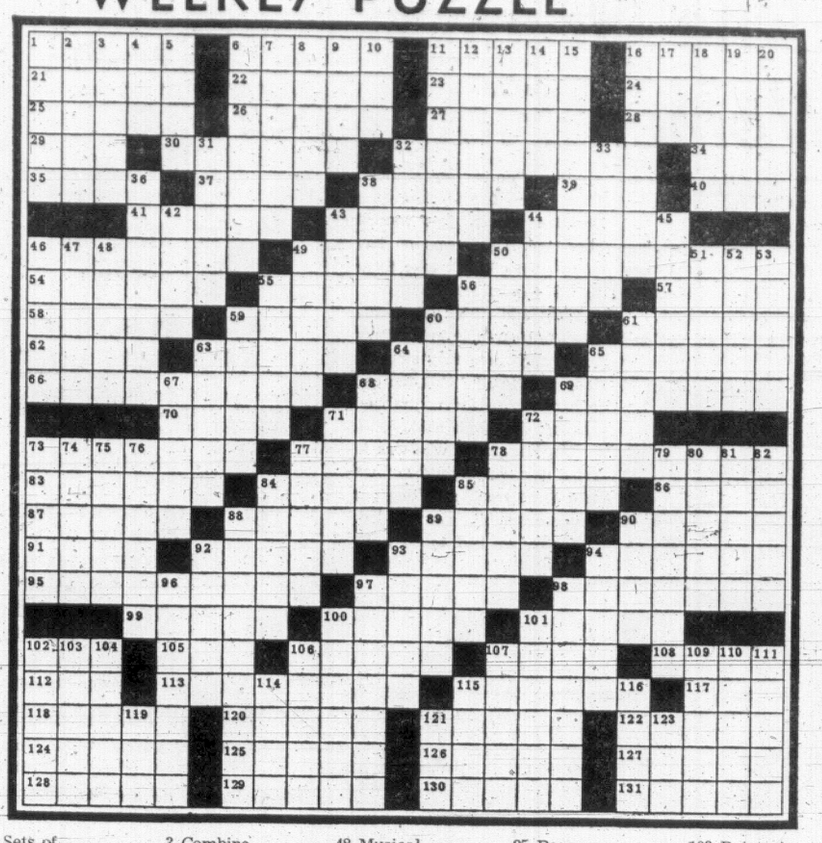

Lloyd said they built a fire each night. By Tuesday, a search for them was in full swing. He told relatives he saw planes on several occasions.

John Kimball, a game warden, found them wandering along the creek bed Friday, more than 30 miles from the nearest populated area.

Spain and the Mediterranean are visible north of Africa and the southern part of Africa is partially visible through the clouds. PLAYING OUT SOME SNARLS

This is a maze with a difference. The brain teaser is presented in this form:

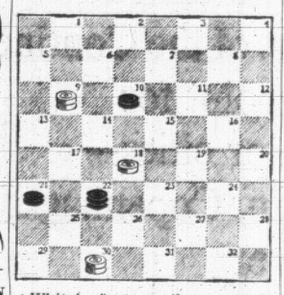

A playful kitten, tangled up five skeins of differently colored wool pawed out of a housewife's sewing and knitting basket. One end of each of the skiens is identified by color at the top of the diagram, and the other ends are numbered along the bottom.

The problem is to discover the colors of the numbered ends.

Walter Shephard, whose collection of classic designs, Mazes and Labyrinths, is available in a reprint (Dover Books) observes that "the oldest of all game devices for the pleasure of mankind is the labyrinth. Its origin is legendary, but the maze has always held a peculiar and persistent fascination for mankind."

See if this one fascinates you.

CHIP-DOWN CHECKER TEST

White's in a perilous spot in this checker game. He's down to three men, and his big gun on square 30 is trapped. Nevertheless, White thinks positively and wins.

White side, moving up the board, to move first and win in five moves is the challenge. How's it done?

Long-time super star Millard Hopper reveals the winning moves below. No fair peeking.

Solution: White 18-14, Black 10-17, White 9-13, Black 21-25 (if 22-26, White wins immediately), White 30-21-14, Black 22-26, White 13-17; then 25-21, 17-22.

TRICK'S A PUSHOVER

Try this at an outdoor party: Divide guests into teams. Pair up members of teams according to size. Rivals stand facing each other with toes touching. Palms of both hands also touch at the sides and chest level. At the word "go" opponents push each other's hands until one is forced to step back. Players who force their opponents backward are, of course, the winners.

WHAT'S THE WORD IN POETRY?

A word there is, five syllables contains,
Take one away, no syllable remains.

Answer: Monosyllable is the word. Take away "mo," "no syllable" remains.

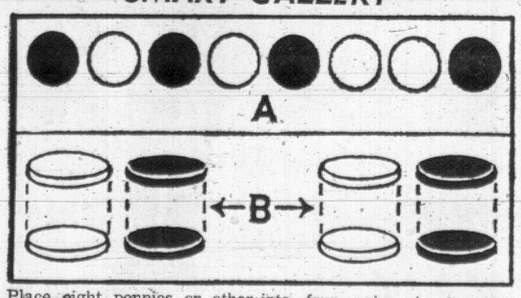

TRICK QUIZ

It is said "sumac" and "sugar" are the only two words in our language that begin with "su" that are pronounced "shy"? True?

Place eight pennies or other coins (all of the same denomination) in a row, with the first, third, fifth and eighth heads up, and the other four reversed, arranging them as indicated in row A — blacks as heads, whites as tails, or vice veras — avove.

The poser for you to solve is how to stack the eight pennies into four pairs, in just four moves, moving one coin over two others at each move, either left or right.

Diagram B offers this clue to one possible means of problem's solution: Two stacks of coins are shown at left and right of centre of eight-coin deployment.

Solution: Number coins (A) from left to right: 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. Switch four to seven; then six to two; one to three; and five to eight.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

The 46th edition of Scott's U.S. Specialized catalogue was released on Oct. 2. This year's volume features a record number of price changes—18,663 in all.

Since its early editions this catalogue has developed from a small pocket-sized book, to a hefty volume of 693 pages, devoted entirely to the issues of the U.S.A. and possessions. It is certainly a "must" for any dealer, or for anyone owning an extensive U.S. collection.

Malta was chosen as the venue for the 15th Congress of the History of Architecture, which was given philatelic recognition Sept. 12 with a special issue of four stamps.

The islands are especially rich in architectural remains, as examples may be found of various periods ranging from Neolithic times up to the present day.

The stamps comprising the set (2d, 6d, 1s, and 3s) show four distinct types—Megalithic, Norman, Renaissance, and what might be termed Maltese.

●

Seychelles has recently introduced universal adult suffrage on the island, and a set of four commemorates the event. The current 15c, 45c, 75c, and Rs.3.50 were suitably overprinted, and were released Sept. 18.

St. Lucia's 4c and 25c Christmas stamps will make their appearance later this month. They are the first to be issued by the island in this connection. They are printed in photogravure by Harrison and Sons, London, and feature Raphael's Madonna, Child, and St. John.

●

Cyprus, Seychelles, and Fiji, are among the Commonwealth countries which are bringing out special issues to commemorate "International Tourist Year." All three sets are naturally of a pictorial nature, depicting the beauty spots and special attractions of the islands concerned.

Two of the largest lots ever included in a stamp auction came up for sale at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, N.Y., lately.

The Josiah K. Lilly collection of U.S. proofs in sheets was apportioned into two lots having a total catalogue value of $258,759. They were first sold singly and realized $47,000 and $25,000 respectively. They were then re-offered as a combined lot, and eventually fetched $96,000—an all time record for a philatelic auction lot.

Russ Men the Greatest Aussie Women Find

TORONTO (CP) — Take plenty of canned goods if you travel in the Soviet Union by car.

That's the advice of two Australian teachers, Elizabeth Hardman, 23, and Dorothy Christophers, 29.

They came here in the course of a world tour which has kept them travelling since Jan. 1, 1966.

The young women spent five years plotting their adventure and found that the planning paid off.

In Russia, "restaurant meals are very expensive," said Elizabeth, "so we found our supply of tinned goods a godsend."

They said Russian men were the most considerate and gentlemanly of those they met.

"Generally they just wanted to talk and hear about our trip," said Dorothy. "And if we had any car trouble, they would do their utmost to help."

Next to the Russians, the East Germans were the most friendly.

"We ran out of gas on one of the autobahns and found the East Germans as helpful as the Russians," said Dorothy. "They soon found us some gas."

But they didn't find all people that helpful. At the Polish-Russian border they met with difficulty because they possessed some eggs.

"We were told we couldn't take them into Poland unless they had been cooked," said Dorothy. "So we cooked them. Then we found that the Russian guards just wanted the eggs. There was no law saying we couldn't take them across the border."

Visas and filling out forms gave them trouble in Hungary and everywhere they stopped, they practically "took the car apart looking for contraband goods," Elizabeth said.

"An interpreter who was to meet us never arrived and we had some trouble making our way around," she added. "Mostly, we had to do it by drawing pictures of what we wanted."

Both women are university graduates and at times have supplemented their incomes by working as teachers for three-month periods.

They first met in 1961, in Port Kembla, 80 miles south of Sydney. Since then they have travelled to England, Scandinavia, Spain, Italy, Yugosalvia, Hungary, Russia, Poland, East and West Germany, Austria, The Netherlands, Belgium and Greece.

From Toronto they plan to visit Winnipeg and Vancouver and then return home by ship in time for Christmas.

LAST DAYS of Expo are being enjoyed by Arlene Templier of Chilliwack who works as hostess at the Telephone Pavilion in Montreal.

Ben Gun Meets Demon Rum . . . A Loaded Situation

By JOHN MANNING

Former Victoria Times reporter John Manning and his wife, Pat, are currently on a 12,000-mile "Centennial Cruise" aboard their tiny sailing ship Powindah. The pair started in England and hope to end their cruise in the Inner Harbor. This is the 45th in a series on their adventures.

"The little man's going to die," said the Mate.

"He's still standing."

"Yes, but his eyes are shut and his mouth is open. He's obviously in some sort of coma."

It was true. Powindah's bosun, a green parrot by the name of Ben Gun, did not look at all well. We were 300 miles at sea bound on a westerly course of the Galapagos Islands; in high seas the bird was having difficulty in remaining on even keel. He was on his favorite perch — a volume of Shakespeare's plays. Since daybreak he had not uttered one seaman's oath, or even croaked when offered his favorite dish of boiled egg.

"What do you think's wrong?" asked Pat.

"It's difficult to say, perhaps he has liver trouble."

'No Joke'

"It's not a joking matter."

The bird's condition appeared to worsen and by sundown both Pat and I were certain his hour had come.

We crushed half a penicilin pill, mixed it with glucose and water and ladled this out to him with a soup spoon.

While it appeared to revive him he still could not open his eyes and was too weak to stand properly, so we wedged him up with towels, a hot water bottle and pieces of sliced banana which he refused to touch.

"I wish we were in port," said Pat. "At least he wouldn't have to hang on like this. He could sit still and use his strength to recover."

"The nearest anchorage is two hundred miles away."

"I feel so helpless. We just can't let him die without doing anything."

Medical Book

"Perhaps the medical book will tell us something more we can do for him," I said, trying more to calm the mate than think of ways to ply the bird with medicine. "I'll see what it has to say about comas."

The Ship Captain's Medical Guide, published by Her Majesty's Stationery Office is a rather impressive volume which gives, in plain language, suggested treatment for almost every illness or accident known to befall seamen.

It is the most practical of medical books; if all else fails, there is a final chapter detailing how to bury the patient. "The canvas for sewing the body should measure 15 feet by two feet. ... Fire bars, or other similar weighty material, should be sewn to the canvas. ... Finally a few three or four inch slits may be made in the canvas to enable the body to sink more rapidly."

However, as the Bosun's condition had not quite reached this state I bypassed 'Burial of the Dead' for a look at the index and found 'Coma, Diabetic, 185-186. Due to Alcohol, 191-192.'

Since I had never heard of a diabetic parrot I thumbed over to the section on alcohol.

It was most illuminating.

"Deaths of seamen (parrots) are recorded every year," intoned the guide, "Either as a direct result of excessive drinking of liquor, or from accidents, such as falling from wharves and gangways, happenings whilst under the influence of drink."

"The drinking of alcohol in ports abroad, where poisonous spirit of illicit origin is frequently offered to seamen (parrots), is especially dangerous."

Powindah had just sailed from Manta, Ecuador. The Bosun had not been ashore, thus ruling out 'spirit of illicit origin;' perhaps then he had found his way into the ship's grog supply.

"Maybe he's intoxicated," I said to the Mate.

"How could that be?"

"Well his condition fits every symptom of drunkenness and Lord knows he looks as tight as a tick. See if he smells of rum."

"You do it darling. It makes me sad to even look at him."

'He's Drunk'

The Bosun was barely breathing but in spite of this there was an unmistakeable, cloying odor of rum about him. "He's drunk all right. Where did he get it from?"

The Mate shrugged her shoulders.

"Well, he's been into it somehow," I said. "Better make some black coffee and we'll feed it to him with an eyedropper."

This operation took over an hour, for the bird was in such a comatose state that he could barely swallow.

Then he was carried up on deck and marched about the cockpit like a drunk in front of a police sergeant. Finally the cool night air began to revive him and by 0200 hours he was more or less his old self again, albeit slightly morose.

No Control

The mystery of the bosun's secret liquor supply was only solved when Pat discovered a half empty mug of rum and water in his cage.

Once a day, usually in the evening before turning in, or following the first watch, Powindah's crew 'splice the main brace' with a tot of rum.

In this instance Pat had not finished her drink and later, in the dim light of the cabin I had mistaken it for water and placed it in the Bosun's cage.

Like many sailors, especially those in wind driven ships, the Bosun could not control his rum thirst. For the remainder of the passage he was confined to the brig well out of flying range of the rum barrel.

Islanders To Hear Symphony

Out-of-town trips for the Victoria Symphony this month include the concert orchestra's trip to Salt Spring Island on Oct. 27.

This is a return trip requested by Salt Spring residents who were enthusiastic over the orchestra's first visit several months ago.

Again sponsoring the trip are the B.C. Centennial Committee and Salt Spring Island Lions Club.

The Symphony Society gives credit to Centennial Committee chairman Lawrie Wallace, for initiating the first visit to the island.

Accompanying the orchestra to Salt Spring and on Oct. 29 to Campbell River, where the same program will be presented, will be duo pianists Robin Wood and Winifred Scott and the Amity Singers.

Plans are also under way to present the concert in Duncan early in the new year.

Unless a local sponsor takes up the challenge, however, Victorians are unlikely to hear the exceptional program which could add a good deal of lustre to the McPherson Playhouse season.

The program includes Bach's Double Violin Concerto with concert master Ray Ovens and Elfrieda Gleam as duettists; the Amity Singers in a group of folk songs and one of Negro spirituals; Robin Wood and Winifred Scott with the Amity Singers performing the Brahms Liebeslieder Waltzes; and for piano, four hands, the Dvorak Slavonic Dances, Op. 46.

GATI ON PODIUM

The orchestra is playing Stamitz' Second Mannheim Concerto and the Bartok Rumanian Dances and combining with the singers in Bach's Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring, Mozart's Nocturne and Angels Holy, High and Lowly by Thiman.

Laszlo Gati will be on the podium for all out-of-town concerts.

The Symphony Society announced that tickets have been made available by a generous donor, to permit all members of the Victoria Police Youth Band to attend the recital by Soviet pianist Marina Mdivani at McPherson Playhouse next Wednesday.

This is the first of the series of solo recitals by noted international artists which will precede in each case their appearance with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

Miss Mdivani is to be soloist in the Tschaikowsky Piano Concerto in all-Tschaikowsky concerts Oct. 22 and 23.

Recital Next Week For 'Organ Crawl'

A special organ recital will be given at 12:15, Saturday, Oct. 21, at Christ Church Cathedral.

The recitalist will be Cathedral organist and choirmaster Richard Proudman.

The recital forms one of the noon-hour series presented weekly by Victoria School of Music. But it is also being given for the Vancouver Chapter of the Royal Canadian College of Organists, members of which will come by bus to Victoria on what is known as "an organ crawl."

In addition to the cathedral, they will visit St. Paul's Garrison Church, Esquimalt, to see the historical organ there, and following lunch will attend a second recital being given at St. John's Church at 3 by organist-choirmaster Donald Woodsworth.

DUNCAN STOP

They will also visit St. John's Church in Duncan.

The cathedral program will include works by Gibbons, Blow, Couperin, Bach, Martini, Reger and Tippett.

Assistant organist Peter Bishop will play selections by Gibbons on the 100-year-old gallery organ and choirboy Jeffrey Finch will sing the beautiful Pie Jesus from Faure's Requiem.

The event has been arranged jointly by Vancouver and Victoria Chapters of the RCCO, with the co-operation of Hugh McLean and Professor W. M. Barss, both of the University of Victoria.

The public may attend both recitals.

Shaw Classic Chosen For Season's Opener

Bastion Theatre's new Studio Theatre at 1840 Blanshard Street, kitty-corner from the Memorial Arena, will get its 1967-68 season under way Oct. 27, 28 and 29 with a reading of George Bernard Shaw's classic, Don Juan In Hell, with Vivienne Chadwick, Anthony Jenkins, Peter Mannering and John Martin.

Completing the program will be excerpts from Mozart's Don Giovanni, sung by Peggy Walton Packard, John Bray and Norman Tyrrell, accompanied by Donna Denike.

First play of the 1967-68 studio season will be Blood Wedding by Garcia Lorca, directed by Mr. Mannering. Playing dates for this production are Nov. 10, 11, 12 and 17, 18, 19.

Admission to studio presentations is $1. Tickets are available at Bastion Theatre, 1840 Blanshard Street, at the Book Nook on Centennial Square, and at Ivy's Bookshop on Wilmot Place in Oak Bay.

Reservations may be made by phone, 386-6121.

TYRRELL

Bastion's Studio Theatre was re-established last season with the aid of a grant from the Koerner Foundation. The new premises allow for an unusual variety of staging, with seating capacity from 60 to 80, according to the individual production.

Development of the Studio Theatre this season is under the direction of Mr. Mannering.

Art Course Needs Pupils

The 170-member Saanich Peninsula Art Centre will hold an art course in Sidney if sufficient pupils enroll in classes.

Mrs. Arthur Pitts, newly-elected vice-president, said a minimum of 18 persons are required for the course to be given by Peter Aspell of Vancouver.

"As soon as we have the required number of pupils, the course will start," she said.

The centre elected Mrs. Alan Smith as president for the year 1967-68; Mrs. C. H. Joy, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. R. W. Hunt, secretary, and Mrs. D. Thomas, treasurer.

The society decided to hold an exhibition of it's historic landmark paintings in Victoria next month.

The paintings, since last spring, have been on exhibition in various towns and cities in the province. They are presently being shown in Prince Rupert.

Officials estimated that over 100,000 people have seen the show to date.

LIGHTS OUT SUNDAY FOR DISPLAY

OTTAWA (CP) — The lights will play on the towers of Parliament and historic sounds will echo about Nepean Point for the last time Sunday night as the curtain goes down on the centennial Son et Lumiere show.

About 80,000 people, mostly tourists, have seen the nightly show since it began May 13. Because it is entirely electronic, it has run every night despite the weather.

Revue 67 To Open On Monday

Revue 67 is the title of the production to be given by the Florence Clough Dance Studio Monday and Tuesday at the McPherson Playhouse.

More than 150 students aged three to 25 will take part in the performance that features ballet, character, jazz and tap dancing.

Highlight of the show will be Through the Years — a dance representation of the years gone by.

The curtain rises at 8 p.m.

The Old Charmer's Returning

Over 74 years ago a new comedy, written by one of the most successful authors of the day, opened at the Royalty Theatre in London.

Its star was the most popular English comedian of the period, W. S. Penley, and its cast included many young actors who later became stars in their own right.

Since that fantastically successful opening on Dec. 21, 1892, Brandon Thomas' Charley's Aunt has been giving pleasure to audiences throughout the world on an almost continuous basis.

Soon after its 1892 presentation, no less than seven separate companies were on tour in England. There were tours also in Canada, the United States, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand.

The play was translated into every language under the sun—Charley's Tante, La Marraine de Charley and La Zia di Carlo made their appearance in Germany, France and Italy.

It spread like wildfire and soon there were translations into Afrikaans, Japanese, Zulu and Esperanto—even a Gaelic version for Wales.

48 COMPANIES

At one time no less than 48 companies were performing the comedy on the same night throughout the world.

In peace and war, Charley's Aunt was played without a break. She became the adopted aunt of every nation, friend and foe alike. Her laughter was—and still is—international.

Many of the theatre's most distinguished names have headed the casts in one production or another over the years, including Charles Ruggles, Syd Chaplin, Jack Benny, John Mills, Jose Ferrer, John Gielgud, Noel Coward, Ray Bolger, and Leslie Howard, to name a few.

HAPPY RETURN

The Victoria Theatre Guild has now made it possible for this uproariously funny play, whose lustre seems to improve with age, to be enjoyed by Victoria theatregoers. For some it will be a new experience—for others a happy return.

Charley's Aunt opens at Langham Court Theatre Saturday, Oct. 21, and will run throughout the following week.

A fine cast of talented veteran actors and newcomers, directed by Audrey Johnson, will delight young and old, for this is truly a family show that charms sophisticated and unsophisticated alike.

It is being presented, both in costume and style, in its original 1892 period.

The box office for advance reservations opens in Eaton's ticket centre Wednesday at 10 a.m. All seats are reserved and early booking is advisable.

Brothers Eye Top Circus

By RICHARD L. COE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Irvin and Israel Feld, who got into show business more or less accidentally here 14 years ago, now hope to buy outright the oldest and most celebrated entertainment enterprise on earth, the Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey circus.

The Feld brothers have piloted all but the New York stand of the big show's 46-week seasons in recent years and this 97th circus season has been its most profitable yet.

It was their knowledge of indoor arenas across the land which saved the old-line circus from extinction. The Felds dropped the big top and its big cost, concentrated on key population areas and extended the season so that now there is only a period of six weeks to construct new editions each year.

For the past five months, the Felds and New York theatre producers Feuer and Martin have been negotiating with John Ringling North, now in his sixties, for outright purchase of his family's circus. Negotiations can fall through, but the purchase, which will be an all-cash proposition, seems a likely possibility.

For the past 14 years, the Felds have sponsored outdoor entertainment promotions at Carter Barron Amphitheatre here. This past disastrous season saw only 10 nights in their 12 weeks in which it didn't threaten to rain or actually rain.

"We've been afraid to add up our figures for this summer," Irvin Feld said, "and won't for several weeks. No matter what, we'll be back, and we'll be back for 14 more years."

HOW WE IGNORE OUR OLD FOLKS

Honor Thy Pioneers . . . As Long as They Can Pay

By PETE LOUDON

The care and feeding of elderly persons in the capital region of Greater Victoria should be held up as an example to the rest of Canada.

A bad example.

At best it's a case of community indifference. At worst it's a scandal that's growing worse each day.

That's not a blanket condemnation of private hospitals and boarding homes in this area. Within the confines of the rules they work under, most of them claim to be doing the best they can.

Depending upon the financial resources of the patient, excellent care is available, often from dedicated people. And the days of the "snake pit" homes for the elderly are largely in the past.

The scandal lies in the fact that large numbers of elderly patients can't afford the system we've created for their accommodation.

The nub of the problem is that medical science makes people live longer today. But society hasn't been able to cope with the problem of their care.

That's the studied opinion not only of the writer but of many social workers, hospital officials and a large and pathetically helpless group of the more than 2,000 residents of our homes and hospitals for the aged.

Don't Approach the Cost of Care

What kind of mess are we in?

We give our destitute aged a federal pension of $105 at a time when boarding home operators claim they can't give good care for less than $150.

And about 30 per cent of boarding home residents here are in this category. Result is that boarding homes don't want them. Operators, as a group, accept only about five out of 25 to 35 applications each month.

When these people, who have only their pensions, require private hospital care (when they are bed cases), we augment their pension, making $230 available to the private hospital operator.

But the operators say they can't give adequate care for less than $270. (Fifty-six per cent of their present patients are now on the welfare scale.) So they discourage new admissions from welfare—often refuse them.

As a result, at time of writing, there are 50 such cases in the acute general hospitals, Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's.

The province is paying $30 a day for their care. They are ready to go back to private hospitals where it costs only $9 for the simpler day care they now require. But no private hospital wants them.

None of us likes to think about getting old.

And that's one of the reasons society has closed its eyes to the problems facing destitute elderly persons in Greater Victoria.

As a result, although Victoria has a larger percentage of elderly residents than any other Canadian city, we rank much lower in the care we offer them.

A special Times series, by reporter Pete Loudon, denounces the current situation here as a black eye for the capital region.

Why are invalid oldsters unable to get adequate care in their final years? Where are the weaknesses in our system? Who is to blame?

The five-part series will examine these questions and others.

Six of 21 Found Care Available

In Victoria during one recent month the city welfare office had 21 applications for private hospital beds. But only six applicants were placed. Patients with money, however, can almost always find a bed.

The social worker in charge of placements for Victoria, Mrs. Muriel Leith, says:

"If you gave me a new 100-bed hospital for elderly welfare patients, I'd fill it in two days."

People who should be in private hospital beds are left in boarding homes where care is minimal. Or they take up beds in acute hospitals geared to treat the more seriously ill.

Waiting lists of people who should be in acute hospitals are already outrageously long.

People who should be in boarding homes—those who are not bed cases but who require to be fed and given medication and gentle assistance with their personal care, are left in their homes or in cheap hotel rooms.

Many of them wither away there despite the efforts of Victorian Order of Nurses or Red Cross Homemakers.

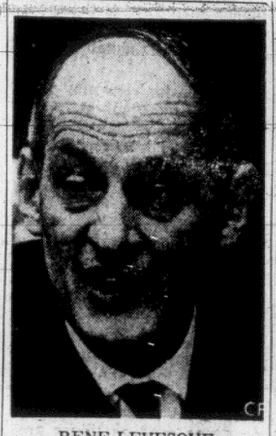

Some of the lucky ones end up on B.C. Hospital Insurance extended care units.

There are about 300 beds in non-profit hospitals for the elderly in the capital region, under BCHIS jurisdiction. Care costs the patient $1 per day.

BCHIS admits the need is for 600 beds. There's a four to

Levesque Rebuffed By Grits

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP)— Quebec's Liberal party Friday night virtually rejected separatism and chose to fight for a stronger status for Quebec within federalism.

The decision came in the form of a unanimous vote of confidence for Liberal Leader Jean Lesage at the opening of the annual meeting of the Quebec Liberal Federation.

Mr. Lesage made an opening address telling Liberals their choice at this meeting is between his form of federalism and Rene Levesque's form of separatism.

At the request of Eric Kierans, federation president, more than 600 delegates at the opening session conducted a formal vote of confidence endorsing Mr. Lesage's views.

The Liberal leader said he would resign from the party without delay if it accepts Mr. Levesque's proposal for a separate sovereign state of Quebec.

LEFT MEETING

Mr. Levesque, former minister of resources and welfare, walked away from the meeting on the verge of resignation. He charged that the meeting is "fixed" but did not elaborate.

Mr. Levesque accused Mr. Kierans of "crushing without discussion any point of view other than his own."

The strong anti-separatist atmosphere of the opening session established the impression of a steam-rolling drive to purge the party of separatists.

Mr. Lesage said he will personally defend a resolution by the federation's constitutional committee advocating particular status for Quebec and a new Canadian constitution.

The resolution rejects "separatism in all its forms."

Mr. Lesage said:

"If the option I am in favor of is not accepted and the other is then I will act according to the rules of democracy and resign without delay."

He said the choice is between separatism and federalism and "those who do not want to rally around the majority without reserve will have no choice but to leave the party."

Asked if he could rally around the federalism resolution "without reserve," Mr. Levesque said: "No."

Mr. Levesque immediately

Hong Kong Bombings Take Toll

Times News Services

HONG KONG — A mob of 30 Chinese today kidnapped a British police inspector following a border dispute here.

The attack climaxed a bomb-tossing spree by Communist terrorists overnight that killed two persons and wounded 33.

The police officer's name was not released.

Anti-British terrorists were reported busy planting bombs throughout the Hong Kong island and across the harbor channel.

They hurled two or three bombs into a crowd at the entrance of a Chinese fish and vegetable market in teeming Wanchai district on the island.

The wounded included four children, four men shoppers and two members of a police demolition team lured by a fake bomb call.

Two other rooftop bombing attacks injured eight more in Wanchai, at the entrance to a government clinic and in front of a post office.

Another bomb trap wounded a police inspector and a police constable on the main road between Kai Tak Airport and the posh tourist hotels in downtown Kowloon.

190 REPORTS RECEIVED

More than 190 reports of real and false bombs were received Friday.

A policeman was killed when Chinese terrorists hurled bombs at him as he investigated a dummy bomb, and an 18-year-old Chinese youth was fatally injured by a bomb thrown at police near him.

Authorities offered $17,500 in rewards for information leading to the arrest of the killers.

The deaths brought to 41 the number killed since May 11, when local Communists began inciting riots, labor strikes and terrorism in a campaign to weaken British authority over the colony on China's southern border.

Following a period of relative quiet, terrorists began planting bombs on a large scale Wednesday after police shot and killed a Chinese man in a crowd watching illegal Communist fireworks last Sunday, Communist China's national day. The colony has had an average of 50 bomb reports a day since then.

MINI-SKIRT proved just the thing for maxi-rain that swamped Vancouver Friday in a four-hour downpour. Robin Baxter wades through pedestrain underpass at entrance to Stanley Park on her way home. (CP Wirephoto)

Ontario Man and Girl Charged in Bank Job

NIXON

NIXON UNHURT IN PLANE FIRE

CAMP BORDEN, Ont. (CP) —A small charter aircraft carrying Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and his wife caught fire just before safely landing today.

Pilot W. J. Clarke said the fire resulted from a broken left-hand propeller seal which caused a serious oil leak.

Fire engines raced onto the tarmac as the Beech-18, twin-engine plane touched down with smoke pouring from the motor.

A 22-year-old unemployed painter from Ontario was charged in magistrate's court today with armed robbery.

Carl Raymond, suite 3, 2211 Ida, was arrested Friday about three hours after the Bank of Montreal at Fort and Richmond was robbed of $1,655.

A 16-year-old girl, arrested later in the afternoon, was charged with committing a juvenile delinquency—to wit, armed robbery, and appeared today in juvenile court. She was remanded to Monday.

Raymond was remanded to Thursday without plea or election until he can apply for legal aid.

When asked if he wanted to arrange bail, he told Magistrate Ostler "I have no one to put up bail."

GUN SEIZED

Police seized a sawed-off shotgun and a paper shopping bag containing the loot.

A box containing shells was located later.

Bank officials originally thought over $2,600 was missing, but a thorough check revealed $1,655, the same amount contained in the shopping bag, was the amount stolen.

Raymond came here with his wife from London, Ontario, two months ago. They drove out in a car which they later sold for junk.

HID UNDER HOUSE

Police arrested Raymond about 2 p.m. Friday in a basement crawl space of his apartment house.

The arrest came after a man had been chased to a nearby intersection by two bank employees and a customer.

A bystander reported seeing a man run into the apartment house.

Gunfire Exchanged Over River Jordan

TEL AVIV (Reuters)—Israeli and Jordanian forces exchanged fire for 45 minutes today, shelling each other's positions across the River Jordan about 15 miles south of the Sea of Galilee.

Both sides blamed the other for starting the shooting.

An Israeli Army spokesman said the fighting broke out when Jordanian forces opened fire from the east bank on Israeli troops near the Sheikh Husein Bridge.

Jordanian artillery joined in while Israeli tanks on the river's west bank fired at Jordanian positions, the spokesman said.

One Israeli soldier was wounded in the shelling, the spokesman said.

THE PILL NOW IS RETROACTIVE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — An American obstetrician said Friday a pill is being developed which will enable women to end pregnancy up to a month after conception.

Dr. R. T. Pion, associate professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Washington, said preliminary research already is under way in the Seattle area.

WIRE BRIEFS

N. Viet Assault

SAIGON (CP)—An estimated 500 North Vitenamese regulars, charging under cover of smoke screens and tear gas, mounted a furious assault on U.S. marines today in a renewed upsurge of fighting near the forward post at Oon Thien.

New Auto Proposals

DETROIT (AP)—Negotiators for the strikebound Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers had two new contract proposals on the bargaining table today, the first solid sign of possible accord in three months of talks.

Blast Rips Mine

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — An explosion and fire ripped through passageways more than a mile underground in the Carletonville gold mine today. At least 13 miners were feared dead. Three others were injured.

Will Join Jackie?

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Lord Harlech tentatively plans to join Jackie Kennedy and other friends on a trip to Cambodia, but may drop the idea if rumors linking him romantically to Mrs. Kennedy persist.

Death for Rape

MANILA (UPI)—A woman judge today found four playboys from wealthy families guilty of kidnapping and raping a pretty actress and sentenced them to death in a verdict read on a nationwide radio network. The defendants were also fined $2,500 each. The money will go to the victim.

Police Press Search

MONTREAL (CP)—Police in suburban St. Hubert are pressing the search for four bandits who Friday held up a branch of the Bank of Montreal at the Canadian Forces Base and escaped with loot now estimated at $53,000.

Subway Resumes Expo Service

MONTREAL (CP) — Subway service to Expo 67 was resumed today in the bitter 24-day Montreal transit strike, but no buses were rolling along city streets.

The three-mile subway line from downtown Montreal to the south shore of the St. Lawrence River via Expo's St. Helen's Island began carrying passengers at 8:30 p.m.

It was the first sign today of continuation of a possible break in the strike by workers who returned to their jobs Friday in defiance of union leaders.

About 35 buses started moving on downtown streets late Friday and the subway to Expo operated for a few hours, but most of the 6,000 striking Montreal Transportation Commission employees prolonged their refusal to obey court injunction ordering them back to work.

The buses, serviced and manned by strikers apparently abiding by the terms of the injunctions calling for a resumption of work for at least 80 days, were the first to roll in the city since the strike began Sept. 21.

Police and some angry strikers milled around various MTC depots early today, watching for any appearance of buses from garages.

There were a few early scuffles and three men were taken into a police paddy wagon. But generally, the scene was reported quiet.

BUSES PELTED

The surprise return of limited bus operation Friday sparked angry clashes between the returning drivers and strikers. Eggs and tomatoes were hurled at some buses, and strikers yelled "scab" at the drivers.

Union leaders late Friday called on strikers to picket all MTC garages and depots in the city today.

APPEAL ARMY GEARS UP FOR RESIDENTIAL BLITZ

By TED GASKELL

A slightly under-strength army of canvassers moves into the residential districts Monday as the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal starts its household canvass.

Its objective is $154,200, the householders' share of the $600,000 target set this year by United Appeal to service its 24 agencies.

Mrs. Shirley Baker, chairman of the residential division, said there will be about 1,900 canvassers in the field throughout the Greater Victoria area but 2,000 are needed immediately. She expects more will be required before the campaign ends.

RED CROSS HELP

Victoria's Red Cross chapter, now a partner in the United Appeal, is lending its organizational knowledge and experience to the canvass and many Red Cross canvassers are on the team.

Greater Victoria has an objective of $92,000; Central Saanich, $5,200, and Sidney-North Saanich, $9,000. Completing the $164,000 total is $58,000, the advanced gifts division share which has more than $40,000 pledged, but not received.

Mrs. Baker said that the need for canvassers in the Langford area is great. Another problem is the high-rise apartments but it is hoped that people living in apartments where canvassing is not permitted will send in their donations.

On Wednesday 120 University of Victoria students will conduct a one-night blitz in that area to raise funds for the appeal.

BUSINESS CANVASS

G. F. Auchinleck, campaign chairman, said "the business canvass is starting to bring in funds but it is obvious that we have an uphill fight on our hands.

"The residential canvass is more important than ever. We must get every dollar we can if we are to reach the target and we hope, with the Red Cross as a partner, we can do it."

The residential campaign officially opens at midnight Sunday following a canvassers' rally and film showing at the Odeon at 8:30.

SHRUM ADVICE TO INDUSTRY

'Your Techniques Need Examining'

By AB KENT
Business Editor

Architects, engineers and construction men meeting in Montreal Friday were challenged by B.C. Hydro co-chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum to meet earthly problems with the zeal astronauts apply to space research.

The meeting was for the 1967 concrete awards, sponsored by the federal department of industry co-operating with the national design council and the Portland Cement Association.

Kent

Dr. Shrum—partly responsible for the millions of tons of concrete used in W. A. C. Bennett dam — conceded that concrete technology is here to stay.

But it needs continuing design work and the construction industry must find ways of making the cost of building cheaper, Dr. Shrum said.

Otherwise the industry will have contributed to an acute sociological problem—pricing homeowners out of the market.

"Denying couples with growing families a suitable place to live strikes at the very foundation of our society," the engineer-physicist told his audience.

It seems ironic that in Canada, with ample building materials, skilled workmen and no real shortage of engineers and architects, there is a housing shortage, and in spite of incomes being at an all-time high, he said.

Yet there is no shortage of cars and of car buyers—people frequently have two and three cars in the driveway, even though housing may be substandard.

If it is because these people feel they get better value in cars than in a home, "your marketing techniques need examination."

"Regretfully, I forecast that we shall be providing more and more subsidized housing for families who will be spending more and more of their incomes on new automobiles and other luxuries which are not as important as better homes for their children," Dr. Shrum said.

"Unfortunately luxuries seem to have a fascination for spenders . . . coupled with this is the growing philosophy that a beneficent government will probably provide the necessities."

★ ★ ★

He also singled out the high cost of land and burdensome taxes, but directed his main criticism at low productivity and wages that are out of line.

Construction industry costs skyrocket with increased labor costs and low productivity rather than high equipment costs, making it necessary to cut on-site labor with such techniques as prefabrication, Dr. Shrum said.

Also, bargaining must be undertaken "realistically," not "in the manner of the federal government but with the same motivation as that apparent in those manufacturing industries which must be competitive with imported goods."

"Increase efficiency and reduce costs," sums up the message he gave the meeting, and in that way workers and managers might help build a better world, as determined and dedicated as spacemen who tackle the universe.

Again on loan to conduct the annual Canada savings bond payroll deduction campaign on Vancouver Island is Victoria investment salesman Bill Munro, of Hagar Investments.

Munro

He is veteran of 21 previous bond drives, including the Victory loan effort of the Second World War.

David Else, also of Hagar's, will assist in the organization, which will take the men into logging camps, mines and factories.

In spite of the attractive interest rate and compounding feature of the current series of savings bonds, not all previous series should be converted.

Persons wondering about exchanging the bonds for the new 5¼ per cent issue should remember that last year's centennial issue carries a yield of 5.6 per cent average compared with 5.48 per cent for the new issue, and it also has the double-your-money feature if held to maturity.

Another which should be held to maturity is the series 14 due for redemption next November at a $3 premium, and still another is the 1962 series paying 5½ per cent up to 1976.

Angry Reaction To Mill Closure

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—The announcement Friday that steel making will be ended in this East Coast city by Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. brought a quick and angry reaction.

In an announcement that stunned Cape Breton, the big island at the north end of Nova Scotia, Dosco sad steel making operations would end by next April 30.

Premier G. I. (Ike) Smith, visibly angered, told reporters that Dosco lacked a sense of "corporate responsibilities to its employees and to the community."

Health Minister Allan MacEachen, Nova Scotia's representative in the Canadian cabinet, said he was deeply shocked."

Robert Stanfield, premier of Nova Scotia until a month ago and now national leader of the Progressive Conservative party, said: "It is difficult to imagine a more serious problem in our part of the country than this one."

William Marsh, leader of the United Mine Workers union in Cape Breton, said Dosco had "robbed and raped" Cape Breton.

Dosco is a member of the British Hawker Siddeley group of companies.

Mr. MacEachen suggested that Dosco officials appear at a public meeting in Sydney Monday to answer questions from government, union and municipal leaders, but Mr. Smith said he understood Dosco officers would not attend such a meeting.

RUMORS SPREAD

Rumors spread quickly throughout the city when it was learned that Sir Arnold Hall, chairman of the Hawker Siddeley group, and Dosco Chairman T. J. Emmert were meeting in Halifax Friday with Mr. Smith's cabinet.

The two company officials were stern-faced and silent when they entered the meeting. They left with similar expressions, still refusing to comment.

The closing announcement came at 7:35 p.m.

Switchboards at newspaper offices and at radio stations were jammed with calls.

Mr. Smith, who succeeded Mr. Stanfield as premier, said his government will give immediate consideration to the possibility of placing the steel mill under the responsibility of the new Cape Breton Development Corp.

This corporation was established to oversee the phase-out over 15 years of the 6,000-man Cape Breton coal industry while, at the same time, attempting to attract new industry to the island.

For more than 60 years coal and steel have been the twin economic backbones of industrial Cape Breton, peopled by hardy descendents of settlers from Ireland and Scotland and, more recently, several continental European countries.

If Dosco succeeds in abandoning its steel mill, built in 1900 and the smallest of four Canadian basic steel plants, and if the coal mines are closed on schedule, the Cape Breton way of life could be totally altered within a few years.

While there was gloom here, there has been industrial development 80 miles away at the Strait of Canso. A pulp mill has been built and an oil refinery and heavy water plant are among plants on the drawing boards.

And there have been some new industries established near here—such as a Japanese auto-assembly plant and a heavy water plant in nearby Glace Bay. But these will employ only a few hundred.

U.S. Senate Protectionists Up in Arms

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The trade revolt scheduled for the U.S. Senate next week by the "new protectionists" may lead nowhere this congressional session.

But the U.S. government and most of the trade-conscious foreign observers here are running scared. Congress is in a cranky frame of mind, rejecting proposed tax increases, cutting poverty spending and fighting President Johnson over Vietnam. Forecasting is hazardous.

Even if no effective action is taken to restrict imports of petroleum, lead and zinc, steel, dairy products, textiles and many other items, the government is facing the first major protectionist drive in many years.

Tariff concessions gained from Canada, Europe, Japan and other major American export markets at the Kennedy Round of tariff reductions could go down the drain.

One official estimate is that the assorted restrictionist bills before Congress, if enacted, could lop $3,600,000,000 from the U.S. import bill.

CANADA A LOSER

Canada, as the biggest single U.S. supplier, potentially could lose millions of dollars worth of sales in crude oil, beef, lead and zinc, dairy products and steel.

Canadian officials concede the restrictionist climate could mean serious trouble for the Canada-U.S. auto production agreement, to be reviewed this year on its first three years.

They see no letup until next year's elections are completed in early November.

Some of the senators leading the Senate move, including Democrat Vance Hartke of Indiana, fought the 1965 legislation that eliminated North American tariffs for manufacturers of new motor vehicles and original parts.

Hartke is to introduce a bill Monday cutting imported steel, a blow mainly affecting Japan. But Canada sold $170,000,000 worth of pig iron and steel here last year. Some actually was re-exported to Canada after manufacturing.

LONG ANTI-CANADIAN

Ironically, Democrat Russell Long of Louisiana, as chairman of the Senate finance committee, is on the anti-Canadian side this time. He is holding hearings Wednesday, Thursday and Friday as chairman of the committee which seems likely to approve assorted restrictive legislation.

Long himself is sponsoring a bill that would clap a firm ceiling on Canada's crude oil exports, rising steadily since 1961. That would be the major economic setback for Canada.

Ottawa to Increase Pensions by $1.50

OTTAWA (CP) — The basic federal old-age pension will rise to $76.50 a month from $75 next year under the first automatic cost-of-living increase, informants said Friday.

Government calculations have placed the cost-of-living increase in the year ended June, 1967, at two per cent.

Coincidentally, the increase is the maximum permitted under the federal formula which hinges major pensions to cost of living increases. The minimum is one per cent.

The two-per-cent increase goes into effect at the beginning of 1968. It will also apply to the federal old-age supplement and to those who receive retirement payments under the national contributory pension plan.

The maximum old-age supplement will rise to $30.60 a month from $30. Therefore the pensioner receiving both the $75 flat figure and the full supplement will have his monthly income raised to $107.10. The increase is $2.10.

The monthly pension ceiling under the national contributory pension plan will rise to $106.25 from $104.17, up $24.96 for a full year. But the full retirement pension doesn't come into effect until 1976.

Other changes:

- Maximum earnings on which Canada Pension Plan contributions can be made will rise to $5,100 a year from $5,000.
- Maximum annual contributions to the plan by both employers and employees will rise to $81 from $79.20.
- Maximum annual contributions by self-employed people will go from $158.40 to $162.

Workers Against Strike

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP — Employees at three interior lumber companies near this Cariboo centre Friday voted not to strike to back demands for wage increases.

Employees at a fourth company voted in favor of strike action in the government-supervised ballotting.

The contracts for the lumber workers—members of the International Woodworkers of America — expired later than those of other Interior woodworkers. All are seeking parity with coast woodworkers.

Voting in favor of strike action were employees of Merrill and Wagner Ltd. Voting against were workers at Lignum Lts., a Vancouver-based company, Canim Lake Lumber and West Fraser Timber.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor Friday rejected a system of voluntary wage-price guidelines recommended by Finance Minister Sharp.

"Labor is tired of being made the sacrificial lamb for the mistakes and excesses of others," said Ray Haynes, secretary of the federation.

The federation accused the federal government of ignoring the advice of the Economic Council of Canada which rejected the practicability of income policies in Canada in a recent report.

It urged the government to implement the Carter tax recommendations to decrease consumer spending.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1967—PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

This column is not going to be easy for me to write, because it requires a departure from a viewpoint that I held for a long time. But the evidence is now overwhelming that our marijuana laws are badly in need of an overhaul.

I am not about to make a pitch for the use of pot, tea, grass, or whatever other diminutive the friends and foes of Indian hemp apply to marijuana. As with alcohol and cigarettes, we would probably be better off without the stuff.

But that it should be forbidden even to serious and qualified researchers, and that its use should expose the smoker to penalties more suited to crimes of violence, no longer impresses me as necessary or reasonable.

The clincher for me is the report made public this week by B.C. Medical Association; a professional body that would sooner gash its collective throat with a dull scalpel than advance a hasty or unstudied opinion.

On the strength of the BCMA report, and other expert testimony available, it seems that our official attitude toward marijuana may be based on a premise that owes more to fiction than to fact.

This being so, I think our lawmakers would do well to seek out the truth of the matter with no more delay than need be. Then, having come at it, they should deal with existing legislation as their findings indicate.

★

Until this is done, it is unlikely that an ugly and worrying situation will change.

The Times city page on which the medical association committee's views were printed also carried an account of a sort that has become drearily familiar.

There was only one marijuana conviction in Greater Victoria last year, we were informed.

The 1967 score to date was given as seven convictions, with another six persons on charge and waiting trial. All are young; and you can be sure they represent a mere fraction of local young people who are trifling with laws that relegate marijuana to the narcotics category.

Well, the law is the law, and those who break it must face the consequences.

This is true, and I could wish that every Victoria young one would accept the fact and spare himself or herself a possible spell in prison and criminal record.

This urging, however, does not alter my growing conviction that the "crime" in question by no means merits the punishment provided.

The trafficker, of course, is something else again. I do not propose to bleed for anyone who chooses the role of smuggler or bootlegger, or both.

★

The meat of this matter, it seems to me, is contained in the two concluding paragraphs of the section of the BCMA report that deals with the marijuana question:

"This legal implementation in creating a new class of criminal among otherwise law-abiding people may thereby produce more social disruption than could result from the unrestricted use of the drug itself. These are serious considerations that merit dispassionate, reasoned and objective thinking.

"This is not to say that marijuana should not be subject to some legal control. It is, after all, both habituating and intoxicating. However, a more appropriate legal control than the one presently in force should be sought."

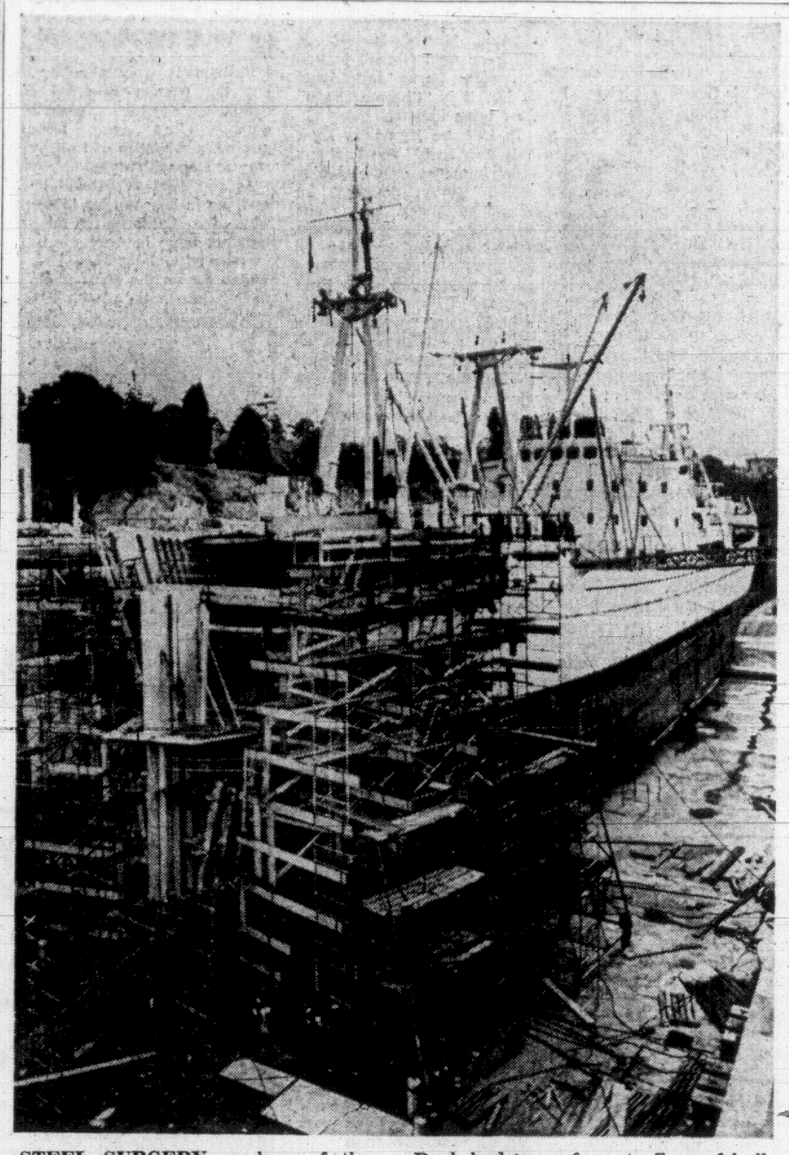

The message is plain, and I for one hope that it will be heeded by those with power to correct a law whose virtue is in doubt.

MORE STUDY?

Delay Asked In Sewer Plan

A ratepayers' group in Saanich said today there should be a further study on sewage disposal in the Greater Victoria area.

But Coun. Leslie Passmore replied that "all the evidence we have is that this is a good scheme."

He challenged the Saanich Action Committee to come up with hard facts and not "nebulous insinuations."

Roy Ralfs, president of the Saanich Action Committee, said members of the group "are of the opinion that the sewer study that was recently done is inadequate.

"There has not been enough attention paid to alternate methods of treatment and, or, disposal of sewage."

He said the study was expensive (it cost $70,000) but if an additional study is necessary "money should not deter us because the main job itself will cost a minimum $23 million and probably a great deal more before it's finished."

Before the big undertaking is started, "it is important that the majority of taxpayers are convinced that the way chosen to solve this problem is appropriate and adequate."

To this end, he said, the Capital Regional Board "should spend whatever is required to produce a further study to ensure that the method adopted will be both suitable for the present and capable of being upgraded in the future to meet the needs of the increasing population this area is sure to attract."

The committee, he added, will stage a public meeting next month and is lining up four speakers although he did not identify them at this stage.

The regional sewerage study recommended continued disposal at sea but through much longer pipes which would lead to deep water instead of just past the shoreline.

PURPOSE IN DOUBT

Coun. Passmore replied that he anticipated a campaign would start and while many individuals were sincere, "many will climb on to the bandwagon because they don't want to pay money for adequate sewage disposal."

He said proponents of composting sewage never provide details of how the sewage will be pumped to a composting area or what the costs will be. And no experts are provided to disprove the regional sewerage study.

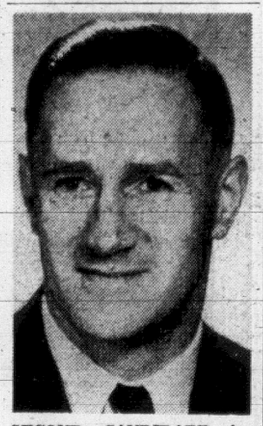

"The Metropolitan Board of Health through Dr. Whitbread endorsed getting sewage and dumping far out to sea," he said.

"All the (civic) engineers in Greater Victoria collaborated and they wouldn't do this if it was not a practical scheme."

The proposed scheme, with the rebuilt outfalls, must be approved by the provincial Pollution Control Board and licences issued.

"They have the power—we have seen this at Brentwood Bay," he said, referring to the board's rejection of a dumping plan there.

The Capital Regional Board, he recalled, received a report on sewage composting which rejected the idea and gave instances of other areas which tried this method unsuccessfully.

SECOND CANDIDATE for reeveship of Oak Bay is Coun. John D. Watts who announced his candidacy today. Earlier Coun. Fred Hawes said he would run for the office now held by retiring Reeve Allan Cox. Coun. Watts has been on Oak Bay council since 1959 and is Oak Bay's representative on the Capital Region Board. Last year he was president of the Vancouver Island Municipalities Association.

Post Office Sub-Station Work Started

Work has started on the renovation of the old Safeway store at Fort and Oak Bay Avenue for a new Victoria post office substation.

Postmaster Allan M. Davies said today he had hoped the new office, to be known as Postal Station B, would be open before Christmas but now February appears to be a more likely date.

A similar office, Postal Station A, will open next month at the corner of Saanich Road and Douglas Street.

Both offices will function with all the services available at the main post office on Government Street, said Mr. Davies.

WICKET SERVICE

Each substation will have a front office with four or five extra persons employed. About 30 postmen will be served from the office for routes in the substation areas.

Mr. Davies said there are no plans to close down any smaller sub-post offices, although this might be considered if business declines to any great extent.

Father of Four Killed In Comox Ditch Collapse

A 40-year-old Victoria man died Friday when trapped in a ditch cave-in during construction of a water main near Comox.

Dead is Thomas Desmond Nunan, 2774 Tudor, father of four.

Mr. Nunan, a sub-contractor on a new Comox Valley regional water project, was supervising digging operations. He climbed into a 10-foot-deep ditch and suddenly it caved in on him.

Mr. Nunan was covered by the earth. Workers at the site managed to uncover his head within about five minutes but he was already dead.

An inquest into the mishap opened today but was adjourned until a later date.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Mr. Nunan was born in Kenya and educated in Dublin at Trinity College. He came to Victoria five years ago with his wife Wanda from Kenya.

Mr. Nunan worked with Willis and Cunliffe before going into business on his own.

RETAINS PREMISES

City Music School To Merge With Uvic

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The 500-student Victoria School of Music will affiliate immediately with University of Victoria.

The move was announced today by university president Malcolm G. Taylor and music school president John Graeme.

They said the arrangement will give the School of Music conservatory status as a fully professional training ground able to attract top faculty from anywhere in the world.

The school will remain in its Pandora Ave. premises for the present, they added.

FINANCIAL AID

The affiliation is expected to mean the school of music will now receive subsidies for its work and be less dependent upon private financing.

The announcement follows a summer of negotiation and a university senate meeting this week at which the unanimous decision was made. An equally unanimous decision was reached at Friday night's annual meeting of the School of Music.

The school will now become the university's conservatory, an arrangement unique in British Columbia, Dr. Taylor pointed out, and hardly to be matched in any Canadian city outside of Toronto.

"Affiliation will enable the university's music students to receive first-class instrumental and vocal tuition in the most economical way," said Professor Peter Garvie, director of Uvic's School of Fine Arts.

INSTRUCTION AID

"It will permit the School of Fine Arts to build the performance side of its music program on resources already here without the expense of engaging its own group of teachers of performance," he pointed out.

Director of the School of Music, Robin Wood, concurred with Professor Garvie. Affiliation will mean a major extension of the school with its courses leading directly into the university's Bachelor of Music program.

"It will mean, for another thing, that the school will be able to attract the finest faculty," Mr. Wood commented.

"We already have, as a nucleus, a very good faculty," the former Royal Academy of Music professor added. "Actually as good as can be found anywhere."

"We will now be able to provide an integrated musical education for children, right through to professional status," Mr. Wood pointed out.

ARTIST'S DIPLOMA

"It is intended to set up our own examinations and to establish an artist's diploma in addition to the academic course," he said.

He stressed that the school will continue to be outward looking, desiring to serve the community as a whole and to cooperate with the private studios.

President John Graeme sees the affiliation as a culmination of extremely hard work to bring the standards of the school to a pitch which would receive university approval.

"The event is a tremendous credit to the board, from the time of its first president, Mrs. Massy Goolden, to the present and to the faculty head and his assistants," Mr. Graeme feels.

"Effects of the affiliation on the musical life of the community will be quite dramatic," he believes, pointing out that many outstanding teacher-performers will be attracted and inevitably will swell the professional musician ranks of the area.

BODIES GOING TO MAINLAND ON RUSS SHIP

The bodies of eight men drowned in the sinking of the Pan Oceanic Faith will not be landed at Victoria, contrary to earlier reports.

The Russian merchant ship Orekhov with the bodies aboard was originally scheduled to dock here tonight but a spokesman for King Bros. Ltd. shipping agency said it has altered destination.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre also said he has been informed the Orekhov will now go straight to Vancouver and the bodies will be taken off there.

The American cargo ship Pan Oceanic Faith sank in heavy seas Monday, about 870 miles southwest of Kodiak, Alaska. Twenty-two perished. The bodies will be identified at Vancouver and arrangements then will be made to ship them to relatives in the United States.

City's Apathy Said Killing Hope for Park

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Vancouver Island may lose an opportunity for a national marine park on its doorstep because of the lack of initiative on the part of Victoria.

The warning was issued Friday by a spokesman for Bamfield Chamber of Commerce.

Bruce Scott said Victoria Chamber of Commerce or the city council have never asked Ottawa to have the green belt between Port Renfrew and Bamfield on the west coast of Vancouver Island included in the national park system.

On the other hand, he said, Tofino and Ucluelet have continually pressed the government to establish the park at Schooner Cove near Long Beach.

EITHER ONE

The government is expected to choose one of the two areas for inclusion in its national park system.

"Victoria's lack of interest is inexplicable," he said. "The advantages to be gained are obvious, not only for local residents, but also for businessmen who stand to gain from the increase tourist traffic over the west coast trail system."

"It's not every city which has a potential national park on its doorsteps," he added.

He said Victorians seemed to be unaware of the primaeval beauty of the rugged coast line and its potential as a recreational area.

Mr. Scott's point is expected to be raised at the next meeting of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

CANADA COUNCIL DIRECTOR:

Fresh Look at Bastion Grant

The Canada Council is reconsidering whether Victoria's Bastion Theatre is eligible for a financial grant, Jean Boucher, director of the Canada Council, said here today.

Visiting here with council members from across Canada, Mr. Boucher said:

"We are seeknig a more satisfying assessment of the work of the Bastion Theatre, and various experts will study its work during the coming season."

SAME TREATMENT

"I know there has been some feeling here that the Bastion Theatre has not been treated fairly," Mr. Boucher said. "Actually it has not been treated differently from any other Canadian group at the same stage of development.

"Because we have not made a grant is no reflection on the quality of the Bastion Theatre. All across Canada similar theatre groups are seeking assistance.

"We have only limited resources and we have to follow a policy of investing money in a consistent pattern. Now that the Bastion Theatre has become such a live issue, we shall certainly seek a more satisfying assessment of its work."

Mr. Boucher visited Greater Victoria Art Gallery this morning with 21 members of the Canada Council, including Jean Martineau, Montreal, chairman, and J. Frank Leddy, Windsor, Ont., vice-chairman.

MEMBERS of grant-making Canada Council visited Greater Victoria Art Gallery today during "assessment tour." Eastern Church To Be Restored

By DON McLEOD

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Use of one piece of Newfoundland history to assure the preservation of another has succeeded in raising $1,400 for restoration of Christ Church at Quidi Vidi, a monument to an early ill-fated ecumenical movement.

Mrs. Norman Gooderich, publicity chairman of the Newfoundland Historic Trust, said Thursday night the showing of the movie The Viking Sept. 8 has netted enough to assure payment for heavy structural work on the 133-year-old church.

About $1,200 was realized from the showing of the movie—Canada's first feature sound film—in Memorial University's Little Theatre. Another $200 has come in since then as donations, possibly resulting from two subsequent television screenings of the movie here last month.

The money brought cash returns from all drives to $5,400. About $1,500-$2,000 in materials has been amassed and volunteer labor has been assured for some 30 to 50 per cent of the reconstruction task.

BUILT IN 1824

An Anglican place of worship since 1843, the church was built nine years before that, ostensibly to serve Anglicans, Methodists and Congregationalists in Quidi Vidi village, a tradition-steeped fishing enclave, now encircled by St. John's.

Some say the early church-union movement failed over the distribution of rum tots to workmen building the structure, a practice to which the tee-talling Methodists took exception.

Eventually the church fell into such disrepair that Anglican authorities at St. John's said it would be cheaper to build a new one than it would to restore it and, in any event, Quidi Vidi residents could easily attend other churches in St. John's.

They de-consecrated it and it was to be torn down when the historic trust was formed, primarily to save the church.

The problem was money and despite a fund drive and other donations the thing that put the first phase of work over the top and assured contractors their bills would be paid was the decision to show The Viking for the first time in Newfoundland, where it was made.

SHOT IN CHURCH

Scenes in the story, a portrayal of the life of sealers ashore, were shot in the church itself by cameramen working for New York director Varick Frissell in 1930.

He hired the sealer Viking,

MIRACLE is claimed by missionary Mrs. Robert Parkinson who found safety after liner was torpedoed in 1942. Her husband drowned.

Divine Hand Led to Safety

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Times Church Editor

When the Canadian liner Lady Hawkins was torpedoed in the South Atlantic in 1942, Rev. and Mrs. Robert J. Parkinson and a number of other passengers jumped into the dark sea.

Mr. Parkinson was never seen again and 250 of the 300 odd passengers were believed drowned. But his wife found a lifeboat and was saved.

"It's a miracle I found it," Mrs. Parkinson said in Victoria today. "It was 2 a.m. and I seemed to be swimming around for hours, not knowing where I was going, when suddenly I had an urge to strike out in a particular direction.

"And it led me straight to one of our lifeboats. There were 76 of us aboard that boat and we drifted for five days and nights. Some of us died before we were picked up by a U.S. passenger boat and taken to Puerto Rico."

Mrs. Parkinson believes she received divine guidance when swimming around in the South Atlantic with no light to guide her — and she will speak of this in a talk to the congregation of Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

At 11 a.m. she will be guest speaker at North Douglas Pentecostal.

Mrs. Parkinson, born at Brockville, Ont., in now national director of the Women's Missionary Council of the Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada, in Toronto.

TRINIDAD

Previously she was active in many missionary fields. When she and her husband were torpedoed in 1942, they were bound for a missionary posting at Trinidad.

After being picked up and landed at Puerto Rico, Mrs. Parkinson decided to go on alone. She flew to Trinidad and carried on active missionary work for three years before moving on to other places.

Will she remain in Toronto indefinitely?

"Who knows?" says Mrs. Parkinson. "I may have an urge to go to Montreal — or Peking. To be a true missionary you must be ready to go anywhere."

Assistant Priest Fixes Antiques

A clergyman whose hobby is refinishing antiques has been appointed assistant priest at St. John's Anglican Church, Victoria.

Rev. Leonard Jenner has a fine collection of antiques at his home at 935 Balmoral and is especially interested in Canadiana.

Born in Ontario, Mr. Jenner took his clerical training at Bishop's College, Lennoxville, Que. Before ordination, he undertook a lay ministry at the Sept-Iles iron ore company for six months.

JENNER
. . . his hobby

After ordination, he served three years at St. George's Church, Guelph, and built up a young people's fellowship of more than 100. In the field of Christian education he set up libraries and teacher training courses and worked with youth at the deanery and diocesan levels.

Mr. Jenner then moved to the Cariboo and became vicar of the three-point parishes of Lillooet, Pemberton and Bralorne.

Again he made great strides with young people of the community and became chaplain to the Canadian Legion and the Sea Cadets of St. Croix.

ESCAPES DEATH

Last Christmas Day, while en route to take services at Bralorne, he narrowly escaped death when his car was demolished by a rockslide.

From Lillooet he moved to St. Phillip's Anglican Church, Vancouver and again became much involved in young people's work.

"He is a valuable addition to our staff," says Canon Grahame Baker, rector of St. John's.

Monday Start Set On New Sanctuary

Construction of a sanctuary for Cadboro Bay United Church will begin Monday.

A sod-turning ceremony will be held following the Sunday morning service.

The sanctuary will adjoin the Sunday school wing of the Edward F. Church Hall on Arbutus Road. It will be small but of striking architectural design to complement the modern architecture of the hall.

The Edward F. Church Hall was named after Rev. Edward F. Church who started the Cadboro Bay United congregation in 1960. Mr. Church is still living in the neighborhood, but has been succeeded as minister by Rev. C. Leighton Streight.

At a recent meeting, the congregation approved a bid of $49,185 by E. J. Hunter Construction Co. The church will be of standard frame construction on a slab foundation. The exterior will have large windows and a rough plaster finish.

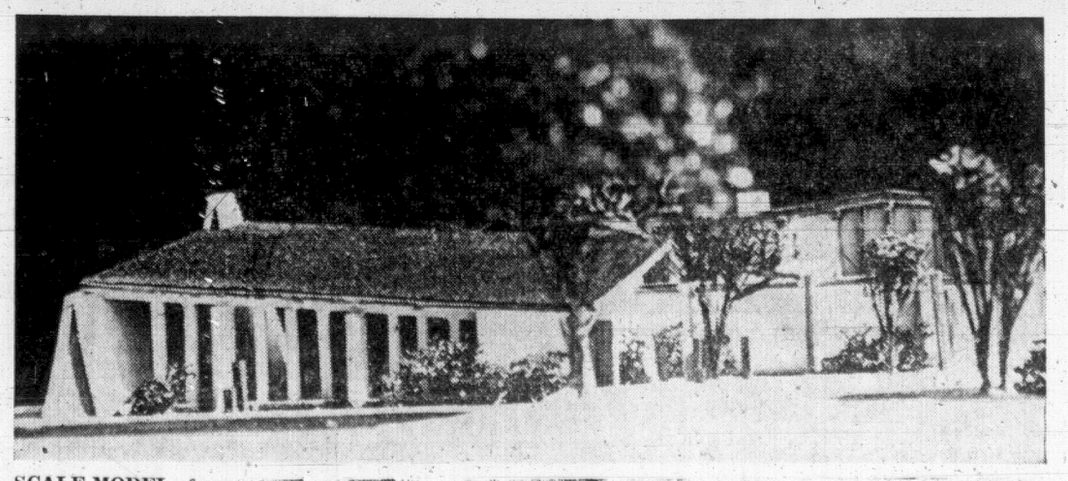

The narthex at the back of the sanctuary has been planned so that it can be used for small group meetings. The main part of the sanctuary itself will have a feeling of space due to the long upward slope of the ceiling to the chancel end.

VOICES TO BLEND

The choir will be seated beside the congregation and at right angles to it, so that the voices of the two groups will blend as one chorus.

The baptismal font, communion table and pulpit will be manufactured by the contractor from Japanese cherry plywood and solid stock. The pews also will be manufactured by the contractor.

"We hope to hold services in the new sanctuary early in the new year," a church spokesman said.

SCALE MODEL of new sanctuary for Cadboro Bay United Church, to be built at a cost of $49,185 by R. J. Hunter Construction Co. The architect is Alan J. Hodgson of Victoria.

HOW WE IGNORE OUR OLD FOLKS

Honor Thy Pioneers . . . As Long as They Can Pay

By PETE LOUDON

The care and feeding of elderly persons in the capital region of Greater Victoria should be held up as an example to the rest of Canada.

A bad example.

At best it's a case of community indifference. At worst it's a scandal that's growing worse each day.

That's not a blanket condemnation of private hospitals and boarding homes in this area. Within the confines of the rules they work under, most of them claim to be doing the best they can.

Depending upon the financial resources of the patient, excellent care is available, often from dedicated people. And the days of the "snake pit" homes for the elderly are largely in the past.

The scandal lies in the fact that large numbers of elderly patients can't afford the system we've created for their accommodation.

The nub of the problem is that medical science makes people live longer today. But society hasn't been able to cope with the problem of their care.

That's the studied opinion not only of the writer but of many social workers, hospital officials and a large and pathetically helpless group of the more than 2,000 residents of our homes and hospitals for the aged.

Don't Approach the Cost of Care

What kind of mess are we in?

We give our destitute aged a federal pension of $105 at a time when boarding home operators claim they can't give good care for less than $150.

And about 30 per cent of boarding home residents here are in this category. Result is that boarding homes don't want them. Operators, as a group, accept only about five out of 25 to 35 applications each month.

When these people, who have only their pensions, require private hospital care (when they are bed cases), we augment their pension, making $230 available to the private hospital operator.

But the operators say they can't give adequate care for less than $270. (Fifty-six per cent of their present patients are now on the welfare scale.) So they discourage new admissions from welfare—often refuse them.

As a result, at time of writing, there are 50 such cases in the acute general hospitals, Royal Jubilee and St. Joseph's.

The province is paying $30 a day for their care. They are ready to go back to private hospitals where it costs only $9 for the simpler day care they now require. But no private hospital wants them.

None of us likes to think about getting old.

And that's one of the reasons society has closed its eyes to the problems facing destitute elderly persons in Greater Victoria.

As a result, although Victoria has a larger percentage of elderly residents than any other Canadian city, we rank much lower in the care we offer them.

A special Times series, by reporter Pete Loudon, denounces the current situation here as a black eye for the capital region.

Why are invalid oldsters unable to get adequate care in their final years? Where are the weaknesses in our system? Who is to blame?

The five-part series will examine these questions and others.

Six of 21 Found Care Available

In Victoria during one recent month the city welfare office had 21 applications for private hospital beds. But only six applicants were placed. Patients with money, however, can almost always find a bed.

The social worker in charge of placements for Victoria, Mrs. Muriel Leith, says:

"If you gave me a new 100-bed hospital for elderly welfare patients, I'd fill it in two days."

People who should be in private hospital beds are left in boarding homes where care is minimal. Or they take up beds in acute hospitals geared to treat the more seriously ill.

Waiting lists of people who should be in acute hospitals are already outrageously long.

People who should be in boarding homes—those who are not bed cases but who require to be fed and given medication and gentle assistance with their personal care, are left in their homes or in cheap hotel rooms.

Many of them wither away there despite the efforts of Victorian Order of Nurses or Red Cross Homemakers.

Some of the lucky ones end up on B.C. Hospital Insurance extended care units.

There are about 300 beds in non-profit hospitals for the elderly in the capital region, under BCHIS jurisdiction. Care costs the patient $1 per day.

BCHIS admits the need is for 600 beds. There's a four to

RENE LEVESQUE
. . . charges "fix"

Levesque Rebuffed By Grits

By DAVE BAZAY

QUEBEC (CP)— Quebec's Liberal party Friday night virtually rejected separatism and chose to fight for a stronger status for Quebec within federalism.

The decision came in the form of a unanimous vote of confidence for Liberal Leader Jean Lesage at the opening of the annual meeting of the Quebec Liberal Federation.

Mr. Lesage made an opening address telling Liberals their choice at this meeting is between his form of federalism and Rene Levesque's form of separatism.

At the request of Eric Kierans, federation president, more than 600 delegates at the opening session conducted a formal vote of confidence endorsing Mr. Lesage's views.

The Liberal leader said he would resign from the party without delay if it accepts Mr. Levesque's proposal for a separate sovereign state of Quebec.

LEFT MEETING

Mr. Levesque, former minister of resources and welfare, walked away from the meeting on the verge of resignation. He charged that the meeting is "fixed" but did not elaborate.

Mr. Levesque accused Mr. Kierans of "crushing without discussion any point of view other than his own."

The strong anti-separatist atmosphere of the opening session established the impression of a steam-rolling drive to purge the party of separatists.

Mr. Lesage said he will personally defend a resolution by the federation's constitutional committee advocating particular status for Quebec and a new Canadian constitution.

The resolution rejects "separatism in all its forms."

Mr. Lesage said:

"If the option I am in favor of is not accepted and the other is then I will act according to the rules of democracy and resign without delay."

He said the choice is between separatism and federalism and "those who do not want to rally around the majority without reserve will have no choice but to leave the party."

Asked if he could rally around the federalism resolution "without reserve," Mr. Levesque said: "No."

Mr. Levesque immediately

Hong Kong Bombings Take Toll

Times News Services

HONG KONG — A mob of 30 Chinese today kidnapped a British police inspector following a border dispute here.

The attack climaxed a bomb-tossing spree by Communist terrorists overnight that killed two persons and wounded 33.

The police officer's name was not released.

Anti-British terrorists were reported busy planting bombs throughout the Hong Kong island and across the harbor channel.

They hurled two or three bombs into a crowd at the entrance of a Chinese fish and vegetable market in teeming Wanchai district on the island.

The wounded included four children, four men shoppers and two members of a police demolition team lured by a fake bomb call.

Two other rooftop bombing attacks injured eight more in Wanchai, at the entrance to a government clinic and in front of a post office.

Another bomb trap wounded a police inspector and a police constable on the main road between Kai Tak Airport and the posh tourist hotels in downtown Kowloon.

190 REPORTS RECEIVED

More than 190 reports of real and false bombs were received Friday.

A policeman was killed when Chinese terrorists hurled bombs at him as he investigated a dummy bomb, and an 18-year-old Chinese youth was fatally injured by a bomb thrown at police near him.

Authorities offered $17,500 in rewards for information leading to the arrest of the killers.

The deaths brought to 41 the number killed since May 11, when local Communists began inciting riots, labor strikes and terrorism in a campaign to weaken British authority over the colony on China's southern border.

Following a period of relative quiet, terrorists began planting bombs on a large scale Wednesday after police shot and killed a Chinese man in a crowd watching illegal Communist fireworks last Sunday, Communist China's national day. The colony has had an average of 50 bomb reports a day since then.

Ontario Man and Girl Charged in Bank Job

NIXON

NIXON UNHURT IN PLANE FIRE

CAMP BORDEN, Ont. (CP) —A small charter aircraft carrying Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and his wife caught fire just before safely landing today.

Pilot W. J. Clarke said the fire resulted from a broken left-hand propeller seal which caused a serious oil leak.

Fire engines raced onto the tarmac as the Beach-18, twin-engine plane touched down with smoke pouring from the motor.

A 22-year-old unemployed painter from Ontario was charged in magistrate's court today with armed robbery.

Carl Raymond, suite 3, 2211 Ida, was arrested Friday about three hours after the Bank of Montreal at Fort and Richmond was robbed of $1,655.

A 16-year-old girl, arrested later in the afternoon, was charged with committing a juvenile delinquency—to wit, armed robbery, and appeared today in juvenile court. She was remanded to Monday.

Raymond was remanded to Thursday without plea or election until he can apply for legal aid.

When asked if he wanted to arrange bail, he told Magistrate Ostler "I have no one to put up bail."

GUN SEIZED

Police seized a sawed-off shotgun and a paper shopping bag containing the loot.

A box containing shells was located later.

Bank officials originally thought over $2,600 was missing, but a thorough check revealed $1,655, the same amount contained in the shopping bag, was the amount stolen.

Raymond came here with his wife from London, Ontario, two months ago. They drove out in a car which they later sold for junk.

HID UNDER HOUSE

Police arrested Raymond about 2 p.m. Friday in a basement crawl space of his apartment house.

The arrest came after a man had been chased to a nearby intersection by two bank employees and a customer.

A bystander reported seeing a man run into the apartment house.

Gunfire Exchanged Over River Jordan

TEL AVIV (Reuters)—Israeli and Jordanian forces exchanged fire for 45 minutes today, shelling each other's positions across the River Jordan about 15 miles south of the Sea of Galilee.

Both sides blamed the other for starting the shooting.

An Israeli Army spokesman said the fighting broke out when Jordanian forces opened fire from the east bank on Israeli troops near the Sheikh Husein Bridge.

Jordanian artillery joined in while Israeli tanks on the river's west bank fired at Jordanian positions, the spokesman said.

One Israeli soldier was wounded in the shelling, the spokesman said.

THREE SHOT DEAD AS MUSIC BLARES

NEWARK, N.J. (AP)—The bodies of three men, two of whom were brothers, were found today shot in the head in a tavern here.

Police said the shootings occurred about 6 a.m. as a juke box blared and after a fierce struggle in the Club 309. Bar stools were found knocked over and broken glass was strewn on the bar.

Detectives identified the dead as Peter Marttelo, 36, part owner of the tavern, and Patsy Colucci, 35, and his brother, Nicholas, 41.

MONTREAL (CP)—Police in suburban St. Hubert are pressing the search for four bandits who Friday held up a branch of the Bank of Montreal at the Canadian Forces Base and escaped with loot now estimated at $53,000.

Subway Resumes Expo Service

MONTREAL (CP) — Subway service to Expo 67 was resumed today in the bitter 24-day Montreal transit strike, but no buses were rolling along city streets.

The three-mile subway line from downtown Montreal to the south shore of the St. Lawrence River via Expo's St. Helen's Island began carrying passengers at 8:30 p.m. Friday.

It was the first sign today of continuation of a possible break in the strike by workers who returned to their jobs Friday in defiance of union leaders.

About 35 buses started moving on downtown streets late Friday and the subway to Expo operated for a few hours, but most of the 6,000 striking Montreal Transportation Commission employees prolonged their refusal to obey court injunction ordering them back to work.

The buses, serviced and manned by strikers apparently abiding by the terms of the injunctions calling for a resumption of work for at least 80 days, were the first to roll in the city since the strike began Sept. 21.

Police and some angry strikers milled around various MTC depots early today, watching for any appearance of buses from garages.

There were a few early scuffles and three men were taken into a police paddy wagon. But generally, the scene was reported quiet.

BUSES PELTED

The surprise return of limited bus operation Friday sparked angry clashes between the returning drivers and strikers. Eggs and tomatoes were hurled at some buses, and strikers yelled "scab" at the drivers.

Union leaders late Friday called on strikers to picket all MTC garages and depots in the city today.

By TED GASKELL

A slightly under-strength army of canvassers moves into the residential districts Monday as the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal starts its household canvass.

Its objective is $164,200, the householders' share of the $600,000 target set this year by United Appeal to service its 24 agencies.

Mrs. Shirley Baker, chairman of the residential division, said there will be about 1,900 canvassers in the field throughout the Greater Victoria area but 2,000 are needed immediately. She expects more will be required before the campaign ends.

RED CROSS HELP

Victoria's Red Cross chapter, now a partner in the United Appeal, is lending its organizational knowledge and experience to the canvass and many Red Cross canvassers are on the team.

Greater Victoria has an objective of $92,000; Central Saanich, $5,200, and Sidney-North Saanich, $9,000. Completing the $164,000 total is $58,000, the advanced gifts division share which has more than $40,000 pledged, but not received.

Mrs. Baker said that the need for canvassers in the Langford area is great. Another problem is the high-rise apartments but it is hoped that people living in apartments where canvassing is not permitted will send in their donations.

On Wednesday 120 University of Victoria students will conduct a one-night blitz in that area to raise funds for the appeal.

BUSINESS CANVASS

G. F. Auchinleck, campaign chairman, said "the business canvass is starting to bring in funds but it is obvious that we have an uphill fight on our hands.

"The residential canvass is more important than ever. We must get every dollar we can if we are to reach the target and we hope, with the Red Cross as a partner, we can do it."

The residential campaign officially opens at midnight Sunday following a canvassers' rally and film showing at the Odeon at 8:30.
